5. Thou shalt have all mail ready upon the arrival of the carrier, for delay cripples the whole service.

6. Thou shalt address each letter or package plainly, and upon the upper left-hand corner place thy name and address; for, verily I say unto thee, the pieces of mail lost through neglect in addressing are numbered as the sands of the sea.

7. Blessed are they who insure their packages and register important letters, for by so doing loss is impossible, saith the Postmaster General.

8. Thou shalt wrap all packages securely. Verily, verily I say unto you, many valuable articles are lost through careless wrapping and few there be who recover them, saith our Postmaster General.

9. Blessed are they who open a road through the snow for the carrier, for they shall have their daily mail. And if thou canst not travel the road for a mile or two, how can the carrier travel it for thirty? Blessed are they also who drag the roads as soon as possible after a rain, for thus only can they do the will of our boss who is in Washington.

10. Blessed are they who, when mistakes are made, give the carrier the benefit of the doubt, for I say unto you that many perplexing difficulties are met by the carrier each day, and those who are slow to anger and of generous spirit shall be called great.

ALL OUT OF SORTS?

So Was This Charlevoix Woman Who Tells Her Experience.

All too often women accept their pains and aches as natural to their sex. They fail to realize that weak kidneys are often to blame for that backache, those headaches, dizzy spells and that tired, depressed feeling. Thousands have found new health and strength by helping the weakened kidneys with Doan's Pills—a stimulant diuretic. This Charlevoix case is one of many:

Mrs. Thos. Taylor, 101 Wood St., says: "I suffered with a dull, nagging ache through the small of my back, which hurt me so I could hardly stoop or straighten. I began to feel nervous and had a worn out feeling. I had headaches and dizzy spells and my kidneys acted too often. After using Doan's Pills, from Metcalf's Drug Store, I was rid of the trouble."

Price 60c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Pills—the same that Mrs. Taylor had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.

How To Play Basketball
by Ed. Mather
University of Michigan Basketball Coach

No. 1.

Fundamentals

Basketball is one of the fastest competitive games and one of the most strenuous. It calls into action every muscle and its constantly shifting fortunes demand men who think quickly and act quickly. The combination of physical and mental speed we call the "basketball instinct." This is the first qualification of a good player.

Before considering the strategy of the game, it is necessary to consider a number of fundamentals. Training in these fundamentals until they become second-nature is the groundwork in the development of a good basketball team.

First let us consider passing the ball. The ball should never be passed so that it will be received head high. Why?—because the receiver will involuntarily duck, because he will have to raise his arms thus cutting off his vision and because whatever foot-work he might have started preparatory to receiving the ball will be interfered with.

The next "don't" has to do with passing the ball too low. Passing the ball low throws the receiver off his balance.

The proper place to direct the ball in passing is between the shoulders and the waist, that is, with players of average stature. However, if the receiver is extraordinarily tall, high passes may safely be used.

The act of catching the ball is likewise very important. What are the reasons for fumbling? Rigidity of hands is one. There should be a distinct "give" the instant the ball touches the hands, just as in catching a baseball. Drawing in the hands absorbs the impetus of the ball and makes it easier to hang on to.

Another common fault is taking the eyes off the ball as it comes near so as to watch the tactics of the opponent. Keep your eyes on the ball—this fundamental rule is as important in basketball as in football or baseball or in any other game played with a ball.

Another cause of fumbling is improper use of hands and fingers. The hands should be placed "funnel shape" with fingers outspread and not too far apart. There should be a slight "give" the instant the ball touches the hands.

Don't pass the ball too hard. Don't pass to a player standing still. Why? Because he is the hardest man to judge. The passer never knows what his next move will be and the instant he passes the ball, the man may start off in the very opposite direction to that anticipated. In cases like his, the passer gets the blame, though the player a fault is the receiver.

Therefore it is better to pass to a moving player. There is less chance for interception if the ball is passed to a player breaking toward the passer than in any other style of passing.

(This is one of a series of talks on basketball taken from lectures in the four-year course in physical education at the University of Michigan. The next will appear in an early issue.)

DRAINAGE FIGHT NOT YET AT END

RECENT CLEVELAND CONFERENCE GOT US NOWHERE

Compensating Works to Offset Rainfall Deficiency Now Proposed As Solution

That Attorney General Andrew B. Dougherty was not far out of the way when he warned the people of Michigan to be on their guard in the matter of the Chicago drainage canal steal—that the fight was not yet over, is borne out by the situation disclosed in the following article which appeared in a recent issue of the Michigan Manufacturer and Financial Record:

"The recent conference of the representatives of Great Lakes harbor cities at Cleveland, Ohio, has come and gone. Primarily it was intended to arrive at some sane conclusions about the restoration of deeper channels in our inland waters and especially the capacity of ports, which has been diminished by the lowering of the lake levels. The whole conference turned into a row over the Chicago diversion of water for its drainage canal and allied projects with the result that some very "fly" fellows, who are opposed to the development of the Great-Lakes-to-the-Sea Waterway, have done as fine a stroke of business for themselves as if they had planned the conference in their own interest and had secured the aid of the harbor city representatives to make their argument.

The outstanding result of the conference is that a bushel of evidence, such as it is, has been provided that the Great Lakes-to-the-Sea Waterway cannot become a fact until the Chicago diversion is stopped. This evidence has come from scores of people who have heretofore been earnest and representative proponents of the waterway to the sea and who have stampeded themselves or permitted the New York opponents of the waterway to stampede them. There is plenty of evidence now, as the result of the harbor conference over lake levels, that there is no use forwarding the St. Lawrence waterway project until Chicago is stopped from diverting any water at all from the Great Lakes supply. Of course that day will never come.

Despite the great to-do made about the supreme court's decision barring Chicago from taking 10,000 cubic feet a second from Lake Michigan's waters, what the court has decided is simply this: That as to 4,167 cubic feet of water per second the city of Chicago has the legal right to divert it, under permits from the secretary of war; and as to the rest it has no legal permit, but that such a diversion can become legal if the secretary of war says so. That is a long ways from victory that prevents Chicago from taking any water at all.

As a matter of fact, Chicago's diversion is not the primary reason for the falling of the lake levels. It may be a contributing reason, and it may be that the change in climatic conditions is such that Chicago's permit ought to be revised. But the real reason, known to army engineers and to scientific people generally, is that the Great Lakes, particularly Superior and Michigan, are getting less water from rainfall by about 20,000 cubic feet a second than used to be the case. So that Chicago's diversion does not begin to account for the shortage and the consequent lowering of lake levels. The army engineers, whose business it is to maintain our inland facilities of navigation, have long been suggesting controlling works to remedy this condition. These controlling works have the effect of diverting the run-off of the lake waters into the travelled channels, reserving the water now wasted through the shallower reaches. They would also have the effect of retaining so much of the volume of water not required for navigation back of the new barriers, thereby creating conservation areas the levels of which would gradually be elevated.

This operation may require the denial to Chicago of some of its present diversion. But, diversion or not, compensating works will be the final solution of the problem. They will come, when all the territory in interest agrees as to methods and presents a united showing of its necessities to the national congress.

Meantime the rumpus raised at Cleveland recently has only set the stage for delay of the St. Lawrence

SEARS-ROEBUCK'L GET YOU IF YOU DON'T LOOK OUT

This little item ought to have especial interest for all those wiseacres who don't believe that advertising pays. Read it over and then ask yourself if there is any reason why this might not happen in Charlevoix:

"It is announced that Norris City, Ill., will soon be without a newspaper.The merchants of that city have been sleeping for some time, paying no attention to advertising and seemingly content to let Sears-Roebuck have the business. This, quite naturally, cut into the revenue of the publisher and contributed largely to the deadness of the town." So, the article continues, the publisher is leaving for "greener pastures." The writer goes on to say: "A newspaper in a town is just as important to that community as the schools and churches and to let it die, compel it to accept outside advertising or move away for lack of support is the worst advertising a town can receive."

HOUND SPENDS WEEK IN CISTERN BOTTOM

Finally Rescued and Returned to His Owner

Percy Edwards of South Bridge streets owns a hound dog, which disappeared some time ago. Last week, Harry Webster, who keeps the Pere Marquette swing bridge, heard a hound crying somewhere up on the Chicago Club reservation.

He investigated and found Percy's dog down at the bottom of an old cistern under one of the porches of the club house. The unfortunate animal had been there for about a week, as far as could be estimated, and was pretty thin and peaked when found. Webster, not knowing to whom the dog belonged, took him to his own home and fed him up. A few days later, he took the dog down on Round Lake, where he was recognized by Pearl Johnson as belonging to Edwards. He was soon restored to his master, a much tickled and somewhat wiser canine.

KEMP COMES TO US MARCH 13TH

HEAR THE FAMOUS "MILLION DOLLAR LAUGH"

Besides Being a Natural Humorist, Redpath Entertainer is Great Impersonator

Those who had the pleaaure of hearing Ralph Bingham at the Palace Theatre on February 2nd and of listening to the musical numbers so delightfully performed by himself and Mrs. Bingham, are eagerly looking forward to the fifth and last number of the lecture course which comes to us on March 13th in the person of Everett Kemp, "The Man with the Million Dollar Laugh," and which promises to be equally as good.

Mr. Kemp is an entertainer par excellence. His humorous interpretations have won for him the sobriquet or nickname above written. His story of "The Man with the Bone Colored Wiskers" is famous the country over. In more serious vein, he has interpreted to countless audiences some of the standard pieces of literature.

He will present to Lyceum audiences this season a new program, consisting of miscellaneous selections replete with the famous Kemp brand of wholesome merriment and good clean fun and also carrying just the right proportion of numbers of a more serious character.

Instead of the miscellaneous program, Mr. Kemp will give, if committees prefer, a rendition of anyone of the following great favorites: "That Printer of Udell's," by Harold Bell Wright; "Sevenoaks," by J. G. Holland; "The Music Master," by Charles Klein, or "If I Were King," by Justin McCarthy. Much of Mr. Kemp's splendid reputation was built as a result of his masterly rendition of plays and books.

Edward Amherst Ott, famous Chautauqua lecturer says of his colleague: "Everett Kemp, my laughing friend is a specialist—not by profession but by inherent character qualities. He sees life as a living opportunity for happiness. The real specialists can't help being specialists."

Other comments on Mr. Kemp from recognized authorities are as follows:

"Mr. Kemp is a wonderful man with a wonderful message. It was indeed powerful and our people were more than pleased with it." Central Temple House, Lansing, Mich.

"Few readers have the power of visualizing the printed words so sharply as to derive the impression which this dramatic reader produces by an unusual versatility in his impersonations of characters." Wichita (Kas.) Eagle.

"'Sevenonks,' the fascinating tale of rural life by J. G. Holland, as interpreted by Everett Kemp, was well received and appreciated* The twenty odd characters in the story were impersonated with ease by Mr. Kemp and he did full justice to each."—Daily Herald, Lithbridge, Can.

"Everett Kemp, better known as 'The Man with the Million Dollar Laugh,' certainly proved to all who heard him that he undoubtedly is that man."—St. Bede College, Peru, Ill.

MICHIGAN BECOMING "LAND POOR"

REMEDIAL LEGISLATION NEEDED TO STEM REVERSION

Unproductiveness of Cut-Over Lands Leads to Their Abandonment —Fire Patrol Needed

According to an Associated Press dispatch appearing in a recent issue of the Menominee Herald-Leader, the state of Michigan is getting "land poor" on tax titles.

Remedial legislation is needed to stem the steadily increasing return to the state of waste lands through forfeited titles, and to relieve the state's already heavy burden of tax free lands, in the opinion of state officials and legislators who now are framing a bill to effect a cure of state's waste land ills.

Figures recently made public which indicate that idle and unproductive land to the extent of more than five million acres now is delinquent in taxes, and that forest fires, which in 1923 swept the timber lands for an approximate loss of $150,000, are rendering more land valueless, tend to demonstrate the seriousness of the state's cut-over land problem, leaders point out.

The waste land hardship is first felt in the townships or counties in which the lands lie, Senator William J. Pearson, a leader in the movement to effect remedial legislation, states. The county and township heavily burdened with taxes which are paying the costs of new schools, roads and maintenance of public utilities feel keenly the loss of taxable lands, Senator Pearson said.

The unproductiveness of the cut-over lands leads to their abandonment with the burden of reforestation turned over to the state, while tax collection stops, he said. The lure of high wages in the cities leads young men to factories and away from these great tracts of barren fields, stripped of their value by lumber companies.

In the boom days, it is declared, settlers came into the region establishing farms and building schools. Moderate taxes made the task of gaining a livelihood comparatively easy, but with the release of great tracts to the field of non-taxable, non-productive idleness the county and township burdens fell heavily and farms were abandoned.

The question of what shall be done to keep these lands in the hands of taxpayers and what shall be done to keep these lands productive is a puzzling one, Senator Pearson admits. That the land in time, without replanting, will reforest itself and become a valuable asset to the state is his belief, but how to carry these lands tax free during that period is the problem.

Letters are received daily from lumbermen and others interested in the problem suggesting solutions, and occasionally in the same batch of mail there is received a letter offering large tracts of cut-over land to the state for "resort purposes" at a large figure.

Various plans are suggested to lighten the burden of those owning lands in cut-over regions. It is suggested that the state take a first lien on cut-over land, bearing a percentage of the taxes and receiving their payment at the time when second growth timber is cut.

The great need of the moment, Senator Pearson believes, is the maintenance of an entirely efficient and effective fire patrol to prevent the costly forest fires which yearly adds more land to the waste category and to the delinquent tax list.

RED AND WHITE DEFEAT HARBOR

HARD FOUGHT HOME GAME ENDS IN 21-18 SCORE

Charlevoix Now Only Undefeated Basketball Team in the North Country

Playing the best basketball that has been seen on the local court this season, Charlevoix high school downed Harbor Springs last Friday evening by the score of 21 to 18, in a fast and hard-fought game.

The Red and White displayed a dashing defense that the heavier Harbor team crushed, at first, without much trouble but, as the game wore on, the Alldread crew displayed a gathering speed and traveled for a convincing victory.

"Chuck" Dagwell, Charlevoix's big, blonde center, drew first blood for the Red and White in the second quarter when he sunk two field goals and the half ended, Harbor Springs, 5; Charlevoix, 4.

Opening the second half with a sweep that almost took the visitors off their feet, the locals soon forged into the lead and, by fighting desperately, held it until the final whistle.

Dagwell was the bright light of the locals, getting four field baskets and three fouls. Hallett and Harrington both caged a field goal, the former being closely guarded throughout the game. The defense work of Captain Glasgow and Jones again featured.

Harbor came with a clean slate, having won all their former games, including Traverse City. Charlevoix, now the only undefeated team in the north, will play the fast Soo outfit at Hooker's garage in the last big home game of the season.

The line-up for the Harbor game was as follows:

Harbor		C. H. S.
Connell	F.	Harrington
Connell	F.	Hallett
Jones (Capt.)	C.	Dagwell
Woodruff	G.	Jones
Baker	G.	Glasgow, C.

Substitution: C. H. S.—Brown for Harrington.

SAW INFLICTS MORTAL WOUND

EFFORTS TO SAVE JAMES MEGGISON PROVE FUTILE

Prominent Marion Township Farmer Dies Soon After Arrival At Hospital

James E. Meggison, prominent farmer of Marion township, died late yesterday afternoon at the Charlevoix Hospital, to which he had been rushed, following a terrible accident which occurred at the farm home of his brother, George Meggison, while he was helping to buzz some firewood.

A circular saw driven by a gasoline engine was being employed in the work. When they had finished their cut the belt was thrown off and Ernest Ecklund and Mr. Meggison started to straighten it out before rolling it up. Forgetting the saw, which was still revolving rapidly from its own momentum behind him, Meggison backed into its edge. The sharp steel teeth tore a deep gash in his thigh to the bone, from hip to knee, severing the large femoral artery.

Someone with ready presence of mind grabbed a piece of wire and formed a first aid tourniquet or bandage to stop the flow of blood and a team was made ready to take him to town. On arriving at the hospital, the temporary tourniquet had to be removed to get at the wound but, before his shattered nervous system could be rallied, the patient's pulse sank rapidly and he passed away a few minutes afterward. Mrs. Meggison, who was at her home, did not learn of the accident until after her husband's death.

The deceased is survived by his widow, two sons, Elmer of Flint, and Byron of Detroit; four daughters, Carrie, a student at Ypsilanti State Normal and Erma, Bernice and Gladys at home; three brothers, George of Ironton, Will of near East Jordan and the Hon. Thomas E. Meggison, now of Traverse City, and three sisters, Grace and Ella Meggison who are teaching in Flint and Mrs. Anna Ward of that city, formerly a resident of Charlevoix. Plans for the funeral have not yet been definitely decided.

COASTERS WITNESS PECULIAR ACCIDENT

Miss Hooker, Struck by Sled, Hurled High in Air

Miss Dorothy Hooker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Hooker of this city, was the victim of what might have proved a fatal accident.

She was on the Bridge street hill coasting last Wednesday night and while walking up after a slide in some way got onto the sled track and was struck by a big loaded bobsled, steered by W. G. Bellinger, who had no time to avoid the accident.

Miss Hooker was struck across the legs just below the knee and thrown high in the air, turning a complete somersault over the bob-sled. Bystanders picked her up and carried her to the Central Drug store where it was found that, miraculously, no bones were broken and shortly afterwards, being unable to walk, she was taken to her home on a sled.

Mr. Bellinger, who was sitting in front of his passengers on the sled, received the full force of the blow, which caused him to bleed at the nose for some time. It is just sheer luck that both escaped more serious injury, as the sled was traveling at least twenty miles an hour at the time.

PROPOSED RATES WILL WORK HARM TO RURAL PRESS

During the course of the recent postal hearing in Washington the Saturday Evening Post and the Ladies' Home Journal submitted figures showing that the government enjoyed an annual profit of over $700,000 in the transportation of these two magazines and it was charged that the proposed rates for second-class mail matter would result in great hardship to rural papers. It was also shown at the hearing that the railroads carried a man weighing 150 pounds thirty miles for $1.50 whereas the newspapers would have to pay from $3 to $5 for the same weight of mail. It may be that much of the trouble lies in the rates paid by the postoffice to the railroads.

METHODIST CHURCH

Sunday, February 15th

Text, "Who then is willing to consecrate his service this day unto Jehovnh?" Whoever may chance to read this notice if not attending church elsewhere is cordially invited to attend our meetings. If anyone lacks a church house come thou with us. You will do us good and we may be able to minister unto you.

12 o'clock. Bravo! Such a fine school last Sunday, 233 in attendance and that with the sidewalks icy and overflowing with water. But we can yet increase. A wonderful lesson this week, "Jesus in Gethsemane." Our Lord's greatest struggle for the sins of the people is manifest in this lesson. We furnish lesson leaves and quarterlies, "Targets" for the boys and "Portals" for the girls and "Classmates" for all senior scholars. Turn out to Sunday school and bring all the family. Our motto is: "Every member of every family in some part of our Sundny school."

3:00 p. m. Junior League. Miss Anna Metcalf has been appointed to nssist Mrs. Poole in this work. This is the meeting where the Catechism is learned and recited. It is the follow-up work after primary teachings.

6:00 p. m. Epworth League. We just lacked one of having three score in league last Sunday. There were some new fnces and we missed some who hnve been attending. The lesson for this week considers "America and China's Revolution." This study of China ought to challenge the best in our christianity.

7:00 p. m. evening worship. The character sketch of Nicodemus will be given. In Jesus' conversation with this man we get a passage of scripture which is called the key text of the new testament. Read it—John 3-16.

This Thursdny at 2:30 p. m., the L. L. & S. C. will meet with Mrs. Wm. Kibbe on Coast Guard street. Mrs. Ernest Kibbe is hostess.

Prayer meeting Thursday at 7:30 o'clock in the church. Reads Acts 27. Think of the everlasting words of Paul: "I believe God."

Each-Wednesday at 7 o'clock the young people's prayer meeting. Some splendid results are already seen.

As the spring comes on one begins to think of nature's growth. And as the years come and go we are want to see the need of spiritual growth. This one has rightly expressed it:

Thou, O man of God, follow after righteousness, godliness, faith, love, patience, meekness. 1 Tim. vi. 11.

A religious leader, in writing of the present "muddled" world condition, says: "It started when people began sending the children to church and Sundny school instead of taking them." He concludes: "People never get permanently fed with religion any more than they get permanently fed physically. We need a renewal of nourishment all our lives. Don't send the children; take them! And the world will settle down to such a calm progessiveness as it never knew before."

WILLIAM PENN'S MISTAKE

While Chicago, traditionally most hustling of cities, talks of building two-level streets, Philadelphia, traditionally sleepiest of cities, goes ahead and does it. The first two-story thoroughfare in America will soon be found in the heart of the old Quaker City.

And it is high time. William Penn, a traffic man remarks, meant well when he laid out a city of streets and roadways 18 to 26 feet wide, but he lacked vision. For that, Penn may be pardoned, because there was little indication in his day of the huge population and enormous traffic destined to come eventually in American cities. His successors now find themselves obliged to build additional thoroughfares underground and overhead, make more use of river ferries to relieve land routes, and look eagerly to the air itself for further relief in the future. Hundreds of millions will be spent for the purpose.

Every other growing city in America ought to benefit by Philadelphia's plight. For any well-situated city on this continent may conceivably be another Philadelphia some day. And the problem is far easier to the present-day engineer and city-builder than it was to William Penn. For the same traffic problem that is clogging and choking the big cities is found, only in smaller degree, in every American community.

The indications of future needs are plain as the nose on a man's face, and the main factors involved, which are engineering factors, are the same everywhere. It is merely a matter of thinking along the lines of present trend of population and present traffic development and making use of the knowledge now available to prepare for the future. It can be done now for thousands of dollars, where delay will cost millions.

BEAUTIFUL BUILDINGS

The government is going to spend $150,000,000 beautifying the city of Washington in the next six years. There will be magnificent bridges, public buildings and memorials constructed. This is only the beginning of a plan to fulfill the original design for the American capital, and make it the most beautiful city in the world.

The thing will be done. And it is worth while, in spite of the pinch of taxes and the need of economy in public life. It will be approved by most Americans, because they are proud of their capital and want to see it distinguished for beauty. The country is rich and can afford whatever it judges desirable.

This project, too, is in the natural trend of American development. Our present artistic expression runs markedly to architecture. We are producing an army of gifted architects. Their work show particularly in public buildings and homes, two departments of construction in which America already leads the world.

In half a century or so, with fine structures of both types replacing the ugly and imitative buildings of the past, and supplemented by more artistic churches, hotels, office buildings and factories, American cities all over the land should become beautiful and impressive beyond any dreams of the past.

By the year 2,000 there should be a dozen cities in the United States more beautiful than ancient Athens and grander than ancient Rome. And the rural sections should be dotted with homes incomparably finer than any the world has yet seen.

AT THE MOVIES

"The Enemy Sex," James Cruze's latest production for Paramount which features Betty Compson, has one of the strongest casts which has ever been directed by the man who made "The Covered Wagon."

Betty Compson's role of "Dodo" Baxter brings together an actress and a part remarkably well suited to each other. "Dodo" Baxter is a girl who goes to New York armed with beauty and wit. She disturbs the equanimity of New York's smart set and teaches a number of the male members that money does not buy everything. The part is ideally suited to Betty Compson. Contrasting with the tragic character she portrayed in her recent Joseph Henabery production for Paramount, "The Stranger," the role she plays in "The Enemy Sex" is all merriment and fire. This picture will be shown at the Palace Theater on Wednesday, February 18th.

The topography of Los Angeles and vicinity, for the first time in film history, failed to offer suitable locations for a film production. Scouts sent out by Jack Coogan, senior, to "spot" locations for Jackie's new Metro picture, "A Boy of Flanders," returned after weeks of exhaustive exploration which included practically every foot of California soil, but nowhere could they find country similar to that of Flanders.

The cities and countryside of the low, flat, Flemish variety provide the locale of Jackie's adaptation of Ouida's child classic, "A Dog of Flanders." At Palace Theatre Saturday and Sunday, February 14 and 15.

Telephone Meeting

Last Wednesday night and Thursday, a group of Bell Telephone company workers from northern Michigan met at Petoskey to discuss business of the last year and plans for the present year and to work out means of preventing industrial accidents in their industry. Those attending from Charlevoix were O. A. Solomon, Miss Marvn Couper and Earl Goss.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of our dear Daddie, who died two years ago, February 16th and our dear Sister, who was killed February 15th on her way to the bedside of her dying father:

"Gone, dear loved ones, gone forever,
"More and more we miss your smiling faces.
"But, you have left us to remember
"None on earth can take your places.

BACK LAME AND ACHY?

The Advice of This Charlevoix Resident Should Help You to Get Well

Do you suffer nagging backache? Feel dizzy, nervous and depressed?

Are the kidney secretions irregular; breaking your rest?

Likely your kidneys are at fault.

Weak kidneys give warning. You have backache; rheumatic twinges.

You feel weak, tired, all worn-out. Heed the warning. Don't delay!

Use Doan's Pills—a stimulant diuretic to the kidneys.

Your neighbors recommend Doan's.

Here is a Charlevoix case.

Mrs. Harry Webster, 214 E. Upright Ave., says: "My back was lame and sore and I suffered with a severe pain in my side and across my kidneys. My kidneys were sluggish and failed to act often enough. I surely felt all out of sorts and nothing helped me until I used Doan's Pills, from the Central Drug store. Doan's cured me and the cure has lasted."

THE WIRES ARE HOT AND IT'S NO WONDER

St. Valentine's Day Puts Unusual Strain on W. U.

According to Miss Olive Allen, manager of the local Western Union Telegraph office, history is repeating itself.

St. Valentine, a good many centuries ago, literally lost his head under the keen edge of a Roman axe for his Christian activities. Following St. Valentine, the modern youth, figuratively speaking, seems to be losing his head over the new fangled idea of telegraphing sweet nothings to his ladylove. Here are some of the messages sent last year:

"Thinkin' a little, wishin' a little,
"Far off and blue,
"Hopin' a little, sighin' a little,
"Lonesome for you."

"The world is large when weary leagues two loving hearts divide."

"Not from the whole wide world I chose thee;
"The wide, wide world could not enclose thee,
"For thou art the whole wide world to me."

"Will you be my Valentine? Answer by Western Union."

Beats all, don't it, brother?

A TRUE DICKENSIAN SPIRIT PREVAILED

At Annual Birthday Party Staged by Dickens Club

A true Dickensian spirit prevailed Saturday, February 7th, when the members of the Dickens Club of Charlevoix held their annual "birthday party" honoring the memory of the great English novelist and humorist, Charles Dickens.

Last year the members of this club partook of a true English meal, served in truly English style. This year the scene was changed. These same admirers of Dickens were to imagine themselves, accompanying their literary leader, in 1867 on his second visit to the United States, where they were served a sumptuous American meal in the elaborate American style. This took the form of a luncheon held at the home of Mrs. Marion Partridge on Petoskey avenue. Places were marked by dainty painted cards bearing the names of some of Dickens' famous characters. These proved to be the same characters represented at a "costume party" held by the Dickens Club, February 7, 1923.

Following the luncheon a one act play, "The One Thing Needful," from Dickens' "Hard Times," was very creditably given by those taking part, and greatly enjoyed by the other members of the club. The cast was represented by:

Mrs. Alice Miller as Mr. Boundcrby; Mrs. Mary A. Cooper as Mr. Thomas Gradgrind; Mrs. Sadie Faulkner as Mr. M'Choakumchild; Mrs. Blanche Wood as Bitzer, and Mrs. Enid Emrey as Sissy Jupe.

WEBSTER —MAN'S MAN

by Peter B. Kyne

Author of "Cappy Ricks," "The Valley of the Giants," Etc.

Copyright by Peter B. Kyne

The young man was speaking as they passed; his voice was rich, pleasant, vibrant with the earnestness of what he had to say: with a pretty little silver mounted walking stick he slashed at spears of grass alongside the path; the girl was crying a little. Neither of them had seen him, so he entered a path that led from them at right angles.

He had proceeded but a few feet along this trail when, through a break in the shrubbery ahead of him, he saw two men. Brief as was his glimpse of them, Webster instantly recognized the two Central Americans he had seen in the steamship ticket office two days previous.

They were not walking as walk two men abroad at this hour for a constitutional. Neither did they walk as walk men churchward bound. A slight, skulking air marked their progress, and caused Webster to wonderidly what they were stalking.

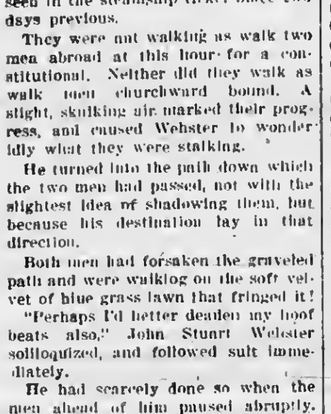
He turned into the path down which the two men had passed, not with the slightest idea of shadowing them, but because his destination lay in that direction.

Both men had forsaken the graveled path and were walking on the soft velvet of blue grass lawn that fringed it!

"Perhaps I'd better deaden my hoof beats also," John Stuart Webster soliloquized, and followed suit immediately.

He had scarcely done so when the men ahead of him paused abruptly. Webster did likewise, and responding —subconsciously, perhaps, to the remembrance of the menace in the glance of the man with the puckered eye—he stepped out of sight behind a broad oak tree. Through the trees and shrubbery he could still see the lovers, who had halted and evidently were about to part.

Webster saw the young man glance warily about; then, apparently satisfied there was none to spy upon them, he drew the girl gently toward him.



Drew the Girl Gently Toward Him.

She clung to him for nearly a minute, sobbing; then he raised her face tenderly, kissed her, pressed her from him, and walked swiftly away without looking back.

It was a sweet and rather touching little tableau; to John Stuart Webster, imaginative and possessed of a romantic streak in his nature, it was more than a tableau. It was a moving picture!

"I suppose her old man objects to the young fellow," he muttered to himself sympathetically, "and he can't come near the house. They've met here for the fond farewell, and now the young fellow's going out West to make his fortune, so he can come back and claim the girl. Huh! If he wants her, why the devil doesn't he take her? Hello! By Judas priest! Now I know what those two parsqueets are up to. One of them is the father of that girl. They've been spying on the lovers, and now they're going to corner the young fellow and shingle him for his nerve."

The girl had stood for a moment, gazing after her companion, before she turned with her handkerchief to her eyes, and continued on her way to the cathedral. Webster heard her sobbing as she stumbled blindly by, and he was distressed about her, for all the world loves a lover and John Stuart Webster was no exception to this universal rule.

"By George, this is pretty tough," he reflected. "That young fellow treated that girl with as much gentleness and courtesy as any gentleman should, and I'm for him and against this idea of corporal punishment. Don't you worry, Tillie, my dear. I'm going to horn into this game myself if it goes too far."

The two dusky skulkers ahead of him, having come to another cross-path, turned into it and came out on the main path in the rear of the young man. Webster noticed that the pair were still walking on the grass. He pailed gently along behind them.

The four were now rapidly approaching the old French market, and the steadily rising babel of voices speaking in French, Italian, Spanish, Creole patois and Choctaw, was sufficient to have drowned the slight noise of the pursuit, even had the young man's mind not been upon other things, and the interest of the two Central Americans centered upon their quarry, to the exclusion of any thought of possible interruption.

Webster felt instinctively that the two men would rush and make a concerted attack from the rear. He smiled.

"I'll just fool you two hombres a whole lot," he thought, and stooping, picked up a small stone. On the instant the two men, having approached within thirty feet of their quarry, made a rush for him.

Their charge was swift, but though it was, the little stone which John Stuart Webster hurled was swifter. It struck the young man fairly between the shoulderblades with a force sufficient to bring him out of his sentimental reverie with a jerk, as it were. He whirled, saw the danger that threatened him, and—sprang to meet it.

"Bravo!" yelled Webster, and ran to his aid, for he had seen now that it was to be knife work. Tragedy instead of melodrama.

The man with the puckered eye closed in with such eagerness it was apparent to Webster that here was work to his liking. The young man raised his light cane, but Pucker-eye did not hesitate. He merely threw up his left forearm to meet the expected blow aimed at his head, lunged forward and slashed viciously at the young man's abdomen. The latter drew back a step, doubled like a jackknife, and brought his cane down viciously across the knuckles of his assailant's right hand.

"So it is thou, son of a pig," he called pleasantly in Spanish. "I footed you that time, didn't I?" he added in English. "Thought I would aim for your head, didn't you?"

The blow temporarily paralyzed the assassin's hand; he dropped the knife, and as he stooped to recover it with his left hand, the young man, before retreating from Pop-eye, kicked Pucker-eye in the face and quite upset him.

"Stop it!" shouted Webster.

Pop-eye turned his head at the outcry. The man he was attacking fell into the position of a swordsman en garde, and thrust viciously with the ferrule of the cane at the face of the pop-eyed man, who, disregarding Webster's approach, seized the cane in his left hand and with a quick, powerful tug actually drew his victim toward him a foot before the latter let go the stick.

Before he could give ground again Pop-eye was upon him. He grasped the young man by the latter's left arm and held him, while he drew back for the awful disemboweling stroke. As his long arm sped forward the hook of John Stuart Webster's heavy cane descended upon that flexed arm in the crook of the elbow, snagging it cleverly.

The knife never reached its destination!

"You would, would you?" said Webster reproachfully, and jerked the fellow violently around. The man he had rescued promptly struck Pop-eye a terrible blow in the face with his left hand and broke loose from the grip that had so nearly been his undoing; then Webster tapped the assassin a meditative tap or two on the top of his sinful head for good measure and to awaken in him some sense of the impropriety and futility of resistance, after which Webster turned to discuss a similar question of ethics with Pucker-eye.

The scar-cheeked man was on his knees, groping groggily for his knife, for he had received a severe kick under the chin, and for the nonce was far from dangerous. Stooping, Webster picked up the knife; then with knife and cane grasped in his left hand he seized Pucker-eye by the nape with his right and jerked him to his feet. The assassin stood glowering at him in a perfect frenzy of brutish, inarticulate fury.

"Take the knife away from the other fellow before he gets active again," Webster called over his shoulder. "I'll manage this rascal. We'll march them over to the market and turn them over to the police." He spoke in Spanish.

"Thanks, ever so much, for my life," the young man answered lightly, and in English, "but where I come from it is not the fashion to settle these arguments in a court of law. To call an officer is considered, unthinkable; to shoot a prisoner in this country is considered murder, and consequently I have but one alternative and I advise you, my good friend, to have a little of the same. I'm going to run like the devil."

And he did. He was in full flight before Webster could glance around, and in an instant he was lost to sight among the trees.

"That advice sounds eminently fair and reasonable," Webster yelled after him, and was about to follow when he observed that the young man had abandoned his pretty little silver-chased walking stick.

"That's too nice a little stick to leave to these brigands," he thought, and forthwith possessed himself of it and the pop-eyed man's knife, after which he turned not upon the order of his going but went, departing at top speed.

The young man he had saved from being butchered was right. An entangling alliance with the police was, decidedly, not to John Stuart Webster's liking, for should he unfortunately, form such an alliance, he would be haled into court as a witness and perhaps miss the steamer to San Buenaventura.

He had planned to spend an hour in the market, drink a cup of cafe noir, smoke a cigarette, and return to his hotel in time for a leisurely breakfast, but his recent bout with grim reality had blunted the edge of romance. He ordered his driver to take him back to the hotel, sprang inside and congratulated himself on his lucky escape.

CHAPTER VIII.

Webster's trunk went aboard the steamer early the following morning, and at noon he entered a taxi with his hand baggage and was driven to the levee where La Estrellita lay tugging gently at her mooring lines. Owing to the congestion of freight and traffic the chauffeur stopped his cab a little distance from the gangplank, where Webster discharged him with a liberal tip.

The latter, however, swung his passenger's bag and suitcase to the ground, picked them up and started for the gangplank.

"Never mind my baggage, lad," Webster called after him. "One of the deck boys will care for it."

The chauffeur turned. "You've been generous with me, sir," he answered, "so I think I had better carry your baggage aboard. If you permit a deckhny to handle it, you merely have to give another tip, and that would be sheer wanton waste. Why shouldn't I earn the one you gave me?"

"I hadn't figured it out that way, son, so here's another half dollar for being the only existing specimen of your species in captivity. My stateroom is No. 31, upper deck, port side," Webster answered, smiling. The man took the tip eagerly and hurried toward the gangplank; the quartermaster on duty shouldered a way for him and he darted aboard.

Webster followed leisurely. At the gangplank the purser's clerk hailed him, examined his tickets and punched them.

"Where is the other man?" he asked. "You have two tickets here."

"Oh, that blamed valet of mine," Webster answered, and glanced around as if in search of that mythical functionary. "It would be like the stupid fellow to miss the boat," he added. "When he comes—"

Webster ceased speaking abruptly. He was looking straight into the malevolent orbs of Pucker-eye, who was standing just behind the clerk at the foot of the gangplank.

"I wonder if Pop-eye's around, also," Webster thought, and he faced about. Pop-eye was standing in back of him, leaning over the railing of the gangway.

"Which is the valet?" the purser's clerk asked, scanning the names on the tickets.

"Andrew Bowers."

"All right, Mr. Webster," the other answered, with that genial camaraderie that seems inseparable from all of his calling. "When Andrew comes I'll send him aboard."

He started to pass the tickets back to Webster, but a detaining hand rested on his arm, while a dark thumb and forefinger lifted the trailing strips of tickets. Pucker-eye was examining them also.

The purser's clerk drove his elbow backward violently into Pucker-eye's midriff and shook him off roughly.

"What do you mean, you black-and-tan hound?" he demanded. "Since when did you begin to O. K. my work?"

Pucker-eye made no reply to this stern reproof. He accepted the elbow with equanimity and faced Webster with an evil smile that indicated mutual recognition.

"Bueno," he said. "The senor he ees sail on La Estrellita for San Buenaventura, no?"

"So you came nosing around to see about it, eh? Doing a little plain gumshoe work, I see."

Pucker-eye bowed. By the simple exercise of courage and bad manners he had looked at John Stuart Webster's ticket and was now familiar with his name and destination.

Webster glowered darkly at Pucker-eye and said:

"Well, you scoundrelly cutthroat, what are you going to do about it? Try a little of your knife work on me, I suppose?"

The fellow grinned—the kind of grin that is composed of equal parts of ferocity and knowledge of superior strength. That grin did more to discomfit Webster than the knowledge that he had earned for himself two bloodthirsty and implacable enemies, for Pucker-eye was the first of his breed that Webster had ever seen smile under insult. That cool smile infuriated him.

What about the woodchuck theory.

February 9th—green grass and little snow.

No one robin will make a summer any more than one swallow.

Cherished memories we can't forget. Blessings abundantly abide with them. May their last years be their brightest.

UNDER THE DOME AT LANSING
By Ed A. Nowack

Broken only by two questions that stirred legislators remaining in Lansing, the calm that enveloped official life last week was otherwise smooth. With the major junkets complete by this week the legislators will again be busy. The only break in the deliberations from now until adjournment—unless unexpected situations arise—will occur the week of February 25 when adjournment will be taken for the state Republican convention in Detroit.

Stinging under defeat of its pet scheme to kick the two-cent gas tax in the ear, Detroit Automobile Club minority members continued efforts last week to impose their desires in auto traffic and regulation upon the state as a whole. First, they held a stacked meeting to remodel the present uniform traffic code. Second, Detroit interests directed the truck and bus men'a meeting in re-writing the common carrier law to virtually give truck and bus operators permanent franchise rights on Michigan's highways and also to relieve themselves of a goodly portion of utility commission taxes if possible. This bill is to be in the legislature this week.

Detroit Club "Uber Alles"

The meeting of sheriffs and police chiefs called under guise of safety regulations for auto traffic resulted in the appointment of a hand picked committee of 11 to make safety recommendations to the legislature and secretary of state. Outlying districts were completely ignored in that respect. The meeting was thoroughly in accord that there is an inexcusable lack of law enforcement on highway measures, most of the measures put forward either being on the statute wholly or in part at present.

The hand picked D. A. C. club meeting ran along smoothly until Rep. George Royburgh, Reed City, chairman of the house transportation committee, asked the spokesman for the meeting who he was and what he represented. He said his name was H. B. Brown and that he was an attorney for the D. A. C. Roxburgh said he thought so and called attention to the fact that the handful of men present were possibly forgetting that other sections of the state of Michigan might be entitled to representation.

"Der Tag" For Them

Briefly, this is what the D. A. C. stands for in statewide auto traffic regulations: Enforce present stop-light law, present dimming law, present headlight law. Teach the folks in the country they have to stop at thru highways and not drive onto them when city folks and others are approaching. Make farmers quit stretching ropes across roads when using hay mow fillers; make threshers stop putting belts across roads when threshing; compel road commissions to mark bridge construction points and detours properly.

They would compel all persons having accidents to report same to the secretary of state and create sufficient new jobs to care for the work. They would leave the age limit of 14 at which drivers' permits are issued, as it is, but they would evolve some suitable scheme to put the Binet test on older folks to determine if they have a 8-year-old brain or an 80-year-old brain. They would prohibit use of exhaust whistles on pleasure cars; enforce the law against driving through funeral processions; enforce and tighten up the law that brakes should operate properly; compel farmers, under penalties, to carry a white light that would show both ways on any road and on any rig at night time; make the dance hall sheik and the small town boy cut out use of Christmas tree lights on pleasure cars; enforce law against operators of cars who run them minus lights, reflectors, or bulbs at night.

After That—Is This

Passenger vehicles would not be allowed to pass each other on curves, on hills where the view is obstructed, at street intersections and at railroad crossings. Folks in the country and elsewhere would have to walk on the left side of the road; license plates would have to be kept clean, as the law demands; revocation of operators' permits would be mandatory on certain judges.

The D. A. C. attorney talked against the proposed stop law at railroad crossings, although admitting its worth as a fine psychological measure. Last year saw about 150 deaths and 500 injured at grade crossing smashups in Michigan, those upholding the proposed law said. Two of the three stop law bills provide that railroads shall in no respect be relieved of responsibility for accidents if such a law is enacted, and that they must establish within two years practically new and up-to-date signs throughout the state.

The Truck Men

Attorneys and officials of truck and bus companies aiming to repeal the present common carrier law taxing trucks and busses and making them answerable to the Public Utilities Commission, will have a bill ready this week. Their preliminary draft would do this:

Give trucks and busses permanent franchise rights on state built and maintained trunk lines; relieve the auto body carrying trucks—those monsters 60 feet and more long—of all state regulation and the present $1 per hundred weight tax they pay the commission for use of the roads; relieve all contract carriers of the same regulations; change the word "permit" in the present law to "certificate" and make them assignable without protest from the state where one operator sells his business to another; segregate trucks and busses in two divisions, Class A to mean those trucks and busses operating on fixed routes, Class B including those operating irregularly.

Trucks and busses in those classes which now use the highways day and night, would pay only 25 cent per cwt. as against $1 they now pay. All other trucks would pay a $10 annual fee with rebates for the time they didn't operate. To catch the rural vote in the house, for the proposed measure, farmers' trucks would be exempt, as they now are, and trucks engaged only in hauling farm produce.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving and sad memory of our dear little daughters and sisters, Christina, who was called February 14, 1914, and Jeanette, who was called September 1, 1923:

Sad and sudden was the call
Of our dear ones, loved by all;
Our loss was great, the shock severe,
We little thought their death was near.
We know not why, we can not tell,
But Jesus knows and knows it well.
It matters not what may befall,
The Savior knows, He knows it all.

Their loving parents, brother and sisters, Mr. and Mrs. Herm Tornga and family.

ELLSWORTH WILL BE WIDELY ADVERTISED

Business Men Met Last Week to Formulate Plans

Last week, twenty of the local business men of Ellsworth attended a meeting at the Klooster Hardware store to talk over plans for putting on an advertising campaign to induce tourists to visit the region.

According to plans now under way, 200 road signs will be painted and placed on all trunk lines in the northern and central parts of the state. A large sign will also be placed at the four corners, opposite the Corner Garage.

It is also the intention of the Ellsworth board of trade to publish a monthly bulletin which will tend to advertise their community in all parts of the United States. Another meeting is to be held in the near future to perfect the plans now under way.

IS DEAD FOLLOWING LINGERING ILLNESS

Mrs. Hugh Nelson Taken from Her Family at 23

Reta Hazel Nelson, wife of Hugh Nelson of Phelps, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Bacot and sister of Ralph and Ranney Bacot of this city, died at the Charlevoix Hospital at one thirty o'clock last Monday morning, following an illness of some six weeks' duration, caused by a complication of various physical disorders.

Mrs. Nelson, who was born in this county twenty-three years ago, is survived by her husband, and several children—one a baby daughter, only a few weeks old, and the brothers mentioned above.

The funeral was held this morning (Wednesday) at ten o'clock, Rev. H. R. E. Quant conducting the services at the home of Ralph Bacot on West Hurlbut avenue and at Brookside cemetery where the interment took place.

The untimely death of Mrs. Nelson seems particularly sad in the light of her youth and because she put up so gallant a fight for life, never admitting, even to the end, that she recognized the threatening presence of death. Everything possible was done to bring her back to health, but it was not to be. The entire sympathy of the community goes out to the sorrowing husband and the little one who will now never know a mother.

The men who were most eager to get into the limelight may have gotten some comfort out of their performance, but we doubt that they would even enjoy that were they to hear the comments which we have heard from some of the newspaper men who reported their performances, and who had their own private notions of their effectiveness."

To Fill Vacancy

A committee, consisting of the probate judge, the prosecuting attorney and the county clerk have appointed Dr. William M. Boylan of Boyne City, coroner of this county. The appointment was made necessary by the failure of Dr. R. B. Armstrong to qualify. This puts a coroner at each end of the county, Dr. McMillan of Charlevoix being the other coroner.

AYRES BOAL WOULD HAVE CITY BUILD FOR FUTURE

Believes We Should Hire Landscape Engineer and Adopt Comprehensive Construction Plan

Ayres Boal of Chicago and Charlevoix rural route, purchsser of the Stockman property at the corner of Clinton and Bridge streets, while in this city last Saturday, made the first definite statement to one of our local business men regarding his intentions with respect to this property that he has so far expressed.

Mr. Boal would very much like to see the city hire o city planning engineer, competent to draw up a set of comprehensive plans for the beautification and improvement of the town, including its waterfront. Ile is confident, by reason of his experience with similar situations in other small cities, especially those of Florida, that Charlevoix would get bock the money expended in such a scientifie plan of development. Ile has faith in the future of Charlevoix and expects to spend much of his time here and for these reasons he has seen fit to extend his property holdings in the city.

The Courier is inclined to agree with Mr. Boal as to developing the city physically along definite lines. The comprehensive plan idea hos several strong arguments in its favor.

—In the first place, when once drawn up and adopted, everybody will have to stond by it and for it. There can be no bucking or backing down on the port of individuals who may feel that their personal interests are being interfered with. Any pieecwork plon might easily meet with enough opposition from those favoring some other location or method of development, or from some isolated individual whose interests were affected, to kill it. We might, in that case, get nothing at all.

Then, again—while it calls for a definite, uniform style of construction throughout the city, it does not mean that all the work has to be done at the same time. It may he started anywhere and can be carried along just ns fast as funds will permit. We may take a block a year or every two years, or a single street, or a small stretch of woterfront. But—here's the great point—when we get through, all parts of the development will be symmetrieal and tied into each other like the various pieces of a cut-out picture puzzle. We won't hove one style of architecture here at this point and n block or so away some widely variant design that will fight its neighbor up the line like the mixture of unfriendly colors in a womnn's dress.

It may be that it will cost a little more at first to have such a plan drawn up, but if we get somewhere with our program it will be less expensive thaa the eat and dog fight that will inevitably result from an attempt to carry it out the old woy—by that we mean the way pretty nearly everything has been done here as long as we can remember.

To illustrate—suppose we soy, "Oh, we don't need a city plonner—just pick out the corner between Blank' street and So-ond-So's store and fix it up for a park." All right—we do this, the measure is odopted and immediately Mr. This-and-That who owns a place right in the middle of the selected block lets out a terrible howl. Ile don't want to move. Ile was for the plan strong when it was proposed, but before onyone knew where the work was to start. Now a proposition that looked all right when the other fellow had to stand the gaff doesn't nppeal to him at all. "Why don't you start up there at the end of the next block?" he wails, "that would be much better"—and then follows an exhaustive argument. At the same time, Mr. Thingumbob down at the other end of the street, who has a white-elephant lot on his hands, starts moving heaven and enrtb to have the plans changed so that he can shove it off on the city. And then the fun begins—and the people pay and pay and pay—as por uaual! Because we don't get the park and our summer visitors wonder why and after a while wonderment turns to disgust and then we lose patronage and money. This wouldn't apply to parks alone but to almost any other item of improvement. It's the human element again. We can't ellminate it, we can't ignore it, but we can get around it and the comprehensive plan idea provides a way. What everybody approves and adopts everybody has got to stick to or get into hot water.

MISS McCALL ENTERTAINED HER FRIENDS

On the Occasion of Her Eleventh Birthday

Miss Kathleen McCall entertained obout fourteen of her young friends at a St. Valentine party last Friday evening in honor of her eleventh birthday, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew McCall, Jr., on Eost Hurlbut avenue.

Of course, as is usual at auch functions, the big eake with its eleven candles waa the chief feature of the feast. And there were heaps of sandwiches and other goodies which disappeared with surprising rapidity. Even the proverbial loaves and fishes wouldn't have lasted long under the onslaught of that healthy bunch of youngsters with appetites sharpened by their play.

Miss McCall received many nice gifts from her friends and was treated to an especially pleasant surprise when her cousin, Helen McCall, nrrived unexpectedly from Traverse City, after having previously sent her regrets.

MRS. MORRISON MAKES HIT AS A CORNETIST

Encored Repeatedly at Recent Concert in Grand Rapids

We note from a clipping out of the Grand Rapids "Madlaon Square Advertiaer" that:

"Hager'a Burton Heights band gave what proved to be an unusunlly successful concert at South High School laat Wednesday. Besides very pleasing numbors by tbe band, Mrs. Morrison proved to be an artist on the cornet. In this ahe was accompanied by her already famous husband, Prof. C. S. Morrison, composer of 'Moditation,' etc. Her style and execution were remarkable and repeated encores were required to satisfy the audience."

Mrs. Morrison was formerly a resident of Charlevoix, beat known here perhaps as Mrs. Agnes Jarvis. She also lived in Boyne City for several years prior to her removal to Grand Rapids.

HIS LIFE ONE OF GOOD WORKS

JAMES MEGGISON WAS FAITHFUL AND DEPENDABLE

Born in Canada, Had Lived Forty Years in Marion and Barnard Townships

James Edward Meggison was born in Essa, Ontario, July 15, 1869, and was one of a family of ten brothers ond sisters, only one of whom passed oway before him. His death, which was occasioned by a sad accident, occurred on February 10, 1925, at the age of 55 years, 6 months and 20 days.

When he was a smsll boy his parents moved to Muskoka, Ontario, where they remained until he was a lad of fifteen years, when they moved to the farm known as the Greiner farm in Marion township, Charlevoix county, Michigan. They lived here for about four years, then moved to Barnard, where they remained and raised their large family. Tbus it will be seen he has lived forty years or practically his entire life in this vicinity.

On September 13, 1893, he was morried to Hattie B. Thompson, to which union six children—all living have been born.

Ile has been active in the work of the Grange and at the time of his death was chairman of the executive committee ond steward of his local Grange. Ile was also o memher of the Woodman lodge. After the death of Walter Black, a few months since, he was chosen director of the local school.

In December, 1893, he united with the Charlevoix Baptist church, then under the pastoral core of Rev. Haynes. He had alwoys been active in its work and at the time nf his going, was both a trustee and deacon, and nowhere outside of his own home will he be more sadly missed than in the councils of the church where for about a third of a century he has been a faithful member, honoring his Master with a consisteat christian walk, and a loyal outspoken testimony.

The surviving members of his immediate family are his wife, Hattie B., two sons, Elmer J., of Flint and Byron W., of Detroit; Mrs. Oliver G. Histon, of Ypsilanti, and Erma, Gladys and Bernice of Marion. He is also survived by eight brothers and sisters, viz.; Mrs. A. E. Ward, of Charlevoix, (now at Jackson) Geo. Meggison of Marion, Will Meggison of Ironton, Thomas Meggison of Traverse City, Albert Meggison of Chicago, Miss Ella and Groce Meggison of Jackson, and Mrs. Leslie Everts of Marion.

These berenved ones have the sympathy of the entire commuaity, who share with them their deep sorrow. The obsequies were held at the Baptist church, Friday afternoon, conducted by the pastor, Rev. Herman Burns, D. D., and attended by a gathering of frienda that tested the capacity of the auditorium. That which was earthly of the deceased was placed in Charlevoix cemetery to await the resurrection.

"Goodnight, beloved, sleep and take thy rest,
Lay down thy head upon thy Savior's breast,
We loved thee well, but Jesus loved thee best,
Good night! Good night! Good night!"

WINTER AUTOING AND ITS DANGERS

HOW TO STEER YOUR CAR TO AVOID THE SKIDDING

Drive Carefully, Turn Slowly and Keep the Engine Pulling the Car

Motorists use their brakes too liberally. That's the chief cause for akidding.

An outomobile will skid on slippery pavement when the front wheels are turned the slightest out of the forward direction, the clutch is out and the brakes are applied. The back wheels, supporting the heavier half of the auto in most cases become locked, cannot hold against the pavement, and corry the car on in the original direction regardless of front wheel direction.

Even when the front wheels are directed straight forward, if the car is riding along on a slippery road that slopes to a ditch, releasing the clutch and applying the brakes mean danger. The back of the car in this cose takes the easiest courae—toward the ditch—and tho best driver can't stop such a slide once it's started.

Here lies the real danger. Motorists are told to steer their cors in the direction of the skid. But if the car is skidding toward a ditch, and the motorist tries to steer his car that way he is sure to go in, one way or the other.

There is no escape from such a skid. There is a preventive, as there is for any kind of skid.

That is—drive carefully, turn slowly with clutch in, keep the engine pulling the car, apply the brakes slowly and carefully.

With the clutch engaged, the engine controls the car. Brakes may then be applied easily, without letting out the clutch. Then, if the rear does hegin to skid, the engine will keep the wheels turning in an effort to drive them out of the skid.

Curves should be taken with the clutch engaged, and the gears in second or low. The hrokes need not be touched.

If the car is going ot a good rate of speed and necessity for slowing up nr stopping is seen ahead, take your foot off the throttle and let the engine slow up the car. The brakes may he applied and released with short, easy strokes of the pedal. But the clutch should remain in until the driver is certain just another slight touch of the brake pedal would bring the car to a complete stop.

The hest precaution against skidding is to avoid a sudden change in direction. Turns should he made slowly and as widely as possible.

If the emergency arises at which a sudden turn must he made, take your foot off the throttle ond apply both brakes, emergency and service while the clutch is still engaged. You will skid, but not as much as you would if the clutch were out.

Don't try to shift suddenly into low. There would be nothing left of your gears if you did.

ST. LOUIS PARTY APPRECIATED OUR WORK

Letter from Miss Bemis Leaves No Room for Doubt

Fred E. Cartier, president of the Charlevnix Association of Commerce, received a letter last week from Miss Hannoh Bemis, leader of the party of St. Louisans that recently visited thia city to enjoy outdoor sports.

Writing from South Kingsbury Place, St. Louis, under date of February 10th, Miss Bemis says:

"My Dear Mr. Cartier:

We all enjoyed our visit to Charlevoix so very much that I want to tell you again how greatly we appreciated everything that was done for our pleasure. Even now, we are talking about next winter.

It wss a perfect week, and we all feel that the people of Charlevoix are entirely responsihle.

Please express our thanks to all of the members of the Association of Commerce.

Sincerely yours,
(Signed) Hannah Bemis."

From which we gather, with considerable satisfaction, that we have made a step in the right direction in urging the advantages of Charlevoix as a winter playground and that the efforts of the business men of the city to make this claim good have been successful. Huzza!

ICE HARVEST NOW FINISHED

SEASON'S CUT TOTALS ABOUT 13,000 TONS

Pine Lake Product This Year is Exceptionally Clear and 16 Inches Thick

The regular aanual ice harvest in Charlevoix was completed this year on last Saturday, February 14th.

The cut this year was made in several plnces—off the old sugar factory, Harry Widdifield's ice house, opposite the swimming pool and off the old P. M. dock on Pine Lake. The ice was exceptionally clear—much better than last year, and averaged about 16 inches in thickness. Work commenced on January 19th.

While this work lasts but a comparatively short time during the winter season—averaging about a month, it means much to the former and city team owner as well as to the individual laborer aad is a big help toward weothering a winter here. It is really quite a sizeable job, too, as may be gathered from the following figures.

Heise & Yettaw, proprietors of the Charlevoix Ice & Coal Co., cutting for their own storehouse on Pine Lake, employed ten teams and 25 men for eight days. They put up about 4,000 tons and finished their cut on January 24th.

O. D. Hammoad, who has a yearly contract to fill the Chicago Club, Ina Widdifield, Belvedere, Hallett, Booth Fisheries, and Charlevoix Fish Co. storehouses here and supply the needs of the Pere Marquette Railroad at Petoskey, had fifteen teams and obout 40 men on the job over nearly the entire period of the harvest and took 9,000 tons out of the lake, including ten earloads for the P. M. diners and buffet cars.

Though it is not generally known, Charlevoix hos quite a reputation outside of this district for its ice. The water of Pine Lake ranks A-1 in purity and it makes good clear ice thot is much in demand, even in far distant points and during the summer season local dealers have been called upon to supply hundreds of tons to outside consumers.

Radio Club

A meeting of Charlevoix'a radio fans will be held next Friday evening, Februnry 20th at the council chambers for the purpose of organizing a radio club whieh will have as its purpose the improvement of local conditiona affecting radio reception. It is earnestly desired that everyone interested in radio will attend. Remember, council chambers promptly at 7:30 p. m.

SLIDING SPORT STARTED AGAIN

CHANGE IN WEATHER REVIVES COASTING

Many New Bobs Have Been Built During Past Two Weeks—Read Mr. Bemis's Letter

Though our resort visitors have left us, the interest in winter pastimes has not faded. Weather conditions merely checked it for a time.

During the past two weeks, at least seven or eight fine new bobsleds have been built either by their owners or at the local woodworking establishments. They range in length from fifteen to eighteen and twenty feet and embody clever features of construction.

Saturday and Sunday nights marked the resumption of coasting among the townspeople and the Bridge street hill was the mecca for the theatre crowds who joined the "regulars" as soon as the show was over. For several days previous, Henry Marshall and his men had been busy flooding and scraping the track and it was in fine shape.

So big are the new sleds that they take everybody off the top of the hill at one load and those thot follow often go down loaded light. An innovation that started Sunday night was the use of a Ford touring car to pull the sleds back up the hill with their passengers sitting on the sled and enjoying the fast trip to the top almost as much as the slide down. This, of course, was temporary but it may be that someone can be hired next season to do this work regularly, as it odds much to the sport, although, perhaps, not affording so much exercise. If the loaded sleighs could not be hauled, owing to the show at the side of the road, this could be leveled off sufficiently to permit of stringing a number of sleds in tandem and taking them up empty while their passengers walk.

Elsewhere in this issue, appears a letter from Miss Hannah Bemis of the St. Louis party, expressing appreciation of the good time they had and the courtesies extended to them. We have since received a copy of a letter from W. N. Bemis, her father, written to W. Herschel Miller, warden of the Belvedere Club, of which Mr. Bemis and his family are members of long standing. It is but another proof that Charlevoix hos great possibilities as a winter resort. The letter follows:

Dear Mr. Miller:—

Not knowing just whom to write personally, I want to thank the people of Charlevoix, through you, for Mrs. Bemis and myself, for all of the courtesies shown the young people during their visit of last week.

I think they anticipated a good time, but they had such a wonderful visit that it is hard to keep them from talking about it constantly. The Hotel—with Mr. and Mrs. Hallett—the people—I am sure the recollection of the trip will he a contiauing source of pleasure to all of the party. I am sure some friendships have been made that will be lasting.

Another year I think you will have a fairly large contingent from St. Louis and it should be so, for Charlevoix offers a wonderful opportunity for winter sports for the people of the Middle West.

With my best wishes for all,
Yours sincerely,
(Signed) W. N. Bemis.

AT THE MOVIES

"The Spanish Dancer" Coming

"The Spanish Dancer," a Herbert starring Brenon production for Paramount, starring Pola Negri, will be the big attraction at the Palace Theatre next Saturday and Sunday, February 21 and 22. The story deals with the love romance of a gypsy girl of rare beauty in Spain during the reign of Philip IV. Every scene has a thrill of its own and Pola Negri's role is one of extraordinary dramatic strength. Antonio Moreno plays opposite the star.

Great Cast in William Farnum's First for Paramount

William Farnum's first screen vehicle in over a year, the Wallace Worsley Paramount production, "The Man Who Fights Alone," will be the feature at the Palace Theatre next Wednesday, February 25th. The story is an adaptation by Jack Cunningham of "The Miracle of Hate."

Lois Wilson and Edward Horton are featured in lending roles in support of the star. Miss Wilson was recently seen in the role of the Queen in Rudolph Valentino's "Monsieur Beaucaire," while Horton will be remembered as the inimitable light comedian of Cruze's "Ruggles of Red Gap" and "To the Ladies."

Players prominent on both stage and screen appear in the unusually capable supporting cast in this production.

NOTORIOUS JOINT IS CLOSED BY TROOPERS

"Holland Grove," an alleged house of ill fame in Saginaw, Michigan, after five raids, is now likely to stay closed. Padlock proceedings are being taken by the prosecutor.

The State Police participated in all of the raids. A report was received at headquarters at Lansing after the third raid advising Capt. O. G. Olander that the place was again operating and that some shooting had taken place shortly before the letter was written. It was unsigned, but the writer proved to be a discarded lover of one of the inmates.

All of the occupants, including the proprietor, who claimed to be buying the house on a contract, were arrested and paid fines. The proprietor asked to be allowed to sell the house and leave the city, but the padlock proceedings would not be dropped by the state.

STATE DETECTIVES

The success of the criminal investigation bureau of the Michigan Department of Public Safety is co-operating with local officers in the solving of murder cases, burglaries and other serious crimes has resulted in an increase in the amount of appropriation asked for this branch of work. The idea is to provide trained detectives to work with sheriffs and other local officers in criminal cases.

Assistance given by the small present force of state detectives resulted in clearing up several murders recently and securing confessions and convictions.

POULTRY

INCUBATING TURKEY EGGS IS HARD TASK

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

There are certain factors in the incubation of turkey eggs which are very important, and which mean a great deal in determining the number of fully matured pullets and cockerels raised in the following year. In a large measure the criterion of success in turkey raising is the number of fully matured turkeys raised in proportion to the total number of eggs set. Therefore the eggs as laid must be given the very best attention. High fertility is desirable, and incubation should be carried out in such a way that as many of the eggs as possible will hatch. Naturally, the vigor of the breeding stock and the manner in which it has been managed will determine in large degree the quality of the hatching eggs.

The eggs should be collected regularly every day and kept in a room at a temperature of from 50 degrees to 60 degrees F. They should be turned every day, but should be handled carefully and should not be kept for over two weeks.

The period of incubation of turkey eggs is 28 days, and the method of incubation is much the same as with chicken eggs. Turkey eggs can be incubated under chicken hens, turkey hens, or in incubators. If chicken hens are used to incubate turkey eggs, care must be taken not to give the hen too many eggs, as from 9 to 12 are quite sufficient, depending upon the size of the hen as well as the size of the eggs. Nesting arrangements as well as other matters are practically the same as in incubating chicken eggs. The sitting hen should be fed daily and given a chance to exercise.

When the turkey hen is allowed to sit on her own eggs, conditions are much the same as with the chicken hen. Turkey hens will cover from 15 to 20 eggs. Nests are most conveniently arranged on the ground or in boxes or barrels and should be covered so that the turkey hen will not be disturbed. At the same time she should be taken off daily and allowed to exercise and should be given plenty of water to drink, and clean, wholesome feed, such as a mixture of wheat and oats.

When the turkey hen becomes broody she should be allowed to sit on the nest for two or three days before being intrusted with the eggs. When she has remained on the nest for two or three days she should then be given her eggs and attended to as suggested. If a number of hens are sitting at the same time, care should be taken to see that they get back to the nests properly and that no nest is left uncovered.

Both chicken and turkey hens, while sitting on turkey eggs, should be dusted with sodium fluorid, using a small pinch under each wing, around the thigh joint, over the back, under the body and around the vent. In this way the hen is rid of lice and the poults at hatching time are not liable to be infested with the parasites.

Use of Moldy Straw for Litter Quite Injurious

Serious loss of poultry is often due to the use of moldy straw for scratching litter. In such cases, according to D. C. Kennard, specialist in poultry at the Ohio experiment station, the birds affected breathe with difficulty and often wheeze or gasp for air.

The symptoms are similar to a cold in the windpipe or bronchitis. The respiratory system of a chicken is so complicated that an excessive amount of dust of any kind is injurious and especially is this true of the dust from moldy straw.

Recent reports of heavy losses of pullets from this cause have been made. A heavy loss of birds may result in a few hours, it seems, and one bale of moldy or musty straw used for scratching litter may mean a serious loss of birds.

Better Roosters Needed in Many Poultry Flocks

We have heard much of better beef sires and better dairy sires. A good rooster is just as important to the poultry flock. To prevent inbreeding it is necessary to get new blood at least every two years. Buy a new cockerel and buy a good one. Be sure he comes from healthy stock which has been bred for egg production. Be sure he has vigor, a wide back, deep abdomen, long body, full breast and proper development. Don't buy a cull or mongrel at any price. Then mate him up to a dozen of your very best hens; late moulters with lots of room in the rear and soft, flexible bodies. The result should be better pullets.—O. G. Krum, Poultry Specialist, Colorado Agricultural College.

Fan Out Poultry House

It is a good plan to visit the hen houses after the chickens are gone to roost, and see what the air smells like. Perhaps it will need to be "fanned out" as they used to fan a change of air into the house in the bygone days when windows were nailed down for the winter. Then the fresh-air devotees would open an outside door and vigorously fan it back and forth until the stale air was fanned out. Overcrowding, lice mites and bad air are the pests of chickens.

What the old humorist, Josh Billings said was, of course, meant to be funny. He had, however, a way of saying things that often contained the serious truth. He somewhere makes a remark to this effect, "There ain't no use knowin' so many things that ain't so."

A proper, honest explanation is always in place and helps to clear up, in people's minds, the things that are not so.

For explanation we will now make a few honest statements: We are sometimes called "Mormons" or "Latter-Day Saints." We neither claim nor acknowledge this title, which sometimes becomes attached to us from various sources such as ignorance, prejudice and undeserved contempt. There is no such direct term in scripture as "Saints Church" but the title "saint" every true hearted christian comes honestly by, because of having a real experience of grace wrought in the heart by the blood of our Lord Jesus Christ.

In the beginning of the christian dispensation all true believers were known as "saints" to distinguish them from the unbelieving part of the world, or "sinners." Bible proof is offered by a scripture reference: Romans, 1:7, where the christians were not only called "saints" but were called "to be" saints. Also about ninety other places in the scriptures will show, or help to show, the true meaning of the term. Why should this appelation for a true follower of Christ become obsolete, and why should a person worthy of the name be ashamed of it

We have no affiliation with the creed known as Mormonism or Latter Day Saints or any of its factions, or never have had in any particular.

Pucker-eye took out a cigarette case, selected a cigarette and presented the case to Webster. His had manners in selecting his own cigarette first was deliberate, as Webster knew. It was the Latin-American's method of showing his contempt.

"We shall meet again, Meester Webstaire," he said. "May I offer a cigarette for the—what you Americans call—the keepsake? No?" He smiled brightly and closed his puckered eye in a knowing wink.

Webster took his tickets from the purser, folded them, placed them in his pocket and for a few seconds regarded Pucker-eye contemptuously.

"When we meet again, you scum," he retorted quietly, "you shall have no difficulty in remembering me. You may keep your cigarette."

His long, powerful right arm shot out; like a forceps his thumb and forefinger closed over Pucker-eye's rather flat nose; he squeezed, and with a shrill scream of agony Pucker-eye went to his knees.

Still holding the wretch by his proboscis, Webster turned quickly in order that his face might be toward Pop-eye.

"Pop-eye," he said, "if you take a hand in this, I'll twist your nose, too, and afterward I'll throw you in the river."

He turned to Pucker-eye.

"Up, thou curious little one," he said in Spanish, and jerked the unhappy

"Up, Thou Curious Little One."

rascal to his feet. The latter clawed ineffectually at the terrible arm which held him, until, presently discovering that the harder he struggled the harder Webster pinched his nose, he ceased his struggles and hung limply, moaning with pain and rage in the grip of the American.

"Good!" Webster announced, slacking his grip a little. With his left hand he deftly extracted a hair from each flank of the screaming little scoundrel's scant mustache and held them before the latter's tear-filled eyes.

"My friend," he said gently, "mark how the gringo gives his little dark brother a lesson in deportment. Behold, if I have given thee a souvenir of our meeting, I also have taken one. By this pinched and throbbing nose shall I be remembered when I am gone; by these hairs from thy rat's mustache shall I remember thee. Go, and thrust not that nose into a gringo's business again. It is unsafe."

He released Pucker-eye, made his way through the crowd to his room, looked in, saw that his baggage was there, and walked around on the starboard side to join in the general farewell of all on board to the crowd on the levee.

At the shore end of the gangplank Pucker-eye and Pop-eye still wailed. The unfortunate Pucker-eye was weeping with pain and futile rage and humiliation, but Webster noticed that Pop-eye's attention was not on his friend but upon each passenger that boarded the ship, of which there were the usual number of late arrivals. As each passenger approached, Pop-eye scanned him with more than casual interest.

Webster smiled. "Looking for that valet they heard me talking about," he reflected. "Pop-eye, you're a fine, capable lad. I thought you had the brains of the two. You're not going away until you've had a chance to size up the reenforcements at my command, are you?"

He lighted a cigar and leaned over the rail as the steamer, gathering speed, swept down river.

"Good-by, you golden fuzz and chicken gumbo," he called, as the city receded and the low, wooded shores below the city came into view.

When he had finished his cigar he cast the stump overboard, watched it until it disappeared astern, and then went around to stateroom No. 34. As he stepped in and closed the door a masculine voice said very pleasantly:

"How do you do?"

Mr. Webster looked up and beheld a young man, arrayed in a very fancy pair of light blue silk pajamas, stretched at his ease in the upper berth.

John Stuart Webster stared at the stranger for several seconds and concluded he was invading the sanctity of another's stateroom. "Excuse me," he said, "I guess I'm in the right church but the wrong pew," and he stepped out and looked for the number on the stateroom. To his surprise it was No. 34 after all, so he stepped back into the stateroom and favored the stranger with another scrutiny.

"It does appear to me, my friend," he said presently, "that I detect something strangely familiar about your pajamas."

"I wouldn't be the least bit surprised Mr. Webster. I found them in your suitcase."

Fell a silence of perhaps half a minute. Then:

"I dislike to appear inquisitive," Webster began, "but the fact is, neighbor, I'm curious to know where you got that book. I observe you are reading Samuel Butler's 'Way of All Flesh,' and that the book is slightly damaged. Recently I purchased such a book in—"

"Pray do not take the trouble to explain," the other answered airily. "I discovered this excellent book in your suitcase also. In fact, for me, that suitcase has proved to be a repository of treasures."

John Stuart Webster's neck came out of his collar with the suddenness of a turtle snapping at a fly; he drew himself up beside the top berth until his face was on a level with his unbidden guest's, upon whom he bent a look of mingled emotions.

"Who the devil are you?" he demanded.

"I regret I have no card, but even if I had it would be no kindness to inflict upon on American gentleman the cognomen my parents honored me with, for it is long and many-jointed, like a peanut, and embodies the names of all the saints in the calendar. Moreover, just at present I am traveling under an alias. I am known as Mr. Andrew Bowers."

"And your occupation?" Webster managed to articulate.

"Valet de chambre to that prince of gentlemen, Mr. John S. Webster," the other replied with a mischievous gleam in his dark eyes.

Mr. Webster sat down limply on the settee. He was undecided whether to roar with laughter or shriek with rage; while he struggled for a decision Andrew Bowers blew smoke rings at the ceiling.

"Haven't I seen you before?" Webster queried presently.

"I wouldn't be surprised. I drove you down to the steamer in a taxi half an hour ago. You will recall that the taxi driver carried your luggage aboard."

Webster gazed around the stateroom. "Where have you hidden your livery?" he demanded.

"I wrapped it in a newspaper; then, seeking a moment when the deck outside was deserted, I stepped forth in my—I beg your pardon, your—pajamas and tossed it overboard."

"But apparently you did not bring aboard with you a suit of clothes to take the place of your livery?"

"Quite true—lamentably so, Mr. Webster. Perhaps you will accept my desperate need as an excuse for borrowing your pajamas. I notice you have another suit of them. Fortunate man!"

Andrew Bowers was a man of perhaps thirty years, five feet ten inches tall, and apparently in excellent health. He might have weighed a hundred and seventy pounds and he was undeniably handsome.

While Webster was wondering whether his companion was merely a high-class tramp or an absconding bank cashier, a knock sounded on the stateroom door. He opened it and the purser stood in the entrance.

"Ticket, please?" he announced.

Webster surrendered both tickets, receiving in turn two neat checks for the dining saloon, and the purser passed on to the next cabin.

Andrew Bowers smiled a small, prescient smile, but said nothing, and presently John Stuart Webster broke the silence. "Well," he ordered, "sing the song or tell the story."

"I noticed you surrendered my ticket to the purser," the young man answered irrelevantly, "and I am glad of that. I take it as prima facie evidence that you have made up your mind to accept my company."

"You're too infernally cool and cocksure, my friend," Webster warned him testily. "I pride myself on a sense of humor and I dearly love a joke until it's carried too far, but be advised in time, young man, and don't try to play horse with me. My acceptance or non-acceptance of you is a subject for future discussion, since at present we have some fiduciary matters before us. You owe me fifty dollars for your ticket, Andrew Bowers, and in view of the fact that I never saw you before today, suppose we start the voyage by squaring the account."

Andrew Bowers sat up in the berth and let his legs drape over the side. "Mr. Webster," he began seriously, "if, prior to the arrival of the purser to collect the tickets, you had handed my ticket to me, saying: 'Here is your ticket, Mr. Bowers. Be kind enough to reimburse me to the extent of fifty dollars,' I should have been compelled to admit then, as I do now, that I haven't fifty dollars. Fortunately for me, however, you surrendered the ticket to the purser before acquainting yourself with the state of my fortunes; the voyage has commenced and whether you like it or not, my dear sir, I am your guest from now until we reach San Buenaventura. Rather an interesting situation, don't you think?"

John Stuart Webster was of Scotch ancestry. He had a hereditary regard for bawbees. He was a business man. Prodigal spender though he was and generous to a fault, the fact remained that he always made it a point to get value received, and he was prodigal with his own money; he preferred that the privilege of prodigality with the Websterian funds should remain an inalienable prerogative of the sole surviving member of the Webster family.

"I think you're too cool, young man," Webster retorted. "Just a trifle too cocksure. Up to the present moment you have proffered no evidence why you should not be adjudged a cad, and I do not like cads and must decline to permit one to occupy the same stateroom at my expense. You are clever and amusing and I laughed at you, but at the same time my sense of humor is not so great as to cause me to overlook your impudence and laugh with you. Now, if you have anything to say, say it quickly, because you're going to go away from here—in a hurry."

"I plead guilty to the indictment, Mr. Webster, and submit as an excuse the fact that desperate circumstances require desperate measures. I am not begging my way, neither am I beating it, for the reason that both forms of travel are repugnant to me. I am merely taking advantage of certain fortuitous circumstances to force you, an entire stranger, to extend to me a credit of fifty dollars until we reach San Buenaventura, when you will be promptly reimbursed."

"It is not my habit," Webster retorted stiffly, "to extend credit to strangers who demand it."

"I do not demand it, sir. I beg it of you, and because I cannot afford to be refused I took care to arrange matters so that you would not be likely to refuse my request. Really, I do not mean to be cocksure and impudent, but before you throw me out I'd like to let you in on a secret about yourself."

"Well?"

"You're not going to throw me out."

"Why not?"

"Because you can't."

"That's fighting talk. Now, just to prove to you the depth of error in which you flounder, young man, I am about to throw you out." And he grasped Andrew Bowers in the grip of a grizzly bear and whisked him out of the top berth.

"Wait one second," his helpless victim cried. "I have something to say before you go any further."

"Say it," Webster ordered. "Your tongue is the only part of you that I cannot control."

"When you throw me out on deck," Andrew Bowers queried, "do your pajamas go with me? Does the hair go with the hide?"

"They cost me sixteen dollars in Salt Lake City, but—good lord, yes. I can't throw you out mother naked; d—n it, I can't throw you out at all."

"Didn't I tell you so? Be a good fellow and turn me loose."

"Certainly—for the time being. You'll stay locked in this stateroom while I have a talk with the captain. He'll probably dig up a shirt, a pair of dungarees and some old shoes for you and set you ashore before we get out of the river. If he doesn't do that he'll keep you aboard and you'll shovel coal for your passage."

"But I'm Andrew Bowers and the purser has collected my first-class ticket!"

"What of it? I shall declare—and Bowers, that you are not my valet, and that I did not buy the ticket for you. I dare you to face the captain in my pajamas and prove you aren't a stowaway."

"You would win on that point," the baffling guest admitted, "but it is a point you will not raise. Why? Because I have another trump up my kimono." He climbed back into the upper berth and from that vantage point gazed down benevolently upon John Stuart Webster. "I'm disappointed in you," he continued sadly. "I thought you'd show a little normal human curiosity about me—and you haven't. You do not ask questions or I could explain, while I cannot volunteer information without seeming to seek your pity, and that of course would be repugnant to me. I am hoping you will accept my word of honor that you shall be reimbursed two hours after you land in San Buenavatura."

"New music to your song, my friend, but the same old words," Webster retorted, and stepped to the stateroom door. "You're doomed to shovel coal or go ashore."

* METHODIST CHURCH *

* * * * * * * * * * *

Sunday, February 22nd

10:30 morning worship. This is the anniversary birthday of a most notable statesman. The sermon will be from the theme: "The Place of Righteousness in a Great Nation." Hear this sermon. Three things are essential to a nation's greatness: the home, the school and the church. These fine days give us good opportunity to get to church. Shall we not take advantage of them?

12 o'clock Sunday school. The lesson of temperance calls us to a study of one of the greatest reforms in dealing with that of our nation's strongest foes. This Sunday school is manifesting unusual interest and its attendance breaks records. We want the good work to go on. Every enrolled member can be a promoter.

3:00 o'clock Junior League. These meetings coming at mid-afternoon do most effective work. We urge upon the parents to see that the boys and girls are assembled in this meeting.

6:00 p. m. Epworth League. At this time the senior young people meet for religious culture. Your life work may depend on the kind of training you get in these gatherings. We have known where life decisions have been made in young people's work. Those decisions determined the future vocations of the participators. Get this lesson. "Get out and get under" is a good motto.

7:00 p. m. evening worship. The character we will discuss is Simon Peter. The text, "Simon, Simon, Satan hath desired to have thee that he might sift thee as wheat but I have prayed for thee that thy faith fail not." Come and help us sing.

Prayer meeting this Thursday at 7:00 p. m. Young people's prayer hour 7:30. Regular prayer meeting read the last chapter of the Acts of the Apostles, and come to the meeting.

Ladies' Literary and Sewing club meets with Mrs. Frank Partridge, Coast Guard Blvd., this Thursday at 2:30 p. m.

The renovating of the church is under way. With several to help, this work ought not to inconvenience the church services more than a couple Sundays. If any of our men can give us a day's work or more the pastor will appreciate it if you will call him.

That Valentine party was a good one. Eighty-three persons spent a most enjoyable evening. The Epworth League is to be congratulated because of the way the whole affair was managed. Games, eats and program were well received. We believe our guests had a good time.

About $2 is received by the grower for the wool that goes into a $60 all-wool suit of clothes.

Conclusive Proof That Advertising Pays

Advertising has made the Victrola dog famous.

It has made the cash register a big brother to retailers all over the world.

It has introduced the world to a substitute for sole leather.

It is replacing the truck horse with 40 horse power trucks.

It has helped you to an appreciation of Stetson hats, Walk-Over, Douglas and Emerson shoes.

It has made the hand written letter an oddity in business.

It has put hair oil on heads where no hair oil would do any good, and on heads where no hair oil was needed.

It has put Castoria down your throat, left bristles in your gums, and then came along with a Rubberset and took them out.

It has put Sozodont, Pebeco and Pepsodent on your teeth.

It has put a Gillette or a Durham Duplex against your hayfield.

It has put Maurine in your eyes, sold you Cuticura for pimples, Pears for the bath and Ivory for the tub.

It has put Arrow collars around your neck and Ingersols around your wrist.

Go anywhere you want to, do anything you wish, and advertising has had a hand in it—absolutely.

THE EDITOR'S EASY CHAIR

We have a friend who breezes into our office at stated intervals, and if perchance he finds us at our desk he sings, "The editor sat in his easy chair." Now, this man is one of our very best friends but we resent his continual assumption that the editor does nothing but sit in his easy chair. Another man came in to collect a bill this morning and he found us setting a head at the case. "Why, I thought you never worked," said this humorist. "Why, my dear sir," we replied, "I have worked nearly 31 years in a printing office, and as publisher of newspapers over 18 years." "A very commendable record you may well be proud of," he replied, and then proceeding further, said: "It seems to be a prevalent idea throughout the community that an editor just loafs about the office and draws his salary." Ye gods and little fishes! Do people believe that the newspaper prints itself? Do they imagine the types just march into line and fill columns? If some of the men who think an editor sits in an easy chair could spend a whole day with the said editor, they would very quickly change that point of view.

Then there is another wise guy who calls at the office at intervals and brings in a column or two of matter "just to fill up the paper." If the average reader of any newspaper could see the editorial waste basket he would be amazed at the amount of propaganda, free press stuff and vain efforts to get advertising published as news that goes into that waste basket every day. Just why, otherwise intelligent men, will spend money in an effort to get something for nothing in the newspaper is one of the big problems of today. Ever since the world war, when newspaper editors generously printed columns of free matter for the war loans, the army and navy activities, and other appeals for foreign relief, a hundred corporations have been trying to get into print on the same basis. They have wasted enough money in this effort to pay for the space they seek at the regular advertising rates. Politicians, reformers, charity workers, a hundred welfare organizations that pay everybody else a salary, pile the editor's desk high with free publicity. For a time the editor smiled and hung the copy on the compositor's hook, but as everybody got to doing it, the hook wouldn't hold the free copy and the waste basket got the overflow. Today the waste basket won't hold it and most of it goes direct from the editorial desk to the baler. In self-defense the editor who seeks to meet his bills and pay his employees has adopted the very simple little slogan: "You charge, we charge." Which means that advertising for all events where an admission fee is charged must be paid for.

No, the editor does not sit in an easy chair. He has as many problems as other business men. He puts in as many hours and goes home just as tired as other business men and he never needs any copy "just to help fill up the paper."

DROVE 500 MILES FROM WARSAW HERE

U. of I. Students Make Record Trip in Ford

Four University of Indiana students—W. M. Toner, Howard Allen, Townsend Allbright and Wilhelm Moenkhaus, accompanied by a negro chauffuer, drove into this city last Saturday afternoon in a 1924 Ford touring car, having covered a distance of approximately 500 miles since leaving Warsaw last Wednesday morning. They were headed for Walloon Lake, where Mr. Toner has a cottage which they will occupy for the balance of the winter, writing short stories for the Associated Press and the college papers. All were attired in aviation helmets, leather vests and leather trousers and gave the impression of a polar expedition by aeroplane.

While not exactly as strenuous as that would be, however, they had excitement enough. Just a few miles out of Anderson, Ind., their car turned turtle and they had to right it themselves. They took M-13 to Cadillac, which they made in a single day from Warsaw. From Cadillac into Kalkaska they were hung up in the drifts twenty-nine times and had to get out and lift their car bodily over the bad places. In fact, as Mr. Toner put it, "We practically had to carry the car between the two towns." They were the first car through this year from Kalkaska to Traverse City, but made this part of the run with much less difficulty.

HO-DE-O-SA MAKES GOOD RESOLUTIONS

Will Refrain from Bad Practice of Note-Writing

Good for Ho-de-o-sa! They have the right idea and it is one that we, with them, may recommend to all who would be classed as conscientious students. Note writing is "bad medicine," whether in school, love or politics. Here is something they are going to try and live up to:

"The Ho-de-o-sa Campfire Girls think a resolution made and broken is better than none made at all. We have decided that too much of our time, energy and paper has been wasted in note writing, which came to be a regular habit. So all have promised to stop. Last, but not least, we hope the rest of C. H. S. will see thru this and join with us."

However, in a spirit of mischief, we cannot refrain from musing with the poet:

"Resolutions? Yes—we make them,
"Not to keep them, but to break them;
"For we're only poor, weak mortals after all."

Resolutions of Respect

WHEREAS, It has pleased our Heavenly Father to remove from our midst our worthy brother, James Meggison, who departed from this life February 10, 1925; therefore, be it

RESOLVED, while we recall the many times he met with us and the unceasing interest and loyalty he always manifested in Grange affairs, we shall mourn his departure.

THAT, while we mark the sickle of death, it is only needful that "our weeping endureth for a night, for joy cometh in the morning."

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, That we, as members of Charlevoix Pomona, No. 40, extend to the bereaved family our deepest sympathy, knowing that he has entered that Paradise not made with hands and received his reward.

Co-Eds Entertain

Mrs. Ed Stewart's class of young ladies of the M. E. Sunday school entertained Mrs. Beeman's class of young men at a pot-luck supper in the church dining room on Saturday evening, February 14th. Games were played and a general good time enjoyed.

An Improvised Pipe Vise

A pipe cannot be held securely in the ordinary type of bench vise, as the jaws permit only a single line contact on each side of the pipe. By using a monkey wrench, with the jaws placed along the axis of the pipe, the effort produced is almost the same as that of a pipe vise. The wrench should be set so that it bears on the pipe only on the edges of the jaws.

GOOD ROADS

DETERMINE EXPENSE OF ROAD BUILDING

Too often, when road improvements are contemplated, first cost is the only item considered. There are other items which must be taken into consideration before deciding the type of road to be built. The amount and character of the traffic which may reasonably be expected to pass over the road during its lifetime should be determined as near as possible, so the life of the pavement may be estimated. If more than 500 vehicles a day travel a road, it should be paved; between 300 and 100 vehicles per day, a gravelled road will serve. Less than 100 vehicles a day can be most cheaply served by dirt roads. The entire maintenance cost during the life of a pavement plus the first cost will determine the actual cost of the improvement. This, divided by the number of years the pavement will last, will be the true guide which will point out the most economical type of paving.

Because of its low maintenance cost and its long life, concrete is an economical type. The high maintenance costs of the old style pavement will make its actual yearly cost far more than that of a concrete pavement.

There are certain items of maintenance common to all roads, whether improved or unimproved. Cutting weeds, cleaning ditches, repairs to shoulders, guard rails and similar items are to be expected in maintaining all types of road construction.

The maintenance of the wearing surface of the road, however, will vary the type of road built. In paved hard-surfaced roads such as concrete, this item of maintenance is almost a negligible factor, and the items common to all roads are those which make up the bulk of the cost.

In the old style "improved" roads, however, the maintenance of the surface is by far the most important item. Modern traffic tears up the old style road and continually necessitates large expenditures to repair the wearing surface and keep it in passable condition. With such a surface the unavoidable items of maintenance fade into insignificance before the vast sums expended to maintain its surface.

The savings in maintenance costs on a concrete road will soon pay the difference in first cost and will actually save money every year thereafter for the community. It is the poorest kind of economy to build roads that wear out in a few years. The staggering maintenance costs that pile up with this type of construction will soon lead a community into financial difficulties. Especially is this true when such construction is paid for by bond issues maturing many years hence.

The only method of reducing maintenance costs is to build the roads in such a way that they will have permanency and low cost of upkeep.

What is said to be the longest straightaway of concrete is the 83 miles between Anoka and Belle Prairie, Minn. While this is not the longest stretch of paved roads in existence it is the longest of one pavement type, and gives an insight into the concrete paving program that is being carried on in all parts of the country.

For many years California led all other states in this type of paving. In recent years, however, the Middle West has come into the good roads limelight with Illinois in the lead and voting at the coming election on another issue of $100,000,000. The East which started its program only a few years after California began building concrete is progressing in good shape. New York and Pennsylvania are the two leaders in this section. Pennsylvania passed a $50,000,000 road bond issue in 1918 and last year another $50,000,000 road bond issue was passed, and is to be invested as was the one previously. Aside from the expenditure of these road bond issues, Pennsylvania annually expends about $17,500,000 on her roads from current revenues collected through automobile license taxes and fees and gasoline tax.

In the South, North Carolina is the leading road building state. Hundreds of miles are being built annually to connect the rich farming lands of this section with the trade centers, and also to provide tourist routes to the mountain resorts in the eastern part of the state.

In Easy Communication

The 91 Jewish colonies of Palestine, 41 of which owe their development to the Palestine foundation fund, are now all in easy communication with the cities through the motor lines and new roads, thus affording them excellent opportunities for the prompt disposal of their products.

Use "German" Concrete

Concrete similar to that used by Germany for gunpits during the World war will be used by the state roads commission in repairing concrete roads in Maryland. Tests just completed show that the new cement hardens within 24 hours to a strength equal to the standard cement formerly used. This latter requires hardening for 28 days before it may be used. Use of the new cement will allow repairs to be made without prolonged closing of roads repaired.

BROOD SOWS DEMAND SPECIAL ATTENTION

Those who are expecting fall litters should pay special attention to the feeding of their brood sows. A sow that is not properly fed during the period of pregnancy cannot be expected to do her best at farrowing time.

The tendency is to rely too much upon corn as an exclusive feed for the sows. There are no harmful properties in corn; it is a good feed so far as its fattening qualities go, but it is not suitable for muscle and bone building. It is not necessary to exclude corn from the brood sow's rations—not at all; but it is necessary to feed with it something that is comparatively rich in protein, such as rankage, oil meal or shorts, the former being preferable in most cases because cheaper—not cheaper per ton but cheaper per pound of protein content.

A hog needs a certain amount of animal protein, and since it can nearly always be purchased cheaper in tankage than in any other form, why not use this product to a greater extent? A brood sow that is fed one pound of tankage with each peck of corn, while on pasture, will produce healthy, vigorous pigs.

A year ago last spring farrowing records were kept on 53 Kansas farms by the experiment station of that state. From these records it was found that 263 sows that were fed corn properly balanced with tankage, skim milk, oil meal or alfalfa, farrowed 2,689 pigs, or an average of 10.1 pigs per litter. These sows also had good surroundings and were well cared for. Of these pigs 64 per cent were raised to weaning time. In other words 6.5 pigs per litter were thrifty when old enough to wean.

Another lot of 166 sows, on 11 farms, farrowed an average of 7.2 pigs per sow and raised 3.8 pigs per litter. These sows had received practically nothing but corn. The unbalanced ration decreased the size of the weaned litters by 40 per cent. Such results are not uncommon; on the contrary, they invariably follow the feeding of corn alone to pregnant sows. A sow can no more produce muscle and bone out of corn, which is deficient in the constituents out of which they must be produced, than can a mason make mortar out of sand and water. One is as impossible as the other.

Feed a balanced ration to the brood sows now while they are carrying their litters and you will have a lot of strong pigs this fall.

Minerals Fed to Steers Found to Be Beneficial

Minerals for steers were tried at the Iowa station during the past winter. A mixture of 50 pounds ground limestone, 50 pounds spent bone-black and one-third ounce of potassium iodide was fed to the steers at the rate of one ounce per head per day. The steers in this experiment got shelled corn, corn silage, clover hay and oil meal, with salt available at all times. The cattle which had minerals gained slightly better, had a better appetite and were a little better finished at the end of the feeding period than other cattle which had the same ration minus the minerals.

Mineral feeding to steers is still in the experimental stage, but the results at the Iowa station indicate that it may be worth while. Where good clover or alfalfa hay is fed, we should expect that minerals have less effect than in a ration in which the hay has less mineral matter than clover or alfalfa. Those who can easily secure the minerals can well afford to try the Iowa mixture with their next load of steers.

Disease is Dangerous.

Tuberculosis is a danger. A clean herd safeguards your family, increases herd value, protects the milk supply, is a protection to the buyer and a satisfaction to the seller.

Have Purebred Females Too.

Of course the purebred sire is the first step, but there's no good argument against purebred females in livestock improvement.

WAS PURE BUT SHE DRIFTED

THUS IRONTON RESIDENT HAS WRITTEN OF OUR SNOW

He Tries to Hide Behind a Pen-Name But It Won't Work—We All Know Him

The following spasm appeared in the Michigan Farmer, under dote of February 14th (last Soturday) under the interesting caption, "She Was As Pure As Snow—But She Drifted." It is signed, "Hurv Hess," but we'll bet a round, fat cookie that isn't what the preacher called this bird when he first introduced him to an admiring world. There's only one Ironton resident we know who is capable of perpetrating anything like the following:

"And ere the early bed-time come
The white drift piled the window frame,
And, when the second morning shone,
We looked upon a world unknown.
No cloud above, no earth below—
A universe of sky ond snow.

Some of you babies, that's well-read, may recognize the above little chant as being an extract from the poem called "Snowbound," which John G. Whittier knocked off some sixty odd years ago and, although I didn't know John personally, I'd almost be willing to gamble that he was residing up near the top of Michigan when he dictated it. It's a cinch he wasn't playing golf at Palm Beach.

It's almost too long ago to remember when I was in school, but we made a profoond study, as only a kid can, of this here poem. However, it didn't make moch of an impression because the town that I done all my heavy learning in was south of the state of Michigan—down where they let oot school if four inches of snow fell, so the kids could enjoy it. Consequently it was over the heads of most of us scholarly imps. Bot since I've improved Michigan by moving into it, I have reread that poem and I can get the drift of it now. I know what a drift is. And I'll say this for old John, he knew his snow. Sometimes I wish I was a poet, or even a poetess. I'd like to write a poem about Winter. I'm afraid, though, it might be what they call blank, blank, verse.

This morning, right after I'd massaged my stomach with a stack of wheats, I got out of my stanchion and went over to our desk, intending to write a breezy little article on "How to Raise Monkeys for Profit," but when I looked oot of the window of our igloo and saw and heard one of the blizzardiest of blizzards raging, why I thought I'd better change the subject to "How to Raise Heating Plants." All you've got to do is keep yoor Corona oiled up, yoor eye out the winilow and nature will do the rest.

I'll always remember the first real snow-storm I ever saw. It happened right here in what I call Snow Man's Land, and it was the first winter I ever spent so close to the Arctic Circle. In the town I formerly graced with my presence, they spoke of snow in the hallowed term of "inches," whereas up here, where the rural mail carrier drives a team of Polar bears and where even the trees are furs, why, anything under a foot is spoken of as just a light frost.

Anyway, this here arctic heat wave struck us from the southeast, rather gently at first, but getting worse and worser until by the second or fiftieth day, I've forgotten which, it was fairly coming down in gobs. Now, you know it's a funny thing, but men who have made a comprehensive study of snow will tell you that no two flakes of snow are the same shape. I would have thought, after this here one snow storm alone, that they'd have run out of designs, wouldn't you? I know it all looks alike after it's spread over a few acres. And don't get the idea that all snow is as soft as feathers, like the bards would try to make you believe. You pot some of it right in front of a northwest gale and try to stop it and she'll cut the buttons right off your duds. Believe me, Major Jack Frost can lay down a snowbill barrage across Snow Man's Lund that you can't dodge by getting in trenches. 'Snu wooling. I recall one night me and another Eskimo drove a guy, who had to have a real sudden operation, seven miles to a moan factory and we bucked one of those Iceland typhoons all the way. When we finally got there the surgeon had three patients to work on.

Bot I'm like the snow, I keep drifting from the subject. "Where was I?" he exclaimed, slowly regaining his senses. Oh, yes, I was telling you about my first snow-storm. Well, when they finally run out of ammunition and quit the bombardment, you simply wouldn't have recognized this state as Michigan. It looked more like what Commodore Peary discovered. Honestly, I never knew such a change could be wrought on old Mamma Nature's pan and in such a short time. I goess they figured Ironton, our thriving city of seventy souls and half soles, had been dead long enoogh and they'd better bury it. They done a good job. The only way you could see outside was by looking straight up the flue and if it happened at Christmas time old Santa would of passed us up cold, for he never would of seen the chimneys.

Only last week I was reading in a paper from Illinois that all of six inches of snow had fell and as a result traffic was demorolized. North of Traverse City six inches of snow wouldn't lay the dust. After this big storm it was eleven solid days before Father Marquette broke through with his string of stage coaches, and in some of the cuts they couldn't find the right-of-way for days. It's easy to see why we have so many valleys—the ground has to cave in a little with all that excess weight on it.

Just think of having your front yard and everything else you got, filled with a commodity you don't need no more than you need a third lung. And there's nothing you can do with it, after you once get it, but try and make it feel at home. I often wonder what us Michiganders ever done to draw it all. Why don't they spread a little over Texas or the Panama Canal occasionally.

The day before this deloge hit us we were out sliding around the country in the flivver, never dreaming it would be the last time we would have her out for four months. That's a long time to have to pass the filling stations without gossing, and it's a pretty good thing for old John D. Oilfeller they ain't that way all over, or he wouldn't be any richer than some of us farmers. But after this storm was over, automobiles, Fords, trains, animals, birds, clocks, everything quit running except a guy's nose.—Snow! Look just as far as you could, and you wouldn't see nothing else but. And it stayed right where it was put, too, until April.

I remember how us kids used to hope for a white Christmas, and may-be get one once every ten years. In Snow Man's Land the kids often pull their Hollowe'en pranks on snow-shoes. As one of the old timers says: "We just have two seasons—Winter and August." Old stuff, but not bad.

And speoking of cold, it and snow are as inseparable as ham and eggs. Where one is you're pretty near certain of finding the other, and if you'll stop yawning for a few minutes, I want to take time enough to correct an old shop-worn expression.

I was at a stag party down in a city in Illinois one night, and a ten-minute egg breezed in among us who had just returned from a winter spent in some state bordering the Circle—I don't recall now whether it was Michigan or West Virginia—but, according to this walrus, it was somewheres where zero is a sign of spring. And while us hot-house cucumbers were standing around listening to some of his yarns that literally made the shivers run up and down our spines, he pulls this old moss-covered crack—"but up in that country, you don't notice the cold." I love that term.,

In the first place, that expression wos either originated by a cold-storage rooster or a seal, and it has been handed right on down through the ages. It's the first words a Eskimo mother teaches her offspring, the babies around here all whistle it, and you can take it from me; it's the bunk. Cold? Why, half the time our cows give ice cream. You've heard of frozen egg-nog, haven't you? We gather it every night down at the hen house. The wife bakes a cake, puts it in the woodshed aver night and in the morning it's frosted. I leave the kitchen with a dish of tomatoes and by the time I reoch the dining-room it's chili. Oh, no, you don't notice the cold! Neither does an icicle. If you're planning on coming up our way, don't put any stock in that phrase whatever. You take my advice and pack your trunk with all the duds you can beg, borrow or steal.

Just the same, you'll like our winters. No kidding. They're healthy. One week in this climate and you won't have no more germs on you than the Goddess of Liberty. A microbe is just something we read about. And cosmetics? Our pill vendors don't carry them. If a girl wants a little local color, when she's dolling up for a one-man gathering, she just sticks her head out the window into Madame Ozone's Beautie Shoppe and she's all rouged up in a jiffy with the stuff that won't rub off lon her shick's shoulder).

Variety is the spice of life, they tell us. Think of the contrast us Michiganders can enjoy between January and July, and say, wouldn't you hate to have to live in California, for instance, where the people dress and act the same from January first to New Years? Some monotonous, eh?

No, sir, it's a fine place to live and I hope I never have to run for governor of Georgia. And I also hope they don't ever divert the Gulf Stream or the Japan Current into Lake Michigan.

That's all."

SAUCES FOR MEATS AND FISH

There is an art in the preparation of sauces and a science in combining flavors that is only discovered by the cook who has the touch, the taste and the consciousness of the importance of good cooking and serving.

A French sauce is a thing of surpassing delicacy. It is expensive too, for it takes time to collect ingredients and prepare them. No chef who smokes or indulges in alcoholic drinks can ever attain perfection in sauce making. One must have a very sensitive sense of taste. There are few who can equal the French in the making of sauces. The flavoring of seasoning is the thing most conspicuous.

Sauces are a thickened fluid flavored in various ways with vegetables, meat boned and spiced with all sorts of herbs and aromatics. The thickening consists of starch in some form, either flour, cornstarch, arrowroot, prepared in the form of a roux, which may be any of these cooked in butter; for brown roux the floor is browned. Egg yolks are also used as thickening.

The liquid for the sauces may be stock, milk or butter, or in cold sauces, oil. The vegetable flavors are onions, leeks, garlic, peppers, green, red and hot; carrots, turnip, celery and mushrooms. Zest is sometimes added from the rind of lemons or oranges.

Herbs and aromatics are thyme, marjoram, bay leaves, parsley and chervil. The bones used for the sauces for meat are preferably veal bones, crushed and roasted. Fish heads and fish bones are used for fish sauces. We have a basic sauce prepared with flour or starch of some form with butter, milk or stock, called white sauce. The brown sauce is prepared by browning the flour, or in an emergency adding color in the form of caramel.

Tomato sauce is prepared much like soup. The object of all sauces is to serve a savory fluid appropriate to the dry dish with which it is to be eaten.

"Listen. If I go ashore, your responsibility for my life ceases, Mr. Webster, but if the chief engineer happens to be short one coal-passer and the captain sends me down to the stoke-hole your responsibility for my death begins, for I'll be put ashore publicly at San Buenaventura and two hours later I'll be facing a firing squad in the cemetery at the Catedral de la Vera Cruz."

"Gosh," John Sparr Webster murmured dazedly, "I'm afraid I can't take a chance like that for fifty dollars, I'm whipped to a frazzle. Any time I'm sitting in back of a royal flush and the other fellow bluffs me out of the pot, I always buy the wine. When it arrives we shall drink to our better acquaintance. Pending its arrival, please be advised that you are welcome to my pajamas, my cigarettes, my book and my stateroom. You are my guest and you owe me nothing, except, perhaps, your confidence, although I do not insist upon that point. Where I come from every man kills his own snakes."

And he held up his hand for Andrew Bowers to shake.

"Mr. Webster," the latter declared feelingly, "I am not a lord of language, so I cannot find words to thank you. I agree with you that you are entitled to my confidence. My name is—"

"Tut, tut, my boy. Your name is Andrew Bowers, and that identifies you sufficiently for the time being. When I suggested that I was entitled to a measure of your confidence, I meant on a few minor points only—points on which my curiosity has been abnormally aroused.

"Very well, my friend. Fire away."

"Are you an American citizen?"

"No, I am a citizen of Sobranie."

"You had no money to pay for your passage to San Buenaventura so you schemed to make me pay your way. Hence I take it that your presence in the capital of your native country is a matter of extreme importance and that the clerk in the ticket office of the Caribbean Mail line is a friend of yours."

"Quite true. He knew my need."

"You were under surveillance and could not leave New Orleans for San Buenaventura unless you left secretly. When I purchased both berths in this stateroom and the ticket clerk knew I held a first-class ticket for a valet that was not, he decided to saw off on me a valet that was. Disguised in the livery of a chauffeur and carrying hand luggage you hoped to get aboard without being detected by your enemies who watched the gangplank."

Andrew Bowers nodded.

"Do you think you succeeded?" Webster continued.

"I do not know, Mr. Webster. I hope so. If I did not—well, the instant this steamer drops anchor in the roadstead at San Buenaventura, she will be boarded and searched by the military police, I will be discovered and—" He shrugged.

"Lawn party in the cemetery, eh?" Webster suggested.

Andrew Bowers reached under his pillow and produced two heavy automatic pistols and a leathern box containing five clips of cartridges. These he exhibited in silence and then thrust them back under the pillow.

"I see, Andrew. In case you're cornered, eh? Well, I think I would prefer to die fighting myself."

"I'm not worried Mr. Webster. Somehow, I think I ran the gantlet safely."

"But why did you throw your livery overboard?"

"It was of no further use to me."

"But you'll have to have some clothes in which to go ashore, you amazing man."

"Not at all. The steamer will arrive in the harbor of San Buenaventura late in the afternoon—too late to be given pratique that day. After dark I shall drop overboard and endeavor to swim ashore, and in view of that plain clothes would only prove an embarrassment, I shall land in my own country naked and penniless, but once ashore I shall quickly find shelter. I'll have to risk the sharks, of course."

"Man-eaters?"

"The bay is swarming with them."

"You're breaking my heart," Webster declared sympathetically. "I suppose you're going to feign illness throughout the voyage."

"Not the kind of illness that will interfere with my appetite. I have prescribed for myself a mild attack of inflammatory rheumatism, as an excuse for remaining in bed and having my meals brought to me. This service, of course, will necessitate some slight expense in the way of tips, but I am hoping you will see your way clear to taking care of that for your guest."

Silently Webster handed Andrew Bowers ten dollars in silver. "That ought to hold you," he declared. "For the rest, you're up to some political skullduggery in Sobranie, and what it is and what's your real name are two subjects in which I am not interested. Let it be understood that you are my valet, Andrew Bowers. That's all I know about you and that's all I care to know about you. In fact, the less I know about you the less will I have to explain in the event of your sudden demise."

"Fair enough," quoth Andrew Bowers. "You're a man after my own heart. I thank you."

BANK ROBBERS ARE AFRAID OF STATE

Michigan is getting the name of a hard state for bank robbers to operate in. While the desperadoes have been successful in escaping after robberies in the larger cities in a number of instances, the robbing of a bank in a smaller town has almost invariably been followed by pursuit and arrest of the criminals.

"One of the most notable cases during the past year ended in the arrest of a gang accused of robbing banks at Springport and Gregory. Three of the alleged bandits were identified by persons who were in the Springport bank when the robbery occurred. In this case the robbers made a clean getaway but were later rounded up by state police.

A clue was turned up in Detroit by state police there which resulted in a raid being made at Battle Creek by state police and local authorities in which the suspects were taken. This was possible because of the cooperation between various units of the state police and local officers.

SPECIAL PATROL ASKED

Comulasioner Harry H. Jackson of the Department of Public Safety of Michigon has asked the state legislature to appropriate funds for a highway patrol in the resort and fruit-growing sections during the summer and fall seasons. These troopers are not only needed to check violation of the motor vehicle laws but also to protect orchards and do general police work. Presence of a courteous body of officers on the highways, who will aid motorists, is expected to encourage tourist travel.

TRAVELER'S TAX FOR POOR ROADS IS BIG

There is an oft asserted statement that paved roads pay for themselves—but how and in what coinage? Is the pay to be taken in better living conditions that can scarcely be measured in dollars and cents or can a real money earning value be placed on them?

The Arizona Gazette Phoenix is in an excellent position to answer that question, since Maricops county in which that daily is located has the largest mileage of concrete roads of any single county in the world—a total of 307 miles of concrete. These roads were let in two contracts and the enterprise commanded nation-wide attention during their construction in 1920-23. This newspaper editorially quotes statements of Highway Engineer H. E. Phelps of the College of Engineering, state of Washington, in which he decries the attempt to lower taxes by an "assault upon the taxes being levied for good roads." As this authority sees it, the traveler's tax for poor roads is greater than the tax necessary to build good roads. He says:

"If we had concrete surfaces to drive upon, we could pay a tire tax of 67 per cent and still spend no more for tires than is required for our present road surfaces."

Mr. Phelps then calls attention to the experiments that have been made to determine the amount of gasoline that is needed on different kinds of roads, saying that these experiments show that a gallon of gasoline will haul one ton 14 miles on earth roads, 21 miles on gravel and 31 miles on concrete.

Taking the weight of an automobile as 1.4 tons and the price of gasoline as 20c per gallon, this highway engineer tells what happens to your gasoline tank as the car passes over various kinds of roads in the following manner:

"When the car reaches the end of the concrete and starts down a gravel surface, the extra gasoline required costs as much as a tax of 6.23 cents per gallon, and when it reaches the end of the gravel and starts down the average poor earth road, an added cost of ten cents per gallon is the traveler's tax caused by the poor road."

In a similar vein, Fred R. White, chief engineer of the Iowa state highway commission, addressed the county supervisors of his state in August, 1922, telling them that highway taxes represent less than 15 per cent of total taxes and are responsible for only one-eighth of the total increase in taxes since 1910. "Whenever a cigar is lighted," he said, "the smoker proceeds to burn up the highway taxes of the average Iowan for from three to six days" and also "a quarter section of land taxed at $2 an acre contributes approximately one cent per acre to the county engineering work."

INDENTIFY FUGITIVES

The identification bureau of the Michigan Department of Public Safety now makes an average of nearly 200 identifications each month. Recently four fugitives from Michigan prisons were arrested in one town in Iowa and identified through fingerprints sent out from the bureau at Lansing.

UNDER THE DOME AT LANSING

By Ed A. Nowack

(Special to the Courier)

Lansing, Feb. 19.—Law making will run along smoothly if the governor and house and senate leaders have their way. All remaining legislation is scheduled to be threshed out between the three great powers at pre-session conferences and dinners. Two already have been held. The final edges of the highway program were trimmed down at a dinner party given by Gov. Groesbeck while the tax questions were settled at a round table conference in the tax commission offices. The boys like it. Squeezing up closely to the governor they say they discover he is human. And the governor is said to now have the idea that the senators and representatives—many with whom no truce was effective two years ago—are equally human. Big business methods, with round table discussions, will hold sway. The reapportionment measure, introduced by Rep. Culver, Detroit, will likely be included in those get-to-gether talks.

Speaker Fred Wells, Cassopolis, easily stands out as the big figure in the harmonizing features. What his inquiry into taxation two years ago developed and convinced him was the proper handling of highway matters, is now a living, breathing thing. Briefly, here are the results of the get-to-gether meetings:

The state will take over construction and maintenance of trunk lines. No new contracts carrying state rewards will be entered into after April 1. The state reward feature will be repealed. The Covert law will be repealed two years hence. The highway department and administrative board are to be given authority to construct 500 miles of trunk lines. Major taxation problems were solved, two bills, taxing all foreign bonds and mortgages on a five mill basis and municipal bonds, school and road district bonds, on a three mill basis, being now before the session.

Unemployment is Devil's Weapon

As a profound protest against Chicago's continued Great Lakes water grab, the house has adopted a joint resolution sending three representatives and two senators to Washington to protest.

The constitutional amendment to the child labor law was made a special order of business for Tuesday of this week after a torrrid torrent of of talking that showed several members possessing fine oratorical abilities. Rep. John Espie, Eagle, won the greatest measure of applause. "More young folks are going to hell through unemployment than from overwork," he said in seeking to kill the bill.

The reapportionment measure by Rep. Culver, Detroit, would give Wayne 25 representatives, Genessee three instead of two, it would group some of the smaller counties and is fashioned exactly like the reapportionment bill of the special session which was held constitutional by the attorney general.

Rep. Sink, Ann Arbor, would have supervisors appoint an examiner for all cattle shipped into counties, to prevent spread of infectious disease. Failure by shippers to report would be punishable. Rep. Harris, Boyne City, would authorize domestic fraternal benefit societies to hold in fee or otherwise necessary real estate for national headquarters, charitable homes or institutions established or maintained by it, permitting rental of unoccupied portions of such property. Another bill by him would allow insurance societies to issue paid-up protection, extending protection, or cash withdrawal equities; also to permit use from reserve fund of any member not more than two and one-half percent of the certificate's face.

Rep. Culver, Detroit, would suspend inheritance tax on real estate inherited by close blood relatives. Wives, children, parents, grandparents, brothers, sisters, and other direct relatives would benefit only. The 1923 session amended the old law that exempted those classes. Rep. Smedley, Grand Rapids: Where a plaintiff set up a claim, stating he believed there was no defense, and unless the defendant gave notice he had a defense and set it forth in cases of claim or judgment that was at issue, it could be adjudicated and disposed of in favor of the claimant.

Supervisors Could Bond

Rep. Howell, Saginaw: Would authorize supervisors to bond county for $75,000 for fair ground buildings and improvements. Rep. Brake, Newaygo: Would relieve autoists of liability for injuries to guests in auto accidents. Rep. Armstrong, Detroit: Asks $15,000 appropriation to pay for state acquisition and distribution of war trophies. Rep. Johnson, Northville: Asks for tax levy on publicly or privately owned libraries open to the public to pay for operation and maintenance.

Rep. Ormsbee, Flint: Would have school children under 18 hold certificates permitting them to work during school sessions. The law now fixes the age at 17 but prohibits those under 18 from working unless they have the required public school courses. Rep. Reid, Detroit: Would fix punishment for narcotic law violation to five years or $2,000 fine to conform to federal law. Rep. Darin, River Rouge: Would strengthen garnishment law in connection with sale of goods in bulk. Rep. Look, Lowell: Would remove limitation on office of sheriff. Rep. Darin, River Rouge: Would imprison petty thieves who steal coin from depositories designed for the convenience of the public in paying for merchandise.

Compulsory Auto Insurance

Senator Young, Lansing: Asks compulsory liability damage for autoists of $5,000. Car owners could not get license tags until they deposited certificates of insurance with county clerks. Latter would be charged with appointment of two arbitrators to view the accident, determine damage, file reports thereon, but would not make the reports competent evidence. Non-residents featuring in the accident, would, along with others, be compelled to report immediately all smashups to the county clerk of that county and deposit bond twice the determined damage until liability and settlement had been effected. This law would enrich insurance companies about $10,000,000, it is estimated.

Making Cupid Wait

Senator Brower, Jackson: Would give $5,000 pensions to supreme court justices who retire or resign. Senator Quinland, Grand Rapids: Would require five days' delay in issuing marriage licenses to permit filing of legal objections, also require birth certificate.

Senator Condon, Detroit: Provide a $25 fine for persons picking wild flowers and plants without consent of the owner of the property. Sen. Leland, Fennville: Asks a $2,000 appropriation for horticulture society. Rep. Warner, Ypsilanti: Would require a $5 poll tax from voters prior to May 1 each year. Supervisors would have to prepare list of voters. Failure to pay tax is punishable by $100 fine or 90 days. Such a bill would produce $5,000,000 in revenue, it is said.

Rep. Cora Anderson, L'Anse: Would exempt housewives from jury duty. Rep. McKenzie, Concord: Wants to protect black bear and quail. Senator Truettner, Bessemer: Banks holding 50 year leases on property can claim capital investment as deductions against personal property assessments same as banks holding 99-year leases.

Senator Case, Ithaca: Would prevent aliens from carrying guns. Senator William Case's bill authorizing employment by counties of public health nurses passed the senate unanimously. Rep. Green, Alpena: Would permit supervisors to borrow 50 per cent of the tax levy in anticipation of such tax levy.

Rep. Bryant, Traverse City: Asks $350,000 appropriation for new normal, to be located by state board of education, $100,000 of that sum to be used for operating expenses in 1926. Site selected will have to furnish grounds.

Rep. Espie, Eagle: Farmers who lose cattle through disease eradication would be reimbursed by county for the difference between appraisal and salvage returns.

THE PLAYGROUND OF A NATION

WESTERN SHORE OF MICHIGAN SO TERMED

Michigan Tourist and Resort Asso. Tell of Huge Land Grab by Chicago Speculators

Chicago speculators have snapped up at least $25,000,000 worth of "The Playground of a Nation."

Secretary Hugh J. Gray, manager of the Michigan Tourist and Resort Association returned recently from a week's Florida trip with blood in his eye and a determination to sound the warning to West Michigan to avert the situation into which Florida has fallen; of the increases in land valuation filling the pockets of outside speculators.

Chicago's land grab, not unlike the water grab, comprises most of the Lake Michigan shore-line from New Buffalo to Whitehall and considerable inland lake frontage. It is in expectation of the tremendous development in values which the speculators predict as a result of the 1925 and 1926 $100,000 campaigns of the Michigan Tourist and Resort association to bring hundreds of thousands of tourists here. Instances of amazing increases in values are already cited. One 20 acre tract on Lake Michigan was offered to a Chicago speculator at $3,500 last winter. It sold last summer for $12,000. Another tract over twice as large was bought in by Chicago speculators near Muskegon for $4,500 and they are now debating its sale at almost $20,000.

These instances are but a narrow vista of the large increases due in 1925 and 1926, as a result of the bringing of tourists here. The tourist campaign fund, now in the process of being raised, will put West Michigan's summer message into the great magazines and most of the great newspapers of America, beginning in April, and as surely as night follows day will bring great increases in valuation. These increases will follow the great tourist business of 1925.

Secretary Gray, ordinarily mild in manner, was furious as he pictured the possibility of the fruits of years of tourist association work sending a golden stream into the coffers of those to whom it does not rightfully belong because west Michigan folks "are sound asleep to the natural wonders they own" and their possibilities.

"Syndicates are working quietly everywhere. One syndicate bought several thousand acres near South Haven; another brought Jenison Beach and all the shoreline between Macatawa and Saugatuck; another has large acreage near Muskegon and there are dozens more at work" said Mr. Gray. "I want to see West Michigan cash in on this, not the speculators. Our 1925 campaign, if well supported, will increase values and I want you to tell every citizen of west Michigan to hold his property for the peak, so as to cash in on the tourist association's years of effort; I want to also tell them to get behind the association this year as they never have before. Let every citizen give his quota of support to the association in the full realization of the large real estate increases that are to result and let him cash in on that increase—get it himself by holding for the coming profits and supporting the association work."

Field Representative Blakely of the association who has been through the territory securing pledges of support for the tourist association, states that the territory is solidly behind the 1925 campaign plan and he reports glowingly of work achieved in several counties. "Peculiarly the speculators find their easiest picking in places where association support has lagged" said Mr. Blakely. "The reason for this is logical. The citizens there prize their natural possessions no more than they back the work of popularizing west Michigan and the so-called land grabs are numerous where people fail to see the possibilities surrounding them."

"Hold your land" is the clarion call sounded by Hugh Gray "and capitalize what nature has given us by backing the work of bringing more thousands of tourists here in 1925 than ever before."

RED AND WHITE WINS AND LOSES

DEFEATS SOO QUINT BUT PETOSKEY GETS THEM

Nearly Three Hundred Fans Make Long, Cold Trip in Cars to Back Up Locals

Up until last night, Charlevoix was the only undefeated basketball team in the north. Details of the set-back at Petoskey appear below, but we are now concerned with victory—not defeat and want to tell you folks how the Red and White handed a 14 to 11 lemon to the fast Soo outfit at the local gym last Friday night.

This game was fast and rough and belonged to anybody until the final whistle. Pete Hallett played brilliant basketball for the locals, making two field goals and two fouls. Brown and Dagwell also played a great defensive game. Harrington also played fine ball, both on offense and defense.

The line-up:

C. H. S.		S. H. S.
Harrington	F.	Campbell
Hallett	F.	McMaster
Brown	C.	Larson
Jones	G.	La Praire
Glasgow, (C.)	G.	Sendles

Substitutions: C. H. S.: Dagwell for Brown; Brown for Harrington.

The game at Petoskey Tuesday evening was well attended from here, nearly three hundred Charlevoix people driving over to see it.

The game opened with fast playing on the part of both teams. A foul was called on Charlevoix and McCabe made one free throw. This was followed by a foul called on Petoskey and Harrington made a free throw. Hoffman of Petoskey came to the front with spectacular playing early in the first quarter, which continued throughout the game.

The first half of the game ended with a score of 8 to 15 in Petoskey's favor. There was considerable fast, hard work on the part of both teams, but Charlevoix seemed to be lost on the big floor to which they were not accustomed.

After having their courage renewed during the intermission between halves, the boys of the Red and White seemed to have gained organization and team work and during the third quarter they outplayed their opponents.

During the last quarter, Hoffman of Petoskey sunk a number of long field baskets and shot the score so far ahead of the local team that the latter seemed to have lost their ability to work as they usually do.

On the whole, it was our "night off." Neither Petoskey nor Charlevoix played as fast as they have in previous games.

The final score was 13 to 30. No one starred on the Red and White quintet, but Hoffman, a new man on the Petoskey team, made about 20 of our opponents' points. Martin Duane, of Grand Rapids, refereed.

TYPES OF PASSES

The ability to use any one of a number of passes with ease and dexterity is an important phase of bnsketball. Let us consider, very briefly the various kinds of passes and their uses.

First we have the Underhand Passes. These may be executed with either one or two hands. As a general rule, the underhand pass is more useful with a team of small players than with taller ones.

The one-handed underhand pass is short and swift. It is made from the height of the middle of the thigh, with elbow bent slightly. Wrist snap is used. A tall man has difficulty in receiving an underhand pass because when in motion, his knee may hit the ball and cause a fumble.

The two-hand underhand pass is used in the short pass style of play. It is slower than the one-hand pass but more accurate. The ball is brought close to the body, thigh high and released in a sweeping movement, one step usually being taken in executing it.

The two-hand underhand pass is used:

1. After a pivot to pass to a team-mate trailing the play;
2. In the short-pass game when a criss-cross style of play is used;
3. As an easy way of passing the ball quickly after getting a fumble or a bounce pass;
4. When the receiver has his back to the basket and wishes to pass to an oncoming team-mate. The pass is hard to guard from behind and the team-mate needs a slow, "float" pass to catch without slowing up.

The Overhand Pass can also be executed with one or two hands, being released from a height between wrist and shoulders. In the underhand pass the arms and fingers are turned down, and in the overhand pass, they are turned up.

The one-hand overhand pass can be made either short or long. The short pass is made with considerable snap and with a long, sweeping motion of the arm. It is generally made shoulder high, the trajectory of the ball being on a flat downward line. The palm of the hand is in the direction of the throw, fingers pointed up and spread.

The two-hand overhand pass is usually a short pass. The ball is held on its sides, palms pressing in, fingers upward and thumbs toward the body. There is more wrist-snap than in the case of the one-hand pass and the ball is usually brought close to the body and released as the arms are straightened. This is a good pass for general use and gives excellent control of the ball, the best, in fact, of all. It is likewise very easy to teach.

(This is second of a series of talks on basketball taken from lectures in the four-year course in physical education at the University of Michigan. The next will appear in an early issue.)

ROAD BUILDING

TOURIST BUSINESS GROWING RAPIDLY

Because the American people have, almost over night, developed into a nation on wheels, the tourist business has become one of the really big industries of the country. In fact, there are more automobiles in the United States than there are telephones, and that people are getting the habit of using their cars for sight-seeing purposes is proved by the reports from various secale centers.

Wealth in quantity is spent where the tourists go. It is a spot cash proposition, and if positive figures could be secured as to the amount of money spent every year by motor tourists, the total would undoubtedly be surprising. Take California for example. This state has grown to be the wealthy commonwealth it now is, largely because of a farsighted plan laid out some years ago for attracting tourist traffic to the state and then holding it. Prior to the San Diego and San Francisco expositions, California laid a great mileage of concrete boulevard, fifteen feet wide and four inches thick. The state engineers knew at the time that the roads weren't thick enough to hold the future heavy traffic, and so officially termed the pavement concrete "base," planning later to put on a top surface. In 1915 the state laid 575 miles of this road. Today California has about 3,500 miles of permanent concrete road to delight the tourist.

What this good roads program meant to California is shown by the records of the various tourist bureaus. The California State Automobile association estimates that there were approximately 300,000 tourists during Scene Along the Hudson River.

1923 who spent an average of $10 per day per person during an average stay of thirty days. This would place the total of new money put into circulation in California by tourists in one year at about $90,000,000. There has been a steady increase in motor tourists during the past few years. In 1920 but 17,611 motor tourist cars entered the state. This increased to 20,725 in 1921 and to 66,054 in 1923.

The state of Washington, with its one thousand miles of concrete roads, is also coming in for its share of tourists. The Seattle chamber of commerce states that in the month of June this year 15,004 cars from thirty American states, Alaska, Hawaii and other places entered Blaine on the way to British Columbia. In 1923 some 63,024 cars registered for entry. Last year the Dominion parks branch, Ottawa, Canada, estimated the tourist traffic in Canada worth $150,000,000.

In Colorado there were 643,015 campers in the 247 auto camps of the state in 1923. The state of Iowa has over 200 tourist camps at various towns and cities—each attracting its quota of motor wanderers.

On August 13, the tourist welcome bureau of Milwaukee, Wis., registered 706 motor tourists, which is estimated at only about one-sixth of those passing through. The tourist business in this state is regarded so highly that boy scouts patrol the highways leading into Milwaukee, acting as guides for the incoming tourists. Wisconsin is especially attractive to the motor gypsy, because of its 1,700 miles of concrete highway and its fine system of road marking.

The 2,500 miles of concrete in New York state has also been a drawing card for motorists. It is estimated that in the Finger lakes region alone over 400,000 motorists passed through last year, spending on an average of $10 each per day. The principal attraction there is scenery and good roads. The thirty chambers of commerce in the Finger Lakes association, which was formed five years ago, took active part in having approximately $15,000,000 worth of hard-surfaced roads put on the construction program for the next few years.

Plan Road Illumination

At a meeting in Washington recently of the committee on highway engineering at the joint conference on street and highway safety, under the leadership of Secretary of Commerce Hoover, plans were discussed to lessen highway accidents.

Highway illumination was the first important project discussed, and it was reported that in this respect the Pacific states are making rapid progress. California has already planned a highway lighting system.

STERILIZED VESSELS ESSENTIAL IN DAIRY

The dairyman who does not have a well-defined idea of what each and every cow in his herd is producing is in a bad way for making the greatest possible income out of his herd.

So many men cannot yet realize the absolute necessity for use of the Babcock test for butterfat percentage determination. Year after year many a man works all day and half the night under the mistaken impression that the cow that produces the most milk is the best cow. Such is not always the case.

The cow that produces 40 pounds of milk a day that tests 2.8 per cent returns 1,120 pounds of butterfat which when sold at 40 cents a pound returns an income of 45 cents daily. The cow that produces 25 pounds of milk a day testing 5 per cent returns 1,250 pounds of butterfat which when sold at 40 cents returns 50 cents per day. In the course of a month the cow producing 15 pounds of milk less a day will return to her owner $1.50 more and if the same relation should hold true for a year this would amount to $18. difference, which on a herd of 20 cows would run into real money.

So it is not always the low producer that should be culled out. There are more cows giving 40 pounds of 2.8 per cent milk than most people realize and usually they are profitable cows, but so often the cow producing but 25 pounds of 5 per cent milk is regarded as an unprofitable cow when in reality she returns more than the cow making 40 pounds daily.

A butterfat test on every cow every month of every year will serve as a valuable indication of the true worth of the cows. Such a test can be obtained in almost every section of the state either through cow-testing associations, cow-testing circles, cream stations, county extension agents or Smith-Hughes schools.

A little trouble every month may save many a dollar spent for feed on an unprofitable cow.—H. R. Lascelles, Fieldman for Colorado State Dairy Commission.

CHOOSING A MAYOR OF VITAL IMPORTANCE TO ALL

Election of Bergeon Means Continuation of Present Business Methods—Courier Sounds Warning

There seems to be some little discussion about the city regarding the election of a mayor. Here again we come to a place where we must decide whether there is anything a newspsper should publish for the information of the public. Until shortly before the last day for filing petitions it looked as though there would be no opposition to the renomination of our present mayor. He has been active, efficient, and economical. For some unexplained reason the term of office is one year, while an alderman holds two years, receives a renomination for a second term, making a four year tenure. Many cities have changed their charters to provide for a two or three year term for the mayor, but Charlevoix has never done it. We have conceded that a good mayor is entitled to foar years in the office if he is willing to accept it. Former Mayor Rose received a four year tenure. On this ground, we thought that Mayor Bergeon should have no opposition.

When the voter gets to the point of deciding as to his vote, he or she, proceed to compare the candidates both as to personsl qualifieations and ability. Comparisons are usually effective when made fairly and honestly and without prejudice. In the present election, it hnppens that we can go further in the comparison, as both candidates have previously held the office, Arthur Bergeon for the past three years, and Andrew Ross during the year 1916.

At the close of the year 1916-17, when former Mayor Ross finished his one year term and had been succeeded by former Mayor Rose, the city had no cash on deposit, but on the other hand, had an overdraft against the general funds of $927.51 witb outstanding time orders amounting to $2,630.05 and other indebtedness to be met during the current year besides running the city business until the July taxes were collected. This overdraft would have been $8,000 larger had not the Ross council in October, 1916 transferred $8,000 from the Electric light fund to the Street fund. On April 1st, 1917, the Street fund had an overdraft of $8,050.28, in spite of the $8,000 paid into it from the Electric fund.

During 1917, the council, under Mayor Rose, was compelled to borrow money and pay interest from April to and including September on a total sum of $23,600 to keep the city running and of course had to continue this borrowing und paying of interest until the finances could be caught up. The amount of money the city paid in interest to straighten out this financial fiasco is so large that we lost heart in trying to compute it. Mayor Rose and the city council of those years, 1917-18-19-20, whittled down the large overdrafts in every possible way without crippling the city business, and Mayor Bergeon by close attention to finances has overcome the condition so that today we find the condition shown by the following statement. All this has been done without an excessive levy of taxes and during Mayor Bergeon's term, without reaching the full limit af taxation allowed by law which is fifteen and one-half mills.

TAXPAYERS SHOULD CALL A HALT

SWING BRIDGE TINKERING HAS COST CITY HARD CASH

Duty of Supervisor is to Protect City's Interest, Not to Grind Axe at Taxpayers' Expense

Ordinsrlly it is the policy of this newspsper to refrain from taking sides in city primary elections. It is only when some vital matter is involved affecting the city and taxpayers that we interfere, and then only to state facts and conditions.

Some think the office of supervisor of little importance. This is a serious mistake. The supervisors not only sit on our local board of review, but represent us on the Board of Supervisora where matters of vital interest are decided.

Every section of the county has its own peculiar interests. Our section of the county has never asked for more than fair treatment and we always mean to be fair and liberal in our attitude toward other parts of the county. This is as it should be.

Right now, we have in mind the matter of the maintenance of the swing bridge. There is something wrong here. During the past five years, the board of supervisors have conceded that it is a burden for our small community, after hnving built and paid for an expensive bridge over navigable waters, to stand the entire cost of maintaining it. With the Ironton Ferry, the county atands it all, and the East Jordan bridge and other bridges in the county have received material aid. The county's share of the cost of maintenance of our bridge during the past five years has averaged $1,736 per annum.

At its October, 1924 session, the board of supervisors, for some reason, fixed a future minimum of $1,200 per annum as the county's share. This means an added burden to the taxpayers of the city of $536 per annum, or $2,680 for the next five years. The voters' inquiry should be, "Who is responsible for this, and why?"

We have investigated on our own account, and find that the question is to be asked and answered by the votors of the 1st and 3rd wards of this city. Look to your representatives.

It appears that the supervisors from these wards not only permitted this thing to be done, but actually instigated and fostered it. Why? It msy be that they believed the bridge engineer was receiving too much salary, or did not approve of him personally. In either case, it was none of their business. The City Council attends to that, and when any supervisor assumes to interfere with the City Council in the exercise of its judgment, particularly when such interference is going to hit the taxpayer, it is high time he is questioned and put in his place.

This is the voters' duty and the voters' responsibility.

PROMINENT SUMMER RESIDENT EXPRESSES VIEWS

Approves Park Plan and Argues We Might Take a Tip from Florida Boosters

A local business man has recently received a letter from one of aur most praminent snd substantial summer residents who has considerable property interests in this vicinity. This gentlemen writes as follows with regard to the proposed park proposition:

"I have just been infarmed af the parking improvement had in mind by some of the progressive citizens of Charlevoix.

A fine thing. Hope it will be unanimous and that every resident of Charlevoix will bet behind and shove!

This is what some of us wanted badly years ago, as old files of the Courier will disclose.

It will cost, of course. Cost like h——ll But what good things don't? It would be a good object lesson to our folks to see the way the citizens of Florida pour out their money for the enjoyment, pleasure and comfort of Northern tourists and for every dollar they pay out in taxes, interest and assessments they get two back! Nohody these days hollers very loud when they can clean up 100%. Ain't hearin' any particular loud squeals, are you? And Florida has no more to offer tourists in winter than we have in summer, except as they put their fists in their pockets and buy the commodities for their visitors to be mixed with their climate und which the visitors thoroughly enjoy and jump at the privilege of paying a long price for.

Go to it, Bo! Hope your wind and that of the rest of the stnge-hands holds out."

And there you have it. Undoubtedly, the above is the sentiment of ninety per eent of our summer residents in the matter. But they want to see evidence of some sort of interest on the part of the townspeople before they make a move. And you can't blame them. What's the use of spending money and time where it's not appreciated?

RELIEF CORPS LADIES PROVE THEIR COURAGE

Embark Upon Wild Journey on Speeding Bob-Sled

No one can any longer doubt—if, indeed there ever was a doubt—that the ladies of the Charlevoix Woman's Relief Corps are entirely worthy in point of courage to be the "better hnlf" of that valorous organization of veterans which we reverc as the G. A. R.

On Thursday afternoon, six ladies of the corps were returning from a tea at the home af Mrs. Olive Nowland on the South Side and on reaching the crest of Bridge street hill were invited by W. C. Bellinger to ride the remainder of the way on his bob-sled. The invitation was promptly accepted and the trip made without mishap—no teeth lost, or anythin'. A thrilling experience.

The brave ones whose names will be posted in the local hall of fame are Mrs. C. R. Bellinger, Mrs. E. C. Sterritt, Mrs. Dores, Mrs. Ellison, Mrs. Prevost and Mrs. Helen Nowland.

A GREAT EOUCATOR HAS PASSED

PRESIDENT BURTON OF THE U. OF M. IS DEAD

State As Well As University Owes Much to Its Ablest Educational Leader

Marion LcRoy Burton, president of the University of Michigan, passed away early last Wednesday morning after a four months' illness. Dr. Burton's illness started last October when he was taken down with pneumonia. The strenuous life he had led in despatching his dutles had so weakened him that he was unable to recover completely from the first attack. He suffered a relapse in January and again in February. This last, complicated with pleurisy and a weakened heart, proved too much for even his rugged constitution and with merely a sigh in his sleep another great man has left the realm of the physical.

Dr. Burton came to the University of Michigan from the University of Minnesota five years ago. Before that time he had been newsboy, teacher, preacher, college professor and president of Smith College and the University of Minnesota. An unusually capable executive and a firm believer in state education, he inaugurated a program destinced to make our university second to none as an institution of higher learning. This expansion, both in physical equipment nnd student body, has never been surpassed by an American university and is so far under way that there is no turning back. The Michigan campus when complete, will stand as a memorial to President Marion LeRoy Burton, the man who conceived it, who made it a reality, who gave his life for it.

Dr. Burton was a big man, more than six feet tall, very broad of shoulder, red headed, forceful and yet, to one in his presence, the physical was completely overshadowed by the radiation of his dominating personality. Always in good humor, always with a kind word, a smile, a helping hand—he was held a true friend and endeared to all that knew him.

The nation has lost a valuable statesman, a man who was fast winning recognition in national politics; the university an able leader.

On receipt of the news the local Michigan club sent the following telegram to Mrs. Burton: "In your bereavement and that of the university in the loss of one endeared to all, please accept our sympathy.

University of Michigan Club of Charlevoix,
Robert Bridge, President,
Kaye Buttars, Secretary."

CONVENTION AND TOUR COME HERE

SORORITY AND GOOD WILL TRIP ARE BOOKED

College Fraternity Will Be Here About a Week in June—Milwaukee Bunch Brings Band

A. I. Creamer, manager of the Charlevoix Inn, advises the secretary of the local Association of Commerce, writing from Weymouth Heights, Southern Pines, N. C., that the Phi Mu National Sorority convention has been booked for this city; will arrive in Charlevoix on June 27th and remain until about the 2nd or 3rd of July. Their representative, Miss Dora Sharp of Baker University at Baldwin City, Kansas, has written Mr. Creamer to inquire regarding places of interest, boat trips, etc. and this request has been turned over to the association.

Mayor Bergeon has also received a letter from the Milwaukee Association of Commeree with the announcement that the Annual Goodwill Tour of that body will include Charlevoix in its 1925 itinerary. The tour begins June 7th and the party is to be back to Milwaukee on the 13th. The exact date of their arrival here is to be decided later. The visitors will be 150 in number and represent the leading financial, mercantile and manufacturing establishments of Milwaukee. They will bring with them their band of 25 solo musicians. They ask for no special entertainment but the letter intimates that an automobile tour of the city might be an interesting feature. They will also be glad to visit the business establishments of Charlevoix and get acquainted with our local people.

Charlevoix is rapidly coming to the front as a convention city. Its beautiful natural advantages have been enhanced by fine hotels, a golf course second to none in the state, tennis courts, stables of fine horses, wonderful roads, an auto camp that is known far and wide for its delightful location and good management and facilities and wonderful opportunities for the enjoyment of the fisherman and water sportsman promoted by live organizations of sportsmen and yachting enthusiasts.

To come to Charlevoix once is sufficient to inspire one with the desire to repeat a delightful experience.

FOUR TRUNK-LINES FIGHT

FOR STATE'S ATTENTION IN SPRING CAMPAIGN

M-11 Has Superior Claims But Her Rival Lines Are Showing Stronger Backing

The people of northwestern Michigan are confronting a serious situation this season in the competition existing between the communities served by faur trunkline highways of the state's north and south system in the lower peninsula.

Each section is plugging hard to have its own particular route given the attention af the state highway department this spring and the outcome, though uncertain at present, unmistakably means that whichever road is favored this year leaves its neighbors high and dry without any appropriation at all. If M-14 is the lucky road, then M-11, M-13 and M-10 must wait, and likewise with the remaining three if another of the four is selected.

Fortunately for us, the natural udvantage and the logic of the argument lies with the supporters of M-11 and M-13, but the bunch out gunning to get M-14 paved this year is a live-wire outfit and working hard and persistently. We cannot lie down and sleep or they will walk over us to success while we slumber.

Of course, without taking our own personal bias in the matter into account. M-11 is the logical route to complete this year because there is so little of it left to complete. When the twenty-seven mile strip from Beulah to Grown is let and completed, M-11 will present a continuous concrete surface from Chicago to Traverse City. If started this spring, the two ends of the concrete should meet at Grawn in time for the resort traffic of 1926.

The unfinished section now under contract includes six miles north of Pentwater from Pentwater to Ludington and twenty-two miles from the end of the present pavement north of Manistee to Beulah.

Setting against this the approximately 100 miles on M-13 not yet under contract (which would have to be finished to bring the concrete to Kalkaska or opposite Traverse City) and the even greater amount of unlet road construction on M-14 and M-10, we have the superior claim of M-11 to immediate attention thrown boldly into relief.

As a further argument in favor of M-11, it may be truly stated that the work necessary to finish it will involve far less interference with traffic next summer than would be true with respect to the other competing routes. The reason for this is that we can use M-22, a beautiful, paved, scenic route as a dctour—really an advantage, as this cross-trunkline passes through some of the finest country to be found along the route.

In all of the districts save that served hy M-11, business men and hotel owners are busy bees, trying to swing things their way. An "M-13 Association" has been formed, with three representatives from Petoskey, three from the Straits, three from Cadillac and delegations from Grand Rapids, Jackson and various other points along the line. This is a "booster" association, pure and simple. Mt. Pleasant, Everett, Clare and Houghton Lake also have a more or less definitely formed organization to plug for M-14. However, no move as yet has been made by M-11 supporters to put their route on the state's 1925-26 working plans. Maybe it's time for us to get busy.

GRAYLING BOY KILLED BY SHELL

Military Investigation Will Probably Result

Warren Stephan, 12 years of age, is dead at Grayling from playing with an explosive shell carelessly left on the state military range near that place.

Several lads found the two-inch shell last Sunday and tried to explode it on the ice. The Stephan boy took it home, and Monday showed it to another boy. He says, "This is the way to explode it," and dropped it on a workbench in the family garage.

The shell exploded with disastrous results, the charge entering in front of the abdomen and coming out over the left hip. He was rushed to the hospital but nothing could be done for him and he died in about half an hour. The intestines were torn to pieces. The casing of the shell was scattered all over the garage, but the other boy did not happen to get struck by the pieces.

This will be a case for a military investigation probably to find who is responsible for leaving explosives on the range where children could find them.

MAKE RUN TO ISLAND IN AN AUTOMOBILE

Residents of St. James Give Up Use of Horse for Mainland Trip

The automobile has finally come into its own.

Those energetic and adventurous Irishmen from the Beavers have given up the old Dobbin in favor of the motor bus for their winter trips from the islands to the mainland.

"It takes too long with the horses, said one member of a party of four residents of St. James who motored to Petoskey over the ice for a two-day stay on business and pleasure. "With the car we made it in three and a half hours and did not even feel the cold."

The trip from St. James led the men north along the island shore to Hog Island, then east to the mainland and south to Cross Village. Every short ways the men ran afoul of great piles of ice over the reefs but these were successfully circled and the old gasoline wagon kept pounding right along southward.

The men who made the trip were W. J. Gallagher, Ivan Gatliff, C. M. Melville and Joseph Floyd.

TRUSTS—What They Are, and What They Are Not,—When WE Speak of Them.

They are not the organizations, once more common than now, described popularly as "Trusts" (why, it is hard to say) which seek to control some necessity of the public and hope to sell it at an abnormal profit.

A Trust, in the legal sense, means property or money placed in the care of a Trustee, for a laudable purpose,—the general or unlimited use or benefit, under specific instructions, of a designated person or persons, or of a church or other organization, or of several such.

We are now intrusted with the investment, care, and the distribution of the income, of many millions of dollars under such "Trusts". Our organization is trained by 35 years' experience, to do these things the right way.

Are you interested in the support of a missionary institution or other organization, in China, in Turkey, in India, or in any other part of the world? Do you want it to receive regularly the income from a stated fund? As Trustee, for an agreed fee, we will furnish, at cost, suitable securities, collect the income, and make the desired remittances. This would be a "Trust".

The same is true of a fund for the benefit of American churches and charitable institutions you would assist,—without reference to sect or denomination. This would be a "Trust".

Do you wish to aid in the support of relatives or friends, with the income from a fund, and upon their death to give others the income? This would be a "Trust".

Do you wish to provide through a fund for the future care and education of a baby, or a child? This would be a "Trust".

Our charges are largely, if not entirely, offset by the pecuniary advantages arising from our methods, to those interested in the "Trust".

The common habit of waiting for your last will and testament to take effect, is of doubtful wisdom. Get the joy that will be yours, from seeing the "Trust" work, with freedom from care.

Write for our circulars "Trusts in General",—"Life Insurance Coupled With a Trust",—"Inheritance Tax Trusts", and "Baby Trusts". Ask us questions. It is an important subject,—get acquainted with it.

WEBSTER —MAN'S MAN

by Peter B. Kyne

Author of "Cappy Ricks," "The Valley of the Giants," Etc.

CHAPTER IX.

Prior to leaving New Orleans, Webster had cabled Billy Geary that he was taking passage on La Estrellita and stating the approximate date of his arrival at San Buenaventura—which information descended upon that young man with something of the charm of a gentle rainfall over a hitherto arid district. He had been seeing Dolores Rney at least once a day ever since her return to Sobrante. He was quick, therefore, to seize upon Webster's cablegram as an excuse to call upon Dolores and explain the mystery surrounding his friend's nonappearance.

"Well, Dolores," he began, in his excitement calling her by her first name for the first time, "I've heard from Jack Webster."

"What's the news, Bill?" Dolores inquired. From the first day of their acquaintance she had been growing increasingly fond of Geary; for nearly a week she had been desirous of calling him Bill, which is a comfortable name and, to Dolores' way of thinking, a peculiarly appropriate cognomen for such a distinctly American young man. At mention of the beloved word he glanced down at her pleasurably.

"Thank you," he said. "I'm glad you got around to it finally. Those that love me always call me Bill."

"You called me Dolores."

"I move we make it ananimous. I'm a foe to formality."

"Second the motion, Bill. So am I—when I care to be—and in our case your formality is spoiling our comradeship. And now, with reference to the extraordinary Senor Webster—"

"Why, the poor old horse has been down with ptomaine poisoning. They carried him off the train at St. Louis and stood him on his head and pumped him out, and just did manage to cancel his order for a new tombstone. He says he's feeding regularly again and has booked passage on La Estrellita, so we can look for him on the next steamer arriving."

"Oh, the poor fellow!" Dolores murmured—so fervently that Billy was on the point of hurling his heart at her feet on the instant.

The thousand dollars Webster had cabled Billy "for a road-stake" had been dwindling rapidly under the stimulus of one continuous opportunity to spend the same in a quarter where it was calculated to bring the most joy. Mr. Geary was absolutely bogged in the quagmire of his first love affair, but until his mining concession should amply justify an avowal of his passion, an instinctive sense of the eternal fitness of things reminded Billy of the old proverb that a closed mouth catches no flies. And in the meantime (such is the optimism of youth) he decided there was no need for worry, for when a girl calls a fellow Bill, when she tells him he's a scout and doesn't care a whoop for any society except his—carramba! It's great!

A wireless from Webster warned Billy of the former's imminent arrival. Just before sunset Billy and Dolores, riding along the Malecon, sighted a blur of smoke far out to sea—a blur that grew and grew until they could make out the graceful white hull of La Estrellita, before the swift tropic night descended and the lights of the great vessel shimmered across the harbor.

"Too late to clear quarantine tonight," Billy mourned, as he and Dolores rode back to her hotel. "All the same, I'm going to borrow the launch of my good friend Leber and his protege Don Juan Cafetero, and go out to the steamer tonight. I can heave to a little way from the steamer and welcome the old rascal, anyhow."

"That You, Bill?" He Shouted.

Fortunately, good little Leber consented to Billy's request, and Don Juan Cafetero was sober enough to turn the engine over and run the launch. From the deck of the steamer Webster, smoking his post-prandial cigar, caught sight of the launch's red and green sidelights chugging through the inky blackness; as the little craft slid up to within a cable's length of the steamer and have to, something told Webster that Billy Geary would soon be paging him. He edged over to the rail.

"That you, Bill?" he shouted.

"Hey! Jack, old pal!" Billy's delighted voice answered him.

"I knew you'd come, Billy boy."

"I knew you'd know it, Johnny. Can't come aboard, you know, until the ship clears, but I can lie off here and say hello. How is your internal mechanism?"

"Grand. However, your query reminds me I haven't taken the medicine the doctor warned me to take after meals for a couple of weeks. Wait a minute, Bill, until I go to my stateroom and do my duty to my stomach."

For ten minutes Billy and Don Juan Cafetero bobbed about in the launch; then a stentorian voice shouted from the steamer. "Hey, you! In the launch there. Not so close. Back off."

Don Juan kicked the launch back fifty feet. "That will do!" the voice called again.

"Hello!" Billy soliloquized. "That's Jack Webster's voice. Wonder what he's up to. I thought he acted strangely—preferring medicine to me the minute I hailed him!"

While he was considering the matter, a voice behind him said very softly and indistinctly, like a man with a harelip:

"Mr. Geary, will you be good enough to back your launch a couple of hundred feet? When I'm certain I can't be seen from the steamer, I'll come aboard."

Billy turned, and in the dim light of his binnacle lamp observed a beautiful pair of white hands grasping the gunwale on the starboard quarter. He peered over and made out the head and shoulders of a man.

"All right," he replied in a low voice. "Hong where you are, and you'll be clear of the propeller."

He signaled Don Juan, who backed swiftly away, while Billy doused the binnacle lamp.

"That'll do," the thick voice said presently. "Bear a hand, friend, and I'll climb over."

He came, as naked as Mercury, sprawled on his belly in the cockpit, opened his mouth, spat out a compact little roll of tinfoil, opened it and drew out a ball of paper which he fluttered out on the floor of the cockpit and handed to Billy.

"Thank you," he said, very courteously and distinctly now. "My credentials, Mr. Geary, if you please."

Billy relighted the lamp and read:

"Dear Billy:

"I do not know the bearer from Adam's off ox; all I know about him is that he has all the outward marks of a gentleman, the courage of a bearcat, a sense of humor and a head for which the presidente of Sobrante will gladly pay a considerable number of pesos oro. Don't give up the head, because I like it and we do not need the money—yet. Take him ashore without anybody knowing it; hide him, clothe him, feed him—then forget all about him.

"Ever thine,

"J. S. WEBSTER."

"Kick the boat ahead again, Cafferty," Billy ordered quietly. He turned to the late arrival. "Mr. Man, your credentials are all in apple-pie order. Do you happen to know that this bay is swarming with man-eating sharks?"

The man raised a fine, strong, youthful face and grinned at him. "Hobson's choice, Mr. Geory," he replied. "Afloat or ashore, the sharks are after me. Sir, I am your debtor." He crawled into the cabin and stretched out on the settee as John Stuart Webster's voice came floating across the dark waters.

"Everything well with you, Billy?"

"All is lovely, Jack, and the goose honks high. By the way, that friend of yours called with his letter of introduction. I took care of him."

"Thanks. I suppose you'll call for me in that launch tomorrow morning?"

"Surest thing you know, Jack. Good-night, old top."

"Good-night, Billy."

Don Juan Cafetero swung the launch and headed back for the city. At Leber's little dock Billy stepped ashore, while Don Juan backed out into the dark bay again in order to avoid inquisitive visitors. Billy hastened to El Buen Amigo and returned presently with a bundle of clothes; at an agreed signal Don Juan kicked the launch into the dock again and Billy went aboard.

"Hat, shirt, necktie, duck suit, white socks and shoes," he whispered. "Climb into them, stranger."

Once more the launch backed out in the bay, where Webster's protege dressed at his leisure, and Billy handed Don Juan a couple of pesos.

"Remember, John," he cautioned the bibulous one as they tied up for the night, "nothing unusual happened tonight."

"Divil a thing, Misther Geary. Thank you, sor," the Gaelic wreck replied blithely and disappeared in the darkness, leaving Billy to guide the stranger to El Buen Amigo, where he was taken into the confidence of Mother Jenks and, on Billy's guarantee of the board bill, furnished with a room and left to his own devices.

* * * * * * * *

John Stuart Webster came down the gangplank into Leber's launch hard at the heels of the port doctor.

"You young horse thief," he cried, affectionately. "I believe it's the custom down this way for men to kiss each other. We'll dispense with that, but by—" He folded Billy in a paternal embrace, then held him at arm's length and looked him over.

"Lord, son," he said, "you're as thin as a snake. I'll have to feed you up."

As they sped toward the landing, he looked Billy over once more. "I have it," he declared. "You need a change of climate to get rid of that malaria. Just show me this little old mining claim of yours, Bill, and then hike for God's country. Three months up there will put you right again, and by the time you get back, we'll be about ready to weigh the first cleanup."

Billy shook his head. "I'd like to mighty well, Jack," he replied, "but I just can't."

"Huh! I suppose you don't think I'm equal to the task of straightening out this concession of yours and making a hummer out of it, eh?"

The young fellow looked across at him sheepishly. "Mine?" he jeered. "Who's talking about a mine. I'm thinking of a girl!"

"Oh!"

"Some girl, Johnny."

"I hope she's not some parrakeet," Webster bantered. "Have you looked up her pedigree?"

"Ah-h-h!" Billy spat over the side in sheer disgust. "This is an American girl—born here, but white—raised in the U. S. A. I've only known her three weeks, but—nh!" And Billy kissed his hand into space.

"Well, I'm glad I find you so happy, boy. When do you pull off the wedding?"

"Oh," said Billy, "that's premature, Jack. I haven't asked her. How could I until I'm able to support her?"

"Look here, son," Webster replied, "don't you go to work and be the kind of fool I was. You get married and take a chance. A man ought to marry young, Bill. Hang the odds. I know what's good for you."

At the hotel Billy sent a note to Dolores, apprising her that John Stuart Webster had arrived—and would she be good enough to receive them?

Miss Rney would be that gracious. She was waiting for them in the veranda just off the patio, outwardly calm, but inwardly a ferment of conflicting emotions. As they approached she affected not to see them and turning, glanced in the opposite direction; nor did she move her head until Billy's voice, speaking at her elbow, said:

"Well, Dolores, here's my old Jack-partner waiting to be introduced. Jack, permit me to present Miss Dolores Rney."

She turned her face and rose graciously, marking with secret triumph the light of recognition that leaped to his eyes, hovered there the hundredth part of a second and departed, leaving those keen, quizzical blue orbs appraising her in the most natural manner imaginable. Webster bowed.

"It is a great happiness to meet you, Miss Rney," he said gravely.

Dolores gave him her hand. "You have doubtless forgotten, Mr. Webster, but I think we have met before."

"Indeed!" John Stuart Webster murmured interestedly. "So stupid of me not to remember. Where did we meet?"

"He has a profound sense of humor," she soliloquized. "He's going to force me into the open. Oh, dear, I'm helpless." Aloud she said: "On the train in Death valley last month, Mr. Webster."

Webster shook his head slowly, as if mystified. "I fear you're mistaken, Miss Rney. I wasn't on the train in Death valley last month. I was in Denver—so you must have met some other Mr. Webster."

She flushed furiously. "I didn't think I could be mistaken," she answered a trifle coldly.

"It is my misfortune that you were," he replied graciously. "Certainly, had we met at that time, I should not have failed to recognize you now. Somehow, Miss Rney, I never have any luck."

She was completely outgeneraled, and having the good sense to realize it, submitted gracefully. "He's perfectly horrible," she told herself, "but at least he can lie like a gentleman—and I always did like that kind of man."

So they chatted on the veranda until luncheon was announced and Dolores left them to go to her room.

"Well?" Billy queried the moment she was out of earshot. "What do you think, Johnny?"

"I think," said John Stuart Webster, slowly, "that you're a good picker, Bill. She's my ideal of a fine young woman, and my advice to you is to marry her. I'll grub-stake you. Bill, this stiff collar is choking me; I wish you'd wait here while I go to my room and rustle up a soft one."

In the privacy of his room John Stuart Webster sat down on his bed and held his head in his hands, for he had just received a blow in the solar plexus and was still groggy. Presently, however, he pulled himself together and approaching the mirror looked

Advertising has made the Victrola dog famous.

It has made the cash register a big brother to retailers all over the world.

It has introduced the world to a substitute for sole leather.

It is replacing the truck horse with 40 horse power trucks.

It has helped you to an appreciation of Stetson hats, Walk-Over, Douglas and Emerson shoes.

It has made the hand written letter an oddity in business.

It has put hair oil on heads where no hair oil would do any good, and on heads where no hair oil was needed.

It has put Castoria down your throat, left bristles in your gums, and then came along with a Rubberset and took them out.

It has put Sozodont, Pebeco and Pepsodent on your teeth.

It has put a Gillette or a Durham Duplex against your hayfield.

It has put Maurine in your eyes, sold you Cuticura for pimples, Pears for the bath and Ivory for the tub.

It has put Arrow collars around your neck and Ingersols around your wrist.

Go anywhere you want to, do anything you wish, and advertising has had a hand in it—absolutely.

AND THEN SOME MERCHANTS ASK—
"DOES ADVERTISING PAY?"

ONLY BUTTER USED ON THIS FARM

Not long ago on the gate of a Pennsylvania farmstead appeared a sign that read "Only butter used on this form." Wonderful ideo! It ndvertises to the world that this farmer has faith in the product he has for sale. He is doing his bit toward stabilizing the butter market and creating o dependable price for butterfat.

The oleo interests tell us that the United States consumed last year butter substitutes of various kinds to the extent of 226,000,000 pounds. It has been reliobly estimated that one-fourth of this amount, or 56,000,000 pounds were actually consumed on farms hy farmers and their families.

Our present surplus of butter in storage over what we normally have on hand at this time of year just about equals the amount of butter substitutes used in country homes. The fact that we have this surplus has been the leading factor in bringing about the reduction of ten cents per pound that the farmers are receiving for butterfat under what they received last yenr. We are taking butter out of storage faster this winter than last but we must still draw fifty-six per cent faster if the surplus is to be used up before spring. That means someone must eat more butter.

It would be the best thing that could happen to the cow-milking farmers of America if everyone who claims title to a bovine critter would put up a sign on his gote and above his dining table, "Only butter used on this farm." If every farm home was practicing that motto today there would be no butter surplus and I dare say sour cream would be ten cents higher than it now is. Let the oleo manufacturers eat their oleo and the farmers will have to do less crabbing about the price of butterfat.

With the gas tax a permaaent policy the legislature hos the right idea in delegating the authority for road building to a central power. Local bills delegating certain roads for improvement are apt to represent a too narrow viewpoint. The state highway program has reached a stage where the welfare of the whole is more important than temporary local advantage. The quickest way to eliminate good road selfishness, us well us the only way to build up a comprehensive system of state highways is to plant this particular authority in the state rather than trust these problems to the eighty-three counties.

We recall nn adage that we adopted for our own long ago—Never explain: your friends don't need it and your enemies won't believe it.

The stop street signs are nothing else but. One day of actual enforcement of this feature of the state law would be a wholesome thing.

We can't help but wonder if any extra paving will be done on the north side during the coming year.

This is the open season for robin liars.

ROYALLY ENTERTAINED BY SHAKESPEARE CLUB

Dickens Club Members Enjoy Afternoon Program

The members of the Dickens Club were guests of the Shakespeare Study Club at the home of the president, Mrs. Robert Bridge on Dixon avenue, Monday, February 23rd.

The program for the afternoon was opened with two songs, "I Want to Be Happy" and, "It Isn't Any Trouble Just to S-m-i-l-e," sung by the clubs.

The principal feature of the afternoon was a paper written by Mrs. Florence Hooker of Lansing, on "Cubists and Futuristic Art." Mrs. Earl Young read this poper in a very interesting manner and the showing of pictures, illustrating the various developments of each group of artists, added greatly to the enjoyment of the subject.

Annlagous to this art, Mrs. Margaret Swinton showed the same development in music, which she cleverly illustrated by playing two Preludes by Scrinbine, Russion artist.

Mrs. Adah Beeman followed, reading short selections from Gertrude Stein and Alfred Kreymborg, showing similor tendencies in literature.

Complimenting the Dickens Club, the refreshments daintily carried out their club-colors and daffodils, as an accompanying favor, made all feel that spring is here. The committee, consisting of Mrs. Stelter, Mrs. Fitch and Mrs. Clnrence Bridge were responsible for this delightful part of the afternoon's entertainment.

AGED PIONEER WOMAN DIED VERY SUDDENLY

Mrs. Susan O'Neill Succumbs to Heart Attack

Mrs. Susan O'Neill, who has lived at 501 Sherman street, Charlevoix, for the past thirty-seven yeors, died very suddenly at her home where she lived with her son, John and family, last Monday evening ot six thirty o'clock, in her seventy-second year.

Mrs. O'Neill had prepared and enten her evening meal and was sitting in her choir resting, when she complained of feeling badly and asked for a glass of wnter. This seemed to revive her somewhat but shortly afterwards she began to bleed from the mouth. A physician was summoned, but the old lady expired almost as soon os he arrived. Heart trouble is given as the cause of death.

Mrs. O'Neill was the widow of the late Michael O'Neill of this city, who passed away some eighteen yenrs ago. She is survived by six sons and three daughters; Edward, Tom and Jim of Gladstone, and Will, John and Amos of Charlevoix; Mrs. Maggie Webster of Charlevoix, and Mrs. George Wire and Mrs. Claud Morris of Flint. There is a brother, William Stinson of Toronto, Canada, who with a brother-in-law, Jim O'Neill, of Manistique, wos here on a visit at the time of his sister's death and will remain for the funeral. Three children—two girls and u boy, died in their early youth. There are ten grandchildren and four great-grandchildren, olso a number of nieces and nephews.

The funeral will be held at 1:30 p. m. on Thursday, February 26th, from the Methodist church in this city, Rev. H. R. E. Quant officiating. Relatives from out of town expected to be present, besides those already mentioned as now being here, include Mrs. Claud Morris and son, Joe, of Flint; Mrs. George Wire and son, Tom, and James O'Neill and wife of Gladstone.

MASQUERADE BALL AT LAKESIDE A BIG HIT

Fun, Fast and Furious, Lasted Until Past Midnight

The firemen's annual masquerade ball went off Monday night with a loud bang—everything was a hit. Music was fine, floor was good, crowd was genial and orderly and the costumes—well, there were sure some clever ones.

After a few frolicsome dances in mosque, the grand march was called and the judges gave the contestants the "once over." R. C. Korth copped the first gentleman's prize. His costume was a rich colonial garb nnd with his tnll stature and high powdered wig it seemed as though he hud just stepped out of a portrait of the Original Signers of the Declaration. Ralph Hamilton, who walked into the dance hall with an assortment of varigated tinware that would have made a junk peddler turn green with envy, came an ensy second ns a bold knight of the Crusnding period, his crest bearing a packnge of Sweet Burley couchnnt with fess azure, as the old heralds would say, and in "his hand he shook the brand that few but he might wield"—mnde of trusty lath. He was a knockout. Mrs. Charles Lumphear, as a white rabbit with long pink ears and surprising ugility, gnawed a monster carrot nnd landed the ladies' first prize, while Mrs. Homer Brady as n real, old southern mammy, followed with the second award.

Many of the other costumes were worthy of special mention had we time or space. Everybody had a good time and the alarm of fire breaking in upon the evening's entertainment barely mnde a ruffle on the smooth course of the steady round of dancing and was soon forgotten as soon as it was learned that no one's life or property was seriously endangered.

MADE A THRILLING LEAP FOR SAFETY

Horse Jumps Ice Crack with Loaded Sleigh

E. L. Denny and Pat Holland of this city hnd quite a thrilling experience lnst Sunday afternoon. They drove out to Nine Mile Point with a horse and cutter and went out on the ice to fish off Big Rock Point. They were perhaps out about a mile from shore and were just starting in with their preparations when Holland noticed a strip of dark water widening between them and the shore and running in o direction from North Point to the clay-bank.

The two ment got into the cutter nnd drove over to the break, and Denny got out to size it up. "How wide is it," says Pat. "Ahout three feet and getting wider every minute," is the reply. "Get in the sleigh," says Pat, picking up the lines. Denny obeyed. "Giddop"—and over they went, the nog taking the jump in fine shape and keeping his feet on the slippery surface with much good horse judgment. Of course, the sleigh followed easily. Once over, they looked around to see what had become of a bunch of Bay Shore and Petoskey fishermen who were engaged with their lines several hundred yards away from the spot they themselves hnd occupied. These fellows had posted a guard inside of their position to watch the ice, but he hod failed to give warning of the break. Our heroes waited around for a while until they saw the other pnrty get clear awoy of the floe and back on shore and then made for home.

The ice on Lake Michigan is pretty treacherous nowadays. Saturday the the ice broke away and some Bay Shorites went out and pulled about a dozen shnnties off the ice to save them from flonting away.

SIR KNIGHTS ENJOYED THEIR MULLIGAN

Thursdey Evening Supper Porty Was a Whiz

Charlevoix Pythians had a social session last Thursday evening following one of their "Mulligon" suppers. Fifty fellows sat around the "josh-board" and wondered what kind of a chef cooked the decoction before them. Judge Parm C. Gilbert, who is a veteran Pythian, talked to the boys in his friendly, encouraging way ond his words were appreciated. At the lodge session following, a further talkfest was held and then the cribbage and pinochle fans occupied the rest of the evening.

PROSPECT FAVORABLE FOR REAL CITY BAND

Experts are Promotiog and Couocil Favors Plan

The proposition of a city band was put up to the city council at its regular meeting, held this week on Tuesday evening at the library building and met with instant and unanimous favor.

The promotors of the plans are E. C. Sterritt of Charlevoix and A. J. Winnick of Hayes, who represented to the city duds that a fourteen piece band could be formed with players now available if the city would agree to put up for six new instruments. This was agreed to and the gentlemen above named are to look up the prices of the instruments wanted and report to the council at their next meeting the exact amount necessary. It is thought that it will be in the neighborhood of from $250.00 to $300.00.

If everything goes well, it is planned to increase the band by next fall to 24 or 25 pieces by interesting those of the school students who are players in forming a school hand that can be united nt will with the organization of older musicians.

CHAPTER IX.

"Too old," he murmured, "too old to be dreaming dreams."

He changed to a soft collar, and when he descended to the patio to join Billy once more he was, to all outward appearances, his usual imperturbed self, for his was one of those rare natures that can derive a certain comfort from the misery of self-sacrifice—and in that five minutes alone in his room John Stuart Webster had wrestled with the tragedy of his life and won.

He had resolved to give Billy the right of way on the highway to happiness.

* * * * * * *

In Mr. Webster's own whimsical phraseology, his clock had been fixed, on the instant he recognized in the object of his youthful partner's adoration the same winsome woman he had enthroned in his own secret castle of love. From that precise second Billy's preserve was as safe from encroachment by his friend as would be a bale of Confederate currency in an armor-steel vault on the three-thousand-foot level of a water-filled mine.

John Stuart Webster had unanimously resolved upon the course he should have pursued in the first place. He would investigate Billy's mining concession immediately; provided it should prove worth while, he would finance it and put the property on a paying basis; after which he would see to it that the very best doctors in the city of Buenaventura should inform Billy, unofficially and in the strictest confidence, that if he desired to preserve the life of Senor Juan Webstaire he should forthwith pack that rapidly disintegrating person off to a more salubrious climate.

Having made his decision, John Stuart Webster immediately took heart of hope and decided to lead trumps.

Dolores rejoined them for a fiesta after luncheon.

Webster leaned over and slapped Billy Geary's knees affectionately.

"Well, Bill, you saffron-colored old wreck, how long do you suppose it will take for you to pick up enough strength and courage to do some active mining? I'm anxious to get that property on a paying basis, so I can get out of the country."

"Why, Johnny," the amazed Billy declared, "I thought you would stay and help run the mine."

"Indeed! Well, why do you suppose I spent so much time teaching you how to run a mine, you young idiot, if not against just such a time as this? You found this concession and tied it up; I'll finance it and help you get everything started; but after that, I'm through, and you can manage it on salary and name the salary yourself. You have a greater interest in this country than I, William; and so with your kind permission we'll hike up to that concession tomorrow and give it the double-O; then, if I can O. K. the property, we'll cable for the machinery I ordered just before I left Denver, and get busy. We ought to have our first clean-up within ninety days."

"Gosh, but you're in a hurry," Billy murmured. He disliked exceedingly the thought of having his courtship interrupted on a minute's notice.

"You know me, son. I'm a hustler on the job," Webster reminded him brutally; "so the sooner you start, the sooner you can get back and accumulate more malaria. What accommodations have you up there?"

"None, Jack."

"Then you had better get some, Billy. I think you told me we have to take horses at San Miguel de Pudus to ride in to the mine." Billy nodded. "Then you had better buy a tent and bedding for both of us, ship the stuff up to San Miguel de Padua, go up with it and engage horses, a good cook, and a couple of reliable mozos. When you have everything ready telegraph me and I'll come up."

"Why can't you come up with me?" Billy demanded.

"I have to see a man, and write some letters and send a cablegram and wait for an answer. I may have to loaf around here for two or three days. By the way, what did you do for that friend I sent to you with the letter of introduction?"

"Exactly what you told me to do, Johnny."

"Where is he now?"

"At El Buen Amigo—the same place where I'm living."

"All right. When you get back to your hostelry, you might tell my friend I shall expect him over to dine with me this evening, if he can manage it."

For an hour they discussed various subjects; then Billy, declaring the siesta was almost over and the shops reopening, as a consequence, announced his intention of forthwith shopping, said good-bye to Dolores and Webster, and lugubriously departed on the business in hand.

"Why are you in such a hurry, Mr. Webster?" Dolores demanded. "You haven't been in Buenaventura six hours until you've managed to make me perfectly miserable."

"I'm terribly sorry. I didn't mean to."

"Didn't you know Billy Geary is my personal property?"

"No, but I suspected he might be. Bill's generous that way. He never hesitates to give himself to a charming woman."

"This was a case of mutual self-defense. Billy hasn't any standing socially, you know. When old Mrs. General Maldonado lectured me (the dear, aristocratic soul conceived it to be her duty) on the impropriety of appearing on the Malecon with Billy and my guardian, who happens to be Billy's landlady, I tried to explain our American brand of democracy, but failed. So I haven't been invited anywhere since, and life would have been very dull without Billy. He has been a dear—and you have taken him away."

Webster laughed. "Well, be patient, Miss Rucy, and I'll give him back to you with considerable more money than he will require for your joint comfort. Billy in financial distress is a joy forever, but Billy in a top hat and a frock coat on the sunny side of Easy street will be absolutely irresistible."

"He's a darling. Ever since my arrival he has dedicated his life to keeping me amused." She rose. "Despite your wickedness, Mr. Webster, I am going to be good to you. Billy and I always have five o'clock tea here in the veranda. Would you care to come to my tea-party?"

"Nothing could give me greater pleasure," he assured her.

She nodded brightly to him. "I'm going to run up to my room and put some powder on my nose," she explained.

"But you'll return before five o'clock?" Webster was amazed to hear himself plead.

"You do not deserve such consideration, but I'll come back in about twenty minutes," she answered and left him.

As Webster viewed the situation, his decision to see as little as possible of Dolores during his brief stay in Sobrante was a wise one. The less he saw of her (he told himself), the better for his peace of mind, for he was forty years old, and he had never loved before. For him this fever that burned in his blood, this delicious agony that throbbed in his heart—and all on the very ghost of provocation—were so many danger-signals, heralds of that grand passion which, coming to a man of forty, generally lasts him the remainder of his natural existence.

Webster was forced to admit he was afraid of himself. His was the rapidly disappearing code of the old unfettered West, that a man shall never betray his friend in thought, word, or deed. To John Stuart Webster any crime against friendship was the most heinous in all the calendar of human frailty; even to dream of slipping into Billy's shoes now would be monstrous; yet Webster knew he could not afford a test of strength between his ancient friendship for Billy and the masculine desire for a perfect mate. Remained then but one course:

"I must run like a road-runner," was the way Webster expressed it.

Bonds and interest due during year 1926.....	$40,540.00

How Funds Will Be Expended

These figures cause us to ask how it comes that we have such a large surplus of cash on deposit. We find that $12,995.74 of the total amount are electric light and water funds which must be used to run those works and pay bonds and interest. $10,702.63 of the total are interest and sinking funds to be used for taking care of bonds and interest of funded debts other than electric and water accounts. Out of the remaining sum $29,075.09 must be paid the city's portion of local improvements such as Belvedere avenue paving. This leaves a comfortable balance with which to run the city until the 1925 taxes come in without borrowing money. Also note that the city has paid no interest for loans at banks during this period of time.

It was very gratifying to us as a citizen and taxpayer to find such a splendid condition. It well repaid us for the time taken to get the facts, and we think other citizens should avail themselves of the opportunity to let our City Bookkeeper, Mr. Payton, explain the books. There is evidence everywhere that our business is in good hands and that every department is being conducted in a sound, business-like way.

Ex-Mayor Ross Asks for Re-election

Now, we find that our good friend former Mayor Ross is asking that he be placed back on the job as mayor, and that Mayor Bergeon be discharged. From a mere selfish, personal viewpoint, we don't know that we blame him, because if we were ambitious to become mayor of Charlevoix, we don't know of a more auspicious time than now when everything is in such fine shape, but if from a purely business standpoint wouldn't it be more sensible to ask the following question:

A large business corporation had a general manager who made a failure of the business, ran it at a loss, put it in debt, created a large deficit, so that it was compelled to discharge the manager and employ a new one.

The new manager by close attention to details, by the use of sound business judgment and executive ability put the business on its feet, paid off a lot of debts, and turned in a neat surplus at the end of the year.

Then along comes the old manager and asks to be put back on the job, and that the new man be discharged.

We ask, what kind of a proposition would that be anyhow? and what kind of a man would listen to it?

Mayor Bergeon Always on the Job

The records show that Mayor Bergeon has been constantly on the job, and has been in attendance at all, or practically all of the meetings of the council. He has devoted a large part of his time to the city's business at a great personal sacrifice of his private business. At no time has he permitted his own affairs to interfere with his public duties. We don't see how he does it—we couldn't—but it only goes to prove his devotion to his home community and his regard for the trust imposed upon him. We cannot afford to dispense with his services now, and we should not deny him the reward to which he is entitled. It would be most unappreciative and unworthy of us. Of course, we will not do it.

Some of the Good Work Accomplished

Some of the accomplishments of the City Council during the term of Mayor Bergeon:

Erection and completion of the steam auxiliary voted by the people.

Erection and completion of a new water works plant voted by the people.

Laying of the Belvedere avenue pavement and obtaining a state award in aid of its construction.

Initiating the proceedings to have the state highway department take over the maintenance of the swing bridge.

Promoting the taking over for maintenance by the state of city streets used by M-11.

Putting the finances of the city in the best condition they have been in during the past 25 years.

Vigorous measures to eliminate waste and extravagance in the conduct of city business.

Adoption of system of close personal supervision by the mayor over all departments of city business.

Close guarding of a sinking fund to take care of the city's funded debts.

Purchase of an Auto Park and improving it so as to accommodate visiting autoists.

Equipment of the south side beach for bathing and a playground for the children.

THE Ford car has remained the undisputed leader for value in the motoring world. There are certain fundamental reasons why this is true. It is a car, properly designed and staunchly constructed, having a motor which has proved itself reliable, long-lived and economical.

It is adequately serviced by an organization reaching to every community and neighborhood. These combine to give the Ford car the highest resale value in proportion to list price.

And as production volume of the Ford has grown the purchase price has been steadily reduced.

UNDER THE DOME AT LANSING

By Ed A. Nowack

(Special to the Courier)

Defeat was recorded last Friday in the legislature of the child-labor amendment to the federal constitution by a vote of 61 to 24. Fifteen members were absent. A public hearing the previous night not only engendered much bitterness but presaged the defeat the measure met. Individual debate on the resolution was limited to 10 minutes. Of the dozen who talked Rep. Espie, Eagle, was frequently interrupted by applause from both sides.

Determined opposition to Rep. Roxburgh's proposal to relieve churches, ecclesiastical corporations and such from the corporation tax was jockeyed about so badly that it has been re-referred to the committee on general taxation.

Appropriation Bills Out

Many appropriation bills are coming out of institutional committees and sent to the ways and means committee for final scrutiny. Speaker Fred Wells is continuing his urging to committees to continue working at top speed to clean the slate. There is an organized effort to have the session end soon after March 30. If this fails it will not be because the speaker laid down. Chairmen Kirby, Evans and Watson of the important committees are keeping their committee work well cleaned up. Friday saw no new bills introduced. Every member fought shy of introducing bill No. 200, that bill carrying a penalty and the boys therefore playing a watchful waiting policy.

Capital Punishment May Carry

If the poll of the house taken by Rep. Kooyers, Holland, remains unchanged, there will be the death penalty for murderers in Michigan. The capital punishment bill was introduced by Rep. McEachron, Hudsonville. The poll shows 52 votes for it in the house and 11 in the senate with many senators not yet polled.

Of the new bills introduced Rep. Oberdorffer, Stephenson, would make only lawyers eligible to probate judgeships except in counties of 10,000 or under. Rep. Hartman, Houghton, would increase the curriculum of the College of Mines to include metallurgical mining. Rep. Ming, Cheboygan, would fix state payments to school districts having normal school classes at $1,000 for each teacher and not more than $2,000 annually. Rep. Watson, St. Clair, would permit cities of the fourth class to pay out money for street and sidewalk improvements.

Senator Condon, Detroit, would make it a felony for a person to carry small fire arms, fourth conviction on the charge to be a term of life inprisonment. Sen. Young, Lansing, would close all commercial stores on Sundays. Sen. Gausser, Bay City, would permit mutual fire insurance companies to adopt the Michigan standard policy. Senator Hunter, St. Johns, would increase the pay of the stenographer in the 29th judicial district to $2,500.

Taxation Measures

Rep. Evans, Tipton, would limit exemptions for churches, fraternal and similar organizations. Rep. Read, Manistee, would make the state tax commissioner, governor and state board of assessors supreme in fixing tax valuations. Rep. Black, Twining, would provide that the three members on the state board of equalization consist of the auditor general, state tax commissioner and commissioner of agriculture. Rep. Espie, Eagle, would have regular tax levies collected on the actual cash value of the stock of investment companies that deal in stocks, bonds and mortgages. Rep. Haight, Lansing, would establish a state criminal identification bureau to be operated by state police and accessible to all state police agencies. Another bill by him would require all police and firemen in cities of 25,000 population or over to be given 24 hours off every seven days and 20 days in addition each year.

New Gaming Bill In

Senator Bahorski, Detroit, would re-enact the gaming law declared invalid by the state supreme court last year. This will prevent publication of racing odds.

Senator Woodruff, Wyandotte, would compel all municipally owned utilities to file and publish annual reports and to establish a uniform accounting system. Rep. Armstrong, Wayne, would limit to four the number of counties in which farmers' mutual fire insurance companies could operate.

Rep. Espie, Eagle, would tighten up the laws on drunken drivers. A bill he has would make the driver, on conviction of the first offense, lose his license for a year. On the second offense he would lose it for three years and the third conviction would mean a life spent without further driving permits.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

By B. C. Mellencamp

It is becoming a well established practice in Michigan and in many other states, to lime the soil. It greatly increases the yield of most crops and wonderfully increases the chances of securing a stand of clover, alfalfa or sweet clover that will last.

Here in Charlevoix county we are very fortunate in having considerable lime in our soils, but in many fields there are portions that are depleted in lime and in cases entire fields that are too acid to grow a clover or alfalfa crop, and lime for these fields is a timely and profitable investment. In fact, without having somewhere near a sweet soil it is impossible to get a good stand or a good yield. Lime also stimulates a new seeding and gives it the good start which sometimes is the deciding point between success and failure. In Wexford county 10 carloads of lime have been distributed, many other counties are doing the same. At the price of lime that we can secure at present, you can well afford to buy a few tons and by so doing keep your soil in a sweet condition.

Arrangements have been completed with the Petoskey Portland Cement company whereby a good quality of finely ground limestone can be purchased in bulk at a small figure, providing it is in carload lots. To insure that every farmer in the county can avail himself of the opportunity, arrangements have been made with the Co-Ops at East Jordan, Charlevoix and Boyne City, whereby the managers will take your orders and handle your wants. The price per ton at all points in the county will be only $2.50 and must be in cash as at the low price they cannot give credit. You must obligate yourself to get the lime immediately upon the arrival of the car. Do this before spring and add lime to your field previous to sowing your seed.

One other thing: See your local manager about purchasing a Soiltex outfit which can be bought for the small sum of 25 cents and is sufficient for your test of the entire farm for acidity. Full directions come with the outfit and the testing operations are simple. Test and find out where you lack lime. These outfits can also be secured from your county agent's office at the Marketing Assn. in Boyne City. This 25 cents will be the best investment you ever had. Talk it over with your manager.

STATE DELEGATES WERE NAMED

COUNTY REPUBLICAN CONVENTION HELD WEDNESDAY

Endorse National and State Administrations of Republicans—Porter Chairman

The Charlevoix county Republican convention was well attended at the meeting held Wednesday of last week at Boyne City.

Howard P. Porter was elected chairman of the convention and L. H. White secretary.

Delegates elected to attend the state convention at Detroit on February 25th, are: Wm. J. Pearson, F. A. Kenyon, J. M. Harris, W. S. Shaw, George Weaver. Alternates: A. J. Duncanson, H. Beyer, L. H. White, H. P. Porter, L. Shanahan.

Resolutions

Report of the resolutions committee of the convention of Republicans of Charlevoix county held at Boyne City on February 18, 1925:

Your resolutions committee begs leave to report as follows:

1. We most heartily endorse both the national and state administrations of Republicans, and particularly commend the program of President Coolidge of economy in national affairs of the nation; and further commend him for his example of putting plain Americanism foremost, and supporting a program of uprightness in private as well as public affairs.

2. We appreciate the compliment paid the great Republican state of Michigan by our president in selecting one of our staunch Republicans, Chas. A. Warren, to be attorney general of the United States.

3. We commend Governor Groesbeck for his harmonious work with the legislature in bringing about the passage of the gas and weight tax laws in a minimum of time, and for the indication for continued efficient conduct and management of all state affairs.

4. We heartily endorse the administration of Thomas F. Johnson as superintendent of public instruction of this state, and approve his strong progressive administration of the state's educational affairs, and urge his re-nomination and election to that office for the coming term.

5. We also endorse the administration of Frank Rogers as state highway commissioner, and approve his advanced methods of road building, and the efficiency of his organization, and urge his renomination and election.

6. We do not believe that the Primary Law as now constituted is satisfactory, and urge that our law makers at Lansing be requested to so change or repeal the law as to avoid the spectacle of a number of good Republicans opposing each other for the same office on one ticket at a primary election.

7. We emphatically urge our representative and senator to use every effort to bring about the passage of a law that will provide for a more equitable distribution of the primary funds.

8. We heartily endorse Senator Pearson's stand on conservation, and his proposed law to provide for reforestation of cut-over lands.

9. The Republicans of Charlevoix county want it to be known that they heartily support the efforts of their Senator Pearson and Representative Harris to establish a state normal school in Charlevoix county for northern Michigan.

10. In conclusion let us remind all Republicans that it is their duty to stand by the party at the coming election—which party at no time in its history is carrying on its program on a higher plane than under the leadership of its present executive officers.

John Schweitzer Misses Winter Sports in California

Mildred Parker of this city has received a letter from John Schweitzer, son of Dave Schweitzer, formerly of Charlevoix. The letter was written from the Schweitzer home at Long Beach, California, and is typical of boyhood:

"Dear Mildred:

It is Birthington's Washday. Beulah has moved to Californin and Isubella's (Ted's) name is now Mrs. Bell. Alice has a baby girl, named Norma Averstreat. She is nine months old. Alice lives two blocks away and Ted lives just across the street. Tell Don Solomon that he owes me a letter. My best pal is Don Monson, a red-headed kid that came from Utah.

No, no girls will have me out here.

I wish I was back east to enjoy the winter sports. I guess I will have to come to enjoy the fall nights' sports getting (not steeling) grapes, etc.

Who watered the hill? Can you find out if Frank Earforth still lives in Charlevoix. Mama says California is best; it isn't so cold, but think of my skates and sled and skiis all going to rust.

Yours truly,
John Schweitzer."

SPECIAL PASSES

There are a number of passes used in special contingencies—when cornered, when closely guarded and when in tight places. Some of these passes are frequently used. Others are employed less frequently. All of them should be constantly practiced.

One of the first special passes to be considered is the Push Pass. It is a combination catch and pass and is used generally when two men are carrying the ball up the floor nbreast. The ball is not actually cuught but reflected in its flight into other waiting hands. The palms face away from the body, fingers pointing upward. Elbows are bent. The instant the ball strikes the palms of the hands, the arms are straightened out, the wrists snapped and the ball pushed. The ball ordinarily travels on a level with the shoulders of the passer. It is used for quick returns. Often the ball is push-passed underhand, as in cases where it strikes the floor.

The Hook pass is a special pass used a great deal with excellent results. It is used when the passer is moving away from the direction of his opponents' goal and is closely guarded. It is used by tall men, especially a guurd, to advance the ball down the floor ahead of the defense. He usually jumps in the air as he executes the pass, thus adding considerable momentum to the ball. It may be either a short or long pass. The ball is pocketed between the hand and the wrist, fingers spread. The pass is executed by sweeping the arm over the head with the elbow slightly bent. The ball is released by snapping wrist and fingers. Naturally, it describeds a downward course, the arc depending upon the distance to be covered. This pass is hard to intercept and is fast. When passing for distance, be careful not to release the ball with a side motion, as this will cause it to curve. Some players always bounce the ball before attempting the Hook Pass, so as to locate a possible receiver accurately, but I do not believe this is necessary.

The Sidearm Pass is a special form of underhand and overhand pass, though most always the former. It is employed in order to pass around an opposing player rather than over or through him. It is well employed by tall men with long arms. The body is bent to one side with the shoulder nearest the opponent raised high so that shoulder and back present n block. Arms are extended full length. The ball may be passed from any height from knees to shoulder. It may be made with one or both hands. Just at the instant of releasing the ball, additional reach may be obtained by raising the leg nearest to the opposing player slightly from the floor.

(This is third of a series of talks on basketball taken from lectures in the four-year course in physical education at the University of Michigan. The next will appear in an early issue.)

THOUGHT ROUND LAKE WAS AN ANIMAL PARK

Three Year Old Boy Found Near Open Ice Hole Playing

Little Melvin Wakeman, three year old son of Mrs. Ula Wakeman of Reed City, who has been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Poole, here for the past two weeks, stirred up quite a bit of excitement for a youngster of his size last Thursday afternoon.

His mother sent him to Crandall's store on an errand and the young man, having some ideas of his own on the subject, wandered down town to see the sights. Several people who noticed him promenading up and down, apparently unattached, tried to learn his name and urged upon him the necessity of returning home, but Master Melvin couldn't see it that way. This was his little junket to be made the most of, as a three year old doesn't get such an opportunity to explore, untrammeled by troublesome grown-ups, every day in the week.

In the meantime, his badly worried mother and grandparents had raised the alarm and a search party was hastily organized. Finally, after he had been gone about an hour, Louis Bourissau found the young man down on Round Lake by an open hole in the ice, paddling idly in the water with one gingerly outstretched toe! When questioned Melvin stated that he had taken the cute little fish shanties on the lake for animal houses in a park and thought he would saunter down and give the lions and tigers and ever'thn' the once over. Naturally, he was disappointed but managed to have a lovely time, for a' thnt. Maybe mamma and grandma weren't tickled to see him though!

The W. R. C. will hold a baked goods sale at the Charlevoix Hardware, Saturday, February 28th.—Adv. 8-t1.

NEW RADIO CLUB WAS FORMED BY THE FANS

Set Owners Band Together to Improve Conditions

The new organization of the radio fans of Charlevoix, henceforth to be known as the Charlevoix Radio Club, became a reality last Friday evening, February 20th, when a large number of fans met at the council chambers to organize, with a view to the betterment of radio receiving conditions in this city and vicinity, to eradicate interference caused by leakage of the electric light and power lines or from other causes. H. Fox was elected president, A. Bergeon, secretary and H. Partridge, treasurer. A mechanical engineering committee, consisting of Clarence Withers and Vincent Madison was appointed for the purpose of drafting plans and selecting parts for the construction of an interference locater. A membership committee was also appointed.

The Club needs the support of every radio owner in Charlevoix. While the expense of constructing the interference locater will possibly cost each fan, if pro rated, in the neighborhood of a dollar, the results will be well worth the trifling expense. Show your willingness to do your bit by coming out to the next meeting of the Club and placing your name on its roll. Everybody benefits by cooperation.

AGED WOMAN STRUCK DOWN BY AUTOMOBILE

Mrs. Davidson Killed and Mrs. Sylvia Smith Injured

An automobile accident that took the life of Mrs. Sarah E. Davidson, aged resident of Clearwater, Fla., and former Charlevoix woman, painfully injured Mrs. Sylvia Smith of this city and endangered a friend, Mrs. Mary Mattison of Clearwater, occurred on Sunday, February 15th, while the three ladies were on their way to church.

A Ford car, driven by a youth of 17, came down a hill upon them as they crossed a street. Someone yelled, "Look out" and Mrs. Mattison jumped, saving her life. The car struck Mrs. Davidson and Mrs. Smith and dragged them for twenty feet along the pavement. Mrs. Davidson expired soon after reaching the hospital to which both were taken, while Mrs. Smith was found to be painfully but not seriously injured. Lee R. Smith of this city received a telegram shortly after the accident occurred, stating that his mother was in no danger, but would be confined to the hospital for about three weeks.

A coroner's jury brought in a verdict of "unavoidable aceident" and the youthful driver was acquitted. It is claimed that his brakes were defective and his car, therefore, out of his control.

Mystery Thrills and Buck Jones in Great Fox Photoplay

Buck Jones, prime favorite of screen fan millions from coast to coast, will again hit the bulls-eye of popular favor at the Palace Theater next Wednesday night, March 4th, playing "Against All Odds"—and winning hands down, in a whirlwind finish with his faithful horse "Silver."

"Against All Odds" is a real Buck Jones show, 100 per cent western; tearing along at a hundred thrills an hour pace; packed with hard fighting, hard shooting, hard riding and loving; packing a corking wallop of a mystery plot and a double-barrelled romance.

It would be cheating the playgoers if this critic gave away all or any of the odds which Buck Jones gamely "bucks." The climax of hopeless odds and death-defying dare-devilry, however comes when his buddy, wrongfully sentenced to be hanged for murder, speeds with the sheriff's posse on an express train to the scene of execution.

A Good Story and Splendid Acting

"Another Man's Wife," which shows next Saturday and Sunday, February 28 and March 1, at the Palace Theatre, has everything—and a little bit more. A splendid cast, a big theme, a most entertaining story, beautiful settings, all kinds of thrills—that should be enough to please the most finical picturegoer.

The story is woven about the matrimonial adventures of John and Helen Brand. Helen in order to teach her neglectful husband a lesson pretends to elope to Mexico. She goes alone, but her husband believes her guilty and awears to kill her. This oath leads into strange experiences husband, wife and an innocent bystander who plays "Knight Arrant."

Lila Lee and James Kirkwood play the leading roles.

A good-looking but sensible waitress probably has a lower opinion of men's mentality than anybody—else if she judges them by the insane remarks most of them think they have to make to her.

EARLY MORNING BLAZE RUINS THREE BUILDINGS

CITY'S BUSIEST BLOCK IS RUINED BY FIRE AND WATER

FIRE THE MOST PERSISTENT IN HISTORY OF CITY

Stores of F. J. Fessenden, H. B. Jacobs and J. E. Redpath Flooded by Water Deluge

The worst fire that has occurred in Charlevoix since the County Bank building burned un the 8th of February last year, called out the department at three-thirty o'clock last Sunday morning. The buildings involved were the Odd Fellow building und the See building, lying between the Charlevoix Hardware Co. and Park avenue on Bridge street. The second floors of both buildings were completely gutted and the walls of the lower floor damaged by wafer and heat.

The five was first discovered by Mrs. Glen See, who, with her husband and brother-in-law, Chester See, occupied the front apartment next to the lodge hall on the second floor. She was alurmed by peculiar cracking noises and awoke her husband, who was inclined to believe that the noises she had heard were eaused by the contraction of the building in the low temperature. A moment later, they both distinctly heurd a series of sharp explosions that shook the building, seeming to come from the direction of the basement, and the smell of smoke became distinct. Mr. See opened the door into the hall and found it filled with smoke. He immediately aroused the family of John H. Bugbee who had the front apartment on the corner and everybody turned to and carried out what furniture and elothing they could before the smoke and flames drove them out. The heaviest loss was suffered by Mrs. Pearl, who was not at home but in the hospital at the time the fire occurred, although much of her furniture was saved. The property loss for the three apartments will probably total about $500.00, although the Sees and Bugbees managed to suve the greater part of their belongings.

Downstairs, in the stores occupied by J. B. Redpath, H. B. Jacobs and F. J. Fessenden, the principal damage was done by water and smoke. The buildings are of brick veneer construction and the fire seemed to keep within the partitions and walls, only breaking into flame when a hole wns chopped through floor or roof to get at it with the hose to better advantage. The fire was very stubborn and the firemen's work was complicated by the cold nir which eaused the water from the nozzles to freeze on their clothes, incasing them in ice. Meanwhile, the work of snlvaging the stocks of wearing apparel, groceries, drugs and stationery from the stores below was being pursued with feverish haste.

Mr. Fessenden, who was uroused by telephone shortly after the alarm was turned in, was soon on the job and managed to remove the more perishable portion of his stock to a place of safety in the L. P. Adams eigar store and pool room across the street. A good deal of water drained in through the ceiling above and what damage this has done to the fine polished veneer cases thnt line the walls and other fixtures remains to be seen. They do not appear to be badly injured, but the veneer may peel off as they dry out, as often happens in such eases. The fact that no windows were broken in the lower floor and that the ceilng was intact and that it was possible to keep steam on during the night greatly lessened the dnmage that might have otherwise resulted in all three of the stores. Mr. Fessenden estimates his loss at $15,000.00, which, as far as can be ascertained nt this writing, is fully covered by Insurance. His stock was moved on Monday to the store recently vacated by Wood Brothers in the Masonic building, which he has leased for a term of one year.

H. B. Jacobs has removed his stock of groceries temporarily to his former location at 114 Bridge street —the Paddock building. His loss was around $5,000.00, partially covered by insuranee. He bad a considerable quantity of goods stored in the basement, which was filled to a depth of four or five inches with water during the fire. These are probably a total loss. Most of the stock on his shelves was saved.

J. B. Redpath saved his entire stock without damage, as far as can be estimated at this time. The loss in cases, fixtures, etc., fully covered by insurance, cannot ns yet be determined. His business is temporarily located on the mezzanine floor of the Charlevoix Hardware building, next door to his former location. His plans for the future are not definitely formed as yet.

The Charlevoix Hardware building, which adjoins the Odd Fellow building on the south, suffered no damage whatever, although a little smoke drifted into the store and some water got into the busement, which however did not do any harm.

The various lodges who had their regalia and equipment stored in the lockers of the hall on the second

RED AND WHITE BEATS JORDANS

SCORE OF SEASON'S LAST HOME GAME WAS 15 TO 4

Not So Fast as Some of the Other Contests But Still a Snappy One to Watch

Charlevoix high school basketball team played its last home game of the season and defeated the Red and Black of East Jordan by a score of 15 to 4 in a rough and hard-fought battle at Hooker's garage last Friday evening.

The game was somewhat slower than some of the other games, but it proved to be very interesting to a large number of spectators. Hallett started the scoring for the Red and White with a foul and although the Jordaners fought gamely, the half closed with the Red and White in a 6 to 0 lead.

By coming back strong in the second half, the Red and White soon had the battle on ice. Hallett again led his mates in the scoring with a total of seven points, while Dagwell and Harrington each had four to their credit.

In the closing minutes of play, Glasgow of the Red and White was injured and may be out of the lineup for some time. His fine guarding and the work of his running mate, Jones, has won for them a name which will be hard to beat.

The lineup was as follows:

C. H. S.		E. J. H. S.
Harrington	F.	Shaw
Hallett	F.	Johnson
Dagwell	C.	Benson
Jones	G.	Walker, C.
Glasgow, C.	G.	Palmer

Substitutions: E. J. H. S.: Halstead for Benson, Smith for Halstead. C. H. S.: Brown for Harrington, Cunningham for Glasgow.

Field goals: Hallett, 3; Dagwell, 2; Harrington, 2; Shaw, 1.

Fouls: Hallett, 1; Shaw, 2.

Speed Watson, of Traverse City, refereed and handled the game in a manner that pleased everyone.

CHANGE WILL COST COUNTY MONEY

BILL BEFORE LEGISLATURE WILL HIT POCKETBOOK

School Commissioner Belding Urges Immediate Action of Part of People

Charlevoix county is due to lose a lot of money, if certain bills now before the legislature are allowed to pass.

The following information is given not alone as a warning, but to solicit your uid in defeating the measures that would forever cripple education in ours and the other counties of the state. Read this carefully and then write personally to your representative, J. M. Harris, and your senator, Wm. J. Pearson, Lansing, Michigan, that your are not in favor of the passage of these bills.

1st.—Last year Charlevoix county received from the state $11,185.63 of library money which was distributed according to law.

House joint resolution number three, would divert this to the general fund and so deprive our libruries of this money.

Quick aetion on this resolution is neccessary, if we would save ourselves the above amount.

2nd.—Last year the primary school interest fund received from the state $3,492,613.60 inheritance tax together with $244,033.32 interest on the same.

House bill 137, file 49 and Senate bill 120 are identical. They would remove this tax from inheritance on real estate and thus deprive Charlevoix county of nearly $12,000.00 primary money.

Now let's hit where it will do the most good. Don't just talk about it. Cut this article out and mail it to the men above named, together with a letter asking them to vote against these bills.

Yours for Charlevoix County's Educationul Welfare,

A. C. Belding.

Automobile Goes on Rampage and Runs Backward—Old Clock Renews Its Youth

If Annanias or Baron Munchausen were back on earth with us again, how they would revel in the opportunities afforded by the recent earthquake for the exercise of their peculiar talents—at least, so it seems to us after listening to some of tho tales that are circulating around town about what happened at "exactly 8:25" last Saturday evening.

Of course, there was nn earthquake—there is no doubt about that, as lengthy articles appeared in Monday's daily press, giving Professor Whoozis' ponderous views on the effect of "faults," slipping strata, etc. According to the best scientific dope, the earthquake was caused by two gigantic layers of rock under the earth's surface, at a point somewhere in the Appalachian Mountains of the east, getting tired of each other's company and slipping a trifle. But it was some slip to stir things up from Springfield, Mass. to Columbus, Ohio. Even the solemn pronouncement that these "slips" are the most dangerous forms of earthquakes cannot dampen the humorous side of the affair, as evidenced by stories, wild and otherwise told by various persons of generally truthful reputations who in some cases seem in danger of winning the blue ribbon award for the most vivid imaginations.

Of course, we must except the numerous cases of dizziness, alarming symptoms of approaching apoplexy, heart trouble, etc. induced by the unusunl tremors, as there is no douht that such effects could easily be produced hy even less voilent shocks than thnt of Saturday night. Also, the phenomena of stopping clocks, falling pictures, rattling crockery, etc. are common enough in time of seismic upheavals, but—what do you think of the following:

An old elock owned by a certain Charlevoix resident, whose reputation for veracity we will spare by not mentioning his name, hadn't run for two years. At the mystic hour of the earthquake it started up ngain and hasn't stopped since.

Up to Bob Bonthron's on the north side, the quake knocked all the egg producers off the roost and sent them sprawling. Bob went to the hen house, expecting to find a troop of skunks raiding the place—judging from the racket, but didn't find nny skunks and so—there you have another earthquake story.

But here's a bird. And the fellow who told us is a township officer and substantial duiryman of this region who really ought to know better than to try and spring such stuff on us poor credulous city folks. But he swears it's "gospel," so here goes.

Information in Reference to Water Power Sites Ready

The land economic survey division of the state department of conservation has announced that a complete inventory of information in reference to water power sites in the counties of Charlevoix, Ogemaw and Antrim would be made available to the public April 15.

The reports are part of a systematic survey being conducted by the department of conservation to determine the economic resources of Michigun land. At the present time the survey has virtually completed its work in five counties.

The information in regard to waterpower sites in the three counties though not us thorough in scope as would be possible if the research had been carried on over a long period of years, it tends to give general duta of value in locating and testing such sites for possihle future development.

LACK SPIRIT OF BOOSTING

MICHIGANDERS WEAK ON THEIR ADVERTISING ABILITY

Accused of Being Most Unappreciative People in the World to Their Own Advantages

A Californian, writing to a Michigan friend says: "Good Lord, if you Michiganders, with your water and air, had our Californian boosting spirit and advertising ability, you would have the whole United States there every summer."

It is invariably the stranger that brings to the attention of the home folks the undeveloped resources, the natural advantages, and the opportunities lying untouched at their doors.

Michigan people, we believe, are the most unappreciative people in the whole world to their own advantages. Michigun is so big and so great in so many ways we fail to grasp its true importance or to comprehend its largeness in the eyes of those who come into our state from away. Michigan people have become too much centered on the concrete things to dreum of new avenues of development of wealth nnd greatness. Were we not so generously endowed with nature's gifts we might be boasting of some outstanding advuntages, but Michigan has everything almost that every other state in the Union hoasts of, and its lines of endeavor and ndvantage are so numerous we lose sight of it all as commonplace and take it as a mere matter of course.

Before we attempt to sell Michigan to the rest of the world, we must first sell Michigan tu ourselves. We may have to pinch ourselves good and hnrd to realize that we are not dreaming when we go into the vuried avenues that lead somewhere, and come to understand what all of that means. When we have come to visualize our state in its true status then we can begin holding out our offerings to the world and we will then begin to realize therefrom as other states have capitalized their own resources.

Michigan, as a commodity, on sale to the world, offers so many good talking points one can hardly decide where to begin. We are not awakened to these fucts until some trnveler points them out to us, as in the ease of this western man who suggested our water and our air nlone ought to sell Michigun to the world.

Michignn's out of doors, its lakes and rivers, its brooks and springs, its woods nnd quiet places, its plains nnd hills, its broad fields and mountains, its water washed air, its boating and bathing, its hunting and fishing, its wonderful summer sun-

STATE POLICE GIVEN STILL MORE TRAINING

Commissioner Jackson Orders Winter School At Lansing

The success of the first training school conducted by the Michigan State Police under the supervision of Harry H. Jackson, commissioner, has prompted the establishment this month of another school and on a considerahly larger scale than before.

Under the new system, the school will he operated for old men as well as recruits and the first batch of men to answer to roll call included as many of the old men as could he taken away from their work in the field.

It has been the plan of Commissioner Jackson to conduct such a school as he is now starting since he took command of the Michigan force more than a year ago, but the force made the plan only tentative. As the men trained in last year's school were put into the field and given regular police work to do opportunity for the bringing in of the old men presented itself.

The school for the nld men is for "reconditioning," it heing the idea of the commissioner that no matter bow long a man has been in the field and how extensive his operations have been, there is still room for improvement and a general brushing up on every phase of State Police work.

A Different School

Beginning next month, another and different school will he opened. This will be a schnnl for inspectors who are working under the supervision of the state fire marshal, though doing general police work when the occasion arises. There are 17 inspectors in the field at the present time and all of them will he in for the school which will last four days.

Commissioner Jackson will talk to them, one day and others who will talk will be Charles V. Lane, fire marshal, who will tell of fire and oil inspection work; Capt. Oscar G. Olander, who will talk on liquor destruction; Capt. C. J. Scarvada, on general police work, and a representative of the state attorney general's department on criminal law.

Both of the schools will be held at the headquarters post at East Lansing and will he in charge nf Capt. Scarvada who had charge of last year's school.

As need for additional men presents itself the school for recruits will be resumed.

BANK ROBBERS ARE CAUGHT HUNTING

The State Police of the Upper Michigan detachment late in November picked up, at Shingleton, Mich., for the police department of Fort Wayne, Ind., two alleged hank robbers and they are now in custody in Indiana.

The police of Fort Wayne had obtained information that two former members of that department who were thought to have been connected with a hank job at Hagerstown, Ind., were hunting deer in Michigan and wired their descriptions to the Negannee, Mich., detachment of the State Police.

Troopers McIntyre and LaForge were detailed to handle the case by Capt. A. A. Downing and soon after reaching Shingleton learned that a party of hunters was about to leave the village. There were four in the party and all were arrested, the alleged robbers Robert McDonald and John Pritchard being held.

FOR TEN YEARS—DEPENDABLE

Exceptional dependability has been a characteristic of Dodge Brothers Motor Car since the day the first of these sturdy cars was marketed.

Not once in a decade has it failed to uphold and enhance its reputation for faithful performance.

The reason for its consistent goodness and continued betterment points directly back to the ideals of the founders.

Instead of fluctuating between an endless series of annual models, they determined to concentrate on the perfection of a single chassis.

Dodge Brothers Motor Car today is the embodiment of that ideal—an ideal that will endure as long as the institution itself.

CHAPTER X.

Dolores had been gone an hour before Webster roused from his bitter introspection sufficiently to glance at his watch. "Hum-ta-tu!" he grunted disapprovingly.

"Oh, I've been here fully half an hour," Dolores' voice assured him. He turned guiltily and found her leaning against the jamb in a doorway behind him and farther down the veranda. She was gazing at him with that calm, impersonal yet vitally interested glance that had so captivated him the first time he saw her. "Are you quite finished talking to yourself and fighting imaginary enemies? If so, you might talk to me for a change; I'll even disagree with you on any subject, if opposition will make you any happier."

He rose and indicated the chair. "Please sit down, Miss Huey. You are altogether disconcerting—too confoundedly smart. I fear I'm going to be afraid of you until I know you better."

She shrugged adorably and took the proffered chair. "That's the Latin in her—that shrug," Webster thought. "I wonder what other mixtures go to make up that perfect whole."

Aloud he said: "So you wanted to study me in repose? Why waste your time? I am never in repose."

"Feminine curiosity, Mr. Webster. Billy has talked so much of you that I wanted to see if you measured up to the specifications. Just let me have your hand, and I'll tell you all about yourself."

"Is there any charge?"

"Yes, a nominal one. However, I guarantee a truthful reading; if, when I am through, you are not wholly satisfied, you do not have to pay the price. Is that a satisfactory arrangement?"

"Right as a fox," he declared, and held out his great callioused hand. He thrilled as she took it in both of hers, so soft and beautiful, and flattened it out, palm upward, on her knee. "A fine, large, useful hand," she commented musingly. "The callouses indicate recent hard manual toil with a pick and shovel; despite your recent efforts with soap and brush and pumice-stone, there still remain evidence of some foreign matter ingrained in those callous spots. This line indicates that you are very brave, gentle, and courteous. You are quick and firm in your decisions, but not always right, because your actions are governed by your heart instead of your head. Once you have made a decision, you are reckless of the consequences. Your lifeline tells me you are close to fifty-three years of age—"

"Seeress, you're shooting high and to the right," he interrupted, for he did not relish that jab about his age. "I'll have you know I was forty years old last month, and that I can still do a hundred yards in twelve seconds flat—in my working clothes."

"Well, don't feel peeved about it, Mr. Webster. I am not infallible; the best you can hope for from me is a high percentage of hits, even if I did shoot high and to the right that time. In point of worldly experience you're a hundred and six years old but I lopped off fifty per cent, to be on the safe side. To continue. You are of an extremely chivalrous nature—particularly toward young ladies traveling without chaperons; you are kind, affectionate, generous to a fault, something of a spendthrift. One may safely depend upon you to do the unexpected. Your matrimonial line is unbroken, proving you have never married, although right here the line is somewhat dim and frayed." She looked up at him suddenly. "You haven't been in love, have you?" she queried with childlike insouciance. "In love—and disappointed?"

He nodded, for he could not trust himself to speak.

"How sad!" she cooed sympathetically. "Did she marry another, or did she die?"

"She—she—yes, she died."

"Cauliflower tongue. In all probability, carried her off, poor thing! However, to your fortune: You are naturally truthful and would not make a deliberate misstatement of fact unless you had a very potent reason for it. You have a strong sense of sportsmanship, and when fairly defeated, whether in a battle of fists or a battle of wits, you never hold a grudge, which is one of the very nicest characteristics a man can have—"

"Or a woman," he suggested feebly.

"Quite right. Few women have a sense of sportsmanship. You stand a very good chance of becoming a millionaire in Sobrante, but you must beware of a dark man who has crossed your path—"

"Which one?" Webster queried mirthfully. "All coons look alike to me—Greasers also."

"Mere gutter of our profession, Mr. Webster," she admitted, "tossed in to build up the mystery element and simulate wisdom. Fortune awaited you in the United States, but you put it behind you, at the call of friendship, for a fortune in Sobrante. Now you have reconsidered that foolish action and at this moment you are contemplating sending a cablegram to a fat old man who waddles when he walks, recalling your decision not to accept a certain proposition of a business nature. However, you are too late. The fat old man with the waddle has made other arrangements, and if you want to make money, you'll remain in Sobrante. I think that is all, Mr. Webster."

He was gazing at her with an expression composed of equal parts of awe, amazement, consternation, adoration, and blank stupidity.

"Well," she queried innocently, "to quote Billy's colloquial style: did I put it over?"

"Did I Put It Over?"

"You did very well for an amateur, but I'm a doubting Thomas. About this fat old man who waddles when he walks: a really topnotch palmist could tell me his name."

"Well, I'm only an amateur, but still I think I might, to quote Billy again, make a stab at it. Do you care to bet me about ten dollars I cannot give you the fat party's initials—all three of them?"

He gazed at her owlishly. She was the most perfectly amazing girl he had ever met; he was certain she would win the ten dollars from him, but then it was worth ten dollars to know for a certainty whether she was perfect or possessed of a slight flaw; so he silently drew forth a wallet that would have choked a cow and skinned off a ten-dollar gold certificate of the United States of America.

"I'm game," he mumbled.

"The fat gentleman's initials are E. P. J."

"By the twelve apostles, Peter, Simon—"

"Don't blaspheme, Mr. Webster."

He stood up and shook himself. "When you order the tea," he said very distinctly, "please have mine cold. I need a bracer after that. Take the ten. You've won it."

"Thanks, ever so much," she answered in a matter-of-fact tone, and tucked the bill inside her shirtwaist. "I am a very poor woman, and—'Every little bit added to what you've got makes just a little bit more,'" she caroled, swaying her lithe, beautiful body and snapping her fingers like a cabaret dancer.

He could have groaned with the futility of his overwhelming desire for her; it even occurred to him what a shame it was to waste a marvel like her on a callow young pup like Billy, who had fought so many deadly skirmishes with Dan Cupid that a post-impressionistic painting of the Geary heart must resemble a pincushion. Then he remembered that this was an ungenerous, a traitorous thought, and that he had not paid the lady her fee.

"Well, what's the tariff?" he asked.

"You really feel that I have earned a professional's fee?"

"Beyond a doubt."

"Since you have taken Billy away from me this evening, I shall make you take Billy's place this evening. After dinner you shall hire an open victoria with two little white horses and drive me around the Malecon. There is a band concert to-night."

"If it's the last act of my wicked life!" he promised fervently. Strange to relate, in that ecstatic moment no thought of Billy Geary marred the perfect serenity of what promised to be the most perfectly serene night in history.

* * * * * * *

They were seated at the tiny tea table when the sound of feet crunching the little shell-paved path through the patio caused Webster and Dolores to turn their heads simultaneously. Coming toward them was an individual who wore upon a head of flaming red a disreputable, cotton-crowned straw sombrero; a soiled cotton camisa with the tails flowing free of his equally soiled khaki trousers, and sandals of the kind known as alpargates—made from the tough fibre of a plant of the cactus family and worn only by the very lowliest peons—completed his singular attire.

"One of Billy's friends and another reason why he has no social standing," Dolores whispered. "I believe he's going to speak to us."

Such evidently appeared to be the man's intention. He came to the edge of the verandu, swept his ruin of a hat from his red head and bowed with Castilian expansiveness.

"Yer pardon, Miss, for apparin' before you."

She smiled her forgiveness to what Webster now perceived to be an alcoholic wreck. He was about to dismiss the fellow with scant ceremony, when Dolores, with that rich sense of almost masculine humor—a humor that was distinctly American—said sweetly:

"Mr. Webster, shake hands with Don Juan Cafetero, bon vivant and man about town. Don Juan, permit me to present Mr. Webster, from somewhere in the United States. Mr. Webster is a mining partner of our mutual friend Mr. William Geary."

A long, sad descent into the Pit had, however, imbued Don Juan with a sense of his degradation; he was in the presence of a superior, and he acknowledged the introduction with a respectful inclination of his head.

"'Tis you I've called to see, Misther Webster, sor," he explained.

"Very well, old-timer. In what way can I be of service to you?"

"'Tis the other way around, sor, if ye plaze, an' for that same there's no charrge, seein' ye're the partner, av that fine, kind gintleman, Misther Geary. Did ye, whilst in New Orleans, have d'alings wit' a short, shtout spiggoty wit' a puckered scar undher his right eye?"

John Stuart Webster suddenly sat up straight and gazed upon the lost son of Erin with grave interest. "Yes," he replied, "I seem to recall such a man."

"'Tis none av me busines, sor, but would ye mind tellin' me just what ye did to that spiggoty?"

"Why, to begin, last Sunday morning I interrupted this pucker-eyed fellow and a pop-eyed friend of his while engaged in an attempt to assassinate a white, inoffensive stranger. The following day, at the gangplank of the steamer, we met again; he poked his nose into my business, so I squeezed his nose until he cried; right before everybody I did it, Don Juan, and to add insult to injury, I plucked a few hairs from his rat's moustache—one hair per each pluck."

"I'd a notion ye did somethin' to him, sor. Now, thin, listen to me: I'm not much to look at, but I'm white. I'm an attashay, as ye might say, av Ignatz Leber—him that do have the import an' export house at the ind av the Calle San Rosaria, forninst the bay. Also he do have charrge av the cable office, an' whin I'm sober enough, I deliver cablegrams for Leber. Now, then, ye'll recall we had a bit av a shower to-day at noon?"

Dolores and Webster nodded. Don Juan, after glancing cautiously around, lowered his voice and continued: "I was deliverin' a cablegram for Leber, an' me course took me past the palace gate—which, be the same token, has alathry-boxes both inside an' out, wan an each side av the gate. The sinthry was not visible as I came along, an' what wit' the shower comin' as suddint as that, an' me wit' a wardrobe that's not so extinsive I can afford to get it wet, I shtepped into wan av the outside slatry-boxes till the rain should be over, an' what wit' a dhrink av aguardiente I'd took to brace me for the thrip, an' the mimory av auld times, I fell asleep.

"Dear knows how long I sat there aapping; all I know is that I was awnkened by the sound av three men talkin, at the gate, an' divil a worrd did they say but what I heard. They were talkin' in Spanish, but I undhershtood thim well enough. 'He's at the Hotel Mateo,' says wan voice, 'an' his name is Webster—Juwn Webster.

* AT THE MOVIES *
* * * * * * * * * * *

Speaking of motion pictures, exactly what is a "Western"?

"Just a picture with a lot of cowboys running around on horses and bandits and shooting?" No, Sir!

When Hunt Stromberg signed Harry Carey to a long-term contract to star in a series of "Westerns," he decided that he was going to prove to theatregoers in general just how false their general conception of this type of entertainment was.

He discovered that usually in such pictures the "human note" had been lacking, that the love interest was frequently sadly neglected, and that all semblance of reality was often sacrificed for the sake of a thrill. And he set about to remedy these faults.

He knew that Harry Carey was one of the most human actors on the screen. He knew that it was possible, by careful search, to secure Western stories with just as much drama, romance, and life as any society drama or costume spectacle. And he also knew that there is a wholesome, rugged appeal about the great open spaces that, properly presented, provides stimulating entertainment for the jaded picture fan.

His first two Harry Carey features, "The Night Hawk" and "The Lightning Rider" proved that his contentions were correct. But it is in "Tiger Thompson," his new feature, which comes to the Palace Theatre next Saturday and Sunday, March 7 and 8, that his ideals have been realized.

Rex Lease, juvenile man of "Chalk Mark," a Frank Woods' production which comes to the Palace Theatre next Tuesday and Wednesday, March 10 and 11 is perhaps not as well known to motion picture audiences as others of the screen's masculine players. But irrespective of his present popularity Lease is considered by producers and directors one of the "best bets" in pictures today. In less than two years he has become one of the most sought after of juvenile leading men. His part in "Chalk Marks" is his most important engagement to date and will give film audiences an opportunity to decide on his worth. Lease has a most engaging personality and his character in "Chalk Marks" is that of the typical American boy.

Conclusive Proof That Advertising Pays

Advertising has made the Victrola dog famous.

It has made the cash register a big brother to retailers all over the world.

It has introduced the world to a substitute for sole leather.

It is replacing the truck horse with 40 horse power trucks.

It has helped you to an appreciation of Stetson hats, Walk-Over, Douglas and Emerson shoes.

It has made the hand written letter an oddity in business.

It has put hair oil on heads where no hair oil would do any good, and on heads where no hair oil was needed.

It has put Castoria down your throat, left bristles in your gums, and then came along with a Rubberset and took them out.

It has put Sozodont, Pebeco and Pepsodent on your teeth. It has put a Gillette or a Durham Duplex against your hayfield.

It has put Maurine in your eyes, sold you Cuticura for pimples, Pears for the bath and Ivory for the tub.

It has put Arrow collars around your neck and Ingersols around your wrist.

Go anywhere you want to, do anything you wish, and advertising has had a hand in it—absolutely.

HOT FIRE EXPLODES FROZEN RANGE COIL

Near Casualty Occurs at Stewart Home on Mason St. Corner

What might have been a terrible catastrophe occurred last Monday forenoon at the residence at the corner of Mason and Grant streets occupied by Mrs. Stewart.

The water coil in the kitchen range had frozen during the night and Mrs. Stewart's son, Ed, not knowing this, went over to build a fire in the range for his mother and succeeded in getting a good hot one going. He then left the house, his mother being temporarily absent also. He had barely gotten back to his own door when a terrific explosion occurred. Mr. Stewart ran back to see what was the matter and found the kitchen and wash room so filled with smoke and steam that it was impossible to see across them. When it cleared away a bit, he found the range scattered around the room in a hundred pieces, the window in the wash room and a panel of the door was blown completely out and the heavy range door had been blown across the kitchen and clear into Mrs. Stewart's bedroom, so great was the force of the suddenly created steam. Hot coals had charred holes in the linoleum and table cloth but had not, miraculously, set fire to anything.

Had there been anyone in the rooms at the time it is probable that they would have been killed outright. We recently heard of a similar case in Wisconsin where a man had one of his arms torn completely off by the flying door of a range which exploded as he was turning away from it, after poking up the fire. It's a very dangerous experience, to say the least.

DON'T FAIL TO HEAR LAST COURSE NUMBER

Everett Kemp, Dramatic Reader Here on March 13th

Everett Kemp, notable dramatic reader, comes to the Lyceum course here on Friday evening, March 13th. He will present, in the inimitable manner which has made him so widely-known, a popular book or play.

In Mr. Kemp's repertoire are "Sevenoaks," by Josiah Gilbert Holland; "That Printer of Udell's," by Harold Bell Wright; "The Music Master," by Klein, the playing of which brought fame to David Warfield; also Justin McCarthy's "If I Were King," in which E. H. Sothern on the legitimate stage and William Farnum on the screen have attained notable dramatic successes.

Everett Kemp's audiences feel the spell of his magnetism as he interprets to them human nature in all its capricious moods. He entertains with sheer fun and roitous laughter, while his interpretations bring out in forceful manner the powerful truths the author wished to convey.

A Kemp program is decidedly entertaining and worth while.

CHAPTER X.

He's an American, an' a big, savage-lookin' lad at that, so take me advice an' be careful. Do ye two keep an eye on him wherever he goes, an' if he should shtep out at night an' wandher t'rough a dark shtreet, do ye two see to it that he's put where he'll not interfere again in Don Felipe's affairs. No damn' gringo'—beggin' yer pardon, Miss—can interfere in the wurrk av the intilligince bureau at a time like this, in addition to insultin' our honored chief, wit'out the necessity av havin' measured for a coffin.' 'Sí, mi general,' says another lad, an 'To be sure, mi general,' says a thirrd; an' wit' that the general had cess to him, wint back to the palace an' the other two walked on up the calle an' away from the shinthry-box."

"Did you come out and follow them?" Webster demanded briskly.

"Faith, I did. Wan av them is Francisco Arredondo, a young cavalry lootinint, an' the other wan is Captain Jose Benevides, him that do be the best pistol-shot an' swordsman in the spiggoty army."

"What kind of looking man is this Benevides, my friend?"

"A tall, thin' young man, wit' a dode's moustache an' a diamond ring on his right hand. He do be widder our most. Have a care would ye meet him around the city an' let him pick a fight wit' ye. An' have a care, sur, would ye go out av a night."

"Thank you, Don Juan. You're the soul of kindness. What else do you know?"

"Well," Don Juan replied with a naive grin, "I did know somethin' else, but shure, Misther Geary advised me to forget it. I was wit' him in the launch last night."

Webster stepped out of the veranda and laid a friendly hand on Don Juan Cafetero's shoulder. "Don Juan," he said gently, "I'm going back to the United States very soon. Would you like to come with me?"

Don Juan's watery eyes grew a shade mistier, if possible, he shook his head. "While I'm dhrunk here, sor," he replied, "no wan pays any attintion to me, but in America they'd give me ten days in the hoosegow wanst a week. Thank you, sor, but I'll shtay here till the finish."

He knew the strength of the Demon and had long since ceased to fight even a rear-guard action. Webster put a hand under the stubby chin and tilted Don Juan's head sharply. "Hold up your head," he commanded. "You're the first of your breed I ever saw who would admit he was whipped. Here's five dollars for you—five dollars gold. Take it and return with the piece intact to-morrow morning, Don Juan Cafetero."

Don Juan Cafetero's wondering glance met Webster's directly, wavered, sought the ground, but at a jerk on his chin came back and stayed. Thus for at least ten seconds they gazed at each other; then Webster spoke. "Thank you," he said.

"Me name is John J. Cafferty," the lost one quivered.

"Roight! one for Cafferty," Webster laughed. "Good-bye now, until nine to-morrow. I'll expect you here, John, without fail." And he took the derelict's hand and wrung it heartily.

"Well," Webster remarked humorously to Dolores as he held out his cup for more tea, "if I'm not the original Tumble Tom. I hope I may never see the back of my neck."

"Do you attach any importance to Don Juan's story?" she asked anxiously.

"Yes, but not so much as Don Juan does. I greatly fear I have managed to snarl myself up in a Sobrantean political intrigue, when I haven't the slightest interest either way. However, that's only one more reason why I should finish my work here and get back to Denver."

"But how did all this happen, Mr. Webster?"

"Like shooting fish in a dry lake, Miss Ruey," Webster replied, and related to her in detail the story of his adventure with the Sobrantean assassins in Jackson square and his subsequent meeting with Andrew Bowers aboard La Estrellita.

Dolores laughed long and heartily as Webster finished his humorous recital. "Billy told me God only made one Jack Webster and then destroyed the mold; I believe Billy is right. But do tell me what became of this extraordinary and unbidden guest."

"The night the steamer arrived in port, Billy and Don Juan came out in a launch to say 'Hello,' so I seized upon the opportunity to tell Andrew to jump overboard and swim to the launch. Gave him a little note to Billy—carried it in his mouth—instructing Billy to do the right thing by him—and Billy did it. I don't know what Andrew is up to and I don't care. Where I was raised we let every man roll his own hoop. All I hope is that they don't shoot Andrew. If they do, I fear I'll weep. He's certainly a skookum lad. Do you know, Miss Ruey, I love anybody that can impose on me—make a monkey out of me, in fact—and make me like it?"

"That's so comforting," she remarked dryly.

Webster looked at her sharply, suspiciously; her words were susceptible of a dual interpretation. Her next sentence, however, dissipated this impression. "Because it confirms what I told you this afternoon when I rend your palm," she added.

"You didn't know how truly you spoke when you referred to the dark man that had crossed my path. He's uncomfortably real—drat him!"

"Then you are really concerned?"

"Not at all, but I purpose sleeping with one eye open. I shan't permit myself to feel concerned until they send more than two men after me—say eight or ten."

His indifference appalled her; she leaned forward impulsively and laid a hand on his forearm. "But you must heed Don Juan's warning," she declared seriously. "You must not go out alone at night."

He grinned boyishly. "Of course not, Miss Ruey. You're going to ride out with me this evening."

"I'm not. I'll not subject you to risk."

"Very well; then I shall drive out alone."

"You're a despot, Mr. Webster—a regular despot."

"Likewise a free agent."

"I'll go with you."

"I thought so. For what hour shall I order the carriage?"

"Seven-thirty. After all, they'll not dare to murder you on the Midway."

"I agree with you. It will have to be done very quietly if at all. You've been mighty nice to me this afternoon, secress; I shall be grateful right up to the moment of dissolution."

"Speak softly but carry a big stick," she warned him.

"A big gun," he corrected her. "—two of them, in fact."

"Sensible man! I'm not going to worry about you, Mr. Webster." She nodded her permission for him to retire, and as he walked down the veranda and into the hotel, her glance followed him with pardonable feminine curiosity, marking the breadth of his shoulders, the quick, springy stride, the alert, erect poise of his head on the powerful neck.

"A doer of deeds are you, John Stuart Webster," she almost whispered. "As Kipling would say: 'Wallah! But you are a man!'"

A stealthy footstep sounded below the veranda; she turned and beheld Don Juan Cafetero, his hat in his left hand, in his right a gold-piece which he held toward her.

"Take it, allanah," he wheezed in his hoarse, drunkard's whisper. "Keep it f'r me till to-morrow, for sorra wan av me can I trust to do that same—an' he the same when I can't face that big man wit'out it."

"Why not, Don Juan?"

He hung his red head. "I dunno, Miss," he replied miserably. "Mayhe 'tis on account av him—the eye av him—the way av him—divil such a man did I ever meet—God bless him! Shure, Misther Geary do be the fine lad, but he—he——"

"Mr. Geary never put a big forefinger under your chin and bade you hold up your head. Is that it?"

"'Tis not what he did, Miss but the way he did it. All the fiends av hell 'll be at me this night to spend what he give me—and I—I'm afraid—"

He broke off, mumbling and chattering like a man in the grip of a great terror. In his agony of body and spirit, Dolores could have wept for Don Juan Cafetero, for in that supreme moment the derelict's soul was bare, revealing something pure and sweet and human, for all his degradation. How did Jack Webster know? wondered Dolores. And why did he so confidently give an order to this human flotsam and expect it to be obeyed? And why did Don Juan Cafetero come whining to her for strength to help him obey it?

"That wouldn't be playing the game," she told him. "I can't help you deceive him. You are the first of your breed—"

"Don't say it," he cried. "Didn't he tell me wanst?"

"Then make the fight, Don—Mr. Cafferty." She lowered her voice. "I am depending on you to stay sober and guard him. He needs a faithful friend so badly, now that Mr. Geary is away." She patted the grimy hand and left him staring at the ground. Presently he sighed, quivered horribly, and shambled out of the patio on to the firing-line. And when he reported to Jack Webster at nine o'clock next morning, he was sober, shaking horribly and on the verge of delirium tremens, but tightly clasped in his right hand he held that five-dollar piece. Dolores, who had made it her business to be present at the interview, heard John Stuart Webster say heartily:

"The finest thing about a terrible fight, friend Cafferty, is that if it is a worth-while battle, the spoils of victory are exceedingly sweet. You are now about to enjoy one fourth of the said spoils—a large jolt of aguardiente: You must have it to steady your nerves. Go to the nearest cantina and buy one drink; then come back with the change. By that time I shall have breakfasted and you and I will then go shopping. At noon you shall have another drink; at four o'clock another; and just before retiring you shall have the fourth and last for this day. Remember, Cafferty: one jolt—no more—and then back here with the exact change."

As Don Juan scurried for salvation, Webster turned to Dolores. "He'll fall me now, but that will not be his fault but mine. I've set him too great a task in his present condition. Nevertheless, to use a colloquial expression, I have the Cafferty goat—and I'm going to keep it."

Webster went immediately to his room, called for pen and paper, and proceeded at once to do that which he had never done before—to wit, prepare his last will and testament. In a few brief paragraphs he made a holographic will and split his bankroll equally between the two human beings he cared for most—Billy Geary and Dolores Ruey. "Bill's a gambler like me," he ruminated; "so I'll play safe. The girl is a conservative, and after Bill's wad is gone, he'd be bailed in oil before he'd prejudice hers."

Having made his will, Webster made a copy of it. The copy he placed in an envelope marked: "For Jack. Not to be opened until after my death." This envelope he then enclosed in a larger one and mailed to Billy at Calle de Concordia No. 19.

Having made his few simple preparations for death, Mr. Webster next burrowed in his trunk, brought forth his big army-type automatic pistol and secured it in a holster under his arm, for he deemed it unwise and provocative of curiosity to appear in immaculate ducks that bulged at the right hip. Next he filled two spare clips with cartridges and slipped them into his pocket, thus completing his few simple preparations for life.

He glanced out the window at the sun. There would still be an hour of daylight; so he descended to the lobby, called a carriage and took a short drive.

How To Play Basketball

The Bounce Pass is a development of scientific basketball. It is being used more and more, and in some instances, it is being used to excess. It is a very useful pass and every member of the team should be thoroughly versed in its execution.

There are five contingencies in which the Bounce Pass should be used intelligently.

1—When closely guarded from behind, where it is impossible to raise the ball.

2—When out of bounds, with an opposing player guarding close. After a feint to pass high, the ball can easily be bounced into play and it is almost impossible to block a pass under such circumstances.

3—When there is a scramble for the ball during a mixup, the ball may be bounced out of the melee and into a team-mate's hands before the opposing players realize what has happened.

4—When a pass is to be made ahead of a team-mate coming toward the passer and in the direction of his own goal, the pursuing guard finds it hard to break up such a low pass, for he is thrown off his stride and off his balance.

5—When a player wishes to pass to a team-mate with opposing players in between. The ball can be passed close to the feet of the opposition, so that it will pass by them before they can reach over to block it. The pass should be speedily executed and should be low and skimming so that momentum will not be lost. The Bounce Pass is useful to get the ball past an opponent after a feint has been made to pass high. On short passes, the ball should descend to an angle of approximately 45 degrees to the floor to reach the team-mate about waist high. The Bounce Pass is most effective in short passes.

Two hands are ordinarily used and the ball is usually pushed, though in cases where speed and distance are necessary it may be forcibly thrown.

(This is fourth of a series of talks on basketball taken from lectures in the four-year course in physical education at the University of Michigan. The next will appear in an early issue.)

METHODIST CHURCH

Sunday, March 8th

Our religious work is carried on regularly in seven different units:—two preaching services each Sunday, Junior and Epworth Leagues, Sunday, and Sunday school and two prayer meetings. The purpose of our efforts is to instruct in religion, to give to the unconverted such an expression of Christ as will bring conviction for His blessing and to build up His kingdom within this community.

This Sunday:

10:30, morning worship. The theme, "How We Worship the Christ," by the pastor.

12 o'clock Sunday school. Lesson, "The Crucifixion." Study this lesson and come into school. This text ought to give one a determination to serve God the balance of our lives.

3:00 p. m. Junior League. Our Saviour was an instructor of boys and girls. Every great institution has its foundations. The training of the young is basic to the development of christian men and women.

6:00 p. m., Epworth League. We have splendid crowds. It is much better that our young people gather for a religious meeting. We welcome all who can come.

7:00 p. m., evening service. We will use Pilate for our character sketch. We may criticize the actions of this Roman governor but is not the attitude of many similar to his? He released Barabbas to crucify Christ.

The recent sad deaths of winter, the earthquake of Saturday night and the disastrous fire of Sunday morning calls us to note that earthly things are transitory. An old classic has said, "The earth passeth away." It behooves all of us to fasten our faith on eternal realities. Does it profit a man to spend everything on property and body? The new testament exhortes, "Seek Ye First His Kingdom."

LACK SPIRIT OF BOOSTING

development and their high degree of efficiency is brought about by state wide prosperity in every line.

Michigan's agricultural activities and possiblities are so vnried and so fraught with opportunity the limit can never be reached. Michigan's farming and rural life is not confined to any given section but is state wide, and influences every section of the state. It is so diversified it runs the gamet of almost every phase of rural activity.

Its fruit growing sections are wonderfully productive of the most luscious fruits grown under the sun, grapes, cherries, peaches and small fruits in endless variety and surpassed by no other fruits grown in the world for beauty and flavor. The north part of the state is equally as rich in npple growing possibilities nnd some very extensive acreage is now benring apples equal in every way to the fine fruits grown in other parts of the state.

Michigan fishing interests are a tremendous factor in pouring a wealth of new money into the state, and its importance is little known except in those lake cities where the industry flourishes. Michigan is surrounded on nll sides almost by the world's greatest chain of inland seas, and out of those waters come the choicest of fish that swim. Michigan's lake shore line is greater than all of the other states combined, therefore the principal fresh water fish industry of the world centers in Michigan.

Michigan's mineral wealth is another huge factor in the state's welfare and supremacy. It is not confined to one or two kinds of metals but is so varied, it resolves itself into one of the richest mineral producing states in the world. Copper and iron are the two principal products taken from mother earth in the mining districts, but there is also mined great quantities of coal, salt, gypsum, limestone, glass, whetstones and silver and some gold. Oil nnd gas are also obtained along with the other wealth coming from the heart of mother earth.

If industrial activities interests one and his life has been tied to industrial pursuits, then Michigan again comes to the front on his horizon, as there is unfolded the most stupendous industrial institutiun uf the universe. Detroit's automobile factories and kindred industries, and those that have become emplanted in other Michigan centers cannot be compared with any other industrial institutiona anywhere, because they stand in a class alone. Grand Rapids' furniture industry is world famous, because out of Grand Rapids' immense factories, manned by artisana skilled in the higheat art of wood working comes some of the most pretentious productions in the furniture line.

Other industrial centers in the great state manufacture other lines of commodities, each city it seems contributing to some individual branch of industry while all carry on a general diversified line of industrial endeavor that makes an enormous output flowing out of Michigan to all parts of the world.

Michigan is rich in historic lore. It is rich in industrial history, because the history of Michigan in late years is the history of astounding industrial enterprise, of tremendous agricultural purport. The history of Michigan's resort activities is spreading across the face of the world, because it offers such unrivaled opportunities for the pleasure seeker in the summer months.

Michigan is not merely a state. She is an emplre within herself, with resources and products so vnried she could live entirely within herself.

Michigan's streams and rivers are sufficient to turn the wheels of every industry that can be brought into the state or is here, once they are harnessed ns they are being harnessed by somo of the wonderful power plants being built on them.

Michigan's educational facilities are the last word in efficieney and advancement. She is abundantly endowed with great temples of learning dotted at convenient intervals over the state and her public school system the most thorough.

Michigan's climate is insular to a marked degree as it is governed hy the influences of the great bodies of water around its borders and within its borders. These huge bodies of wnter modifying any temperature change that may sweep in from other states.

Michigan, oh, there is so much to say about this wonderful state it is difficult to let go of the thrend once one visions or attempts to vision it all.

shine and restful nights, its palpitating, blood pumping, health giving ozone are incomparable.

Michigan's trunk line highway system and improved county roads is the most complete and extensive highway system anywhere else in the whole world. Instead of a great road or two or three across the state, it has an arterial system, serving almost every corner of the great state, from its farthest west border to the southermost point and the state is carrying on a program thnt will materinlly add to this wonderful system from yenr to year.

Michigan's railroads are aufficient unto themselves. They are not great because of the tranacontinental hauls over them, but instead are dependent nlmost entirely upon the in and out-going business of the state, and are in reality linked up as an integral part of the state and hold state interest more than rail lines do in most states. Their development haa been in harmony with the state's

Many Pangs That Pass for Rheumatism Are Really Due to Weak Kidneys.

Do you suffer the agonizing pangs of rheumatism? Are you tortured with rheumatic joints and stabbing twinges? Then you should know that many so-called rheumatic troubles are due to an excess of urie acid and must be treated through the kidneys. When the kidneys weaken, the whole system is upset by these body poisons. Help your kidneys with a stimulant diuretic. Use Doan's Pills, the remedy your neighbors recommend! Here is a Charlevoix case.

Mrs. J. H. O'Neill, 101 Green Ave., says: "I was just miserable with a lameness across the small of my back. Then I had rheumatic pains and twinges in my limbs. I was nervous and always had a weak, tired out feeling. My kidneys acted irregularly, too. I used Doan's Pills and they drove the trouble nway. I soon felt like a different person."

JERSEY BREEDERS HOLD A MEETING

Organize Breeders' Association and Elect Officers

Jersey breeders of Ellsworth, Central Lake and Charlevoix held an interesting meetiog in Ellsworth February 25th. H. E. Dennison, American Jersey extension man, was the principal speaker. He was assisted by Burton Mellencamp, county agent for Charlevoix, and Mr. Jewitt, Antrim county agent. Mr. Mellencamp was former official tester for the North Antrim County Testing association, and has accomplished much for better cows, especially Jerseys.

The two county Jersey Breeders' association was urgnnized—and the following directors chosen: Ernia Lohne, Central Lake; George Meggison, Charlevoix; Albert Elzinga, Atwood; Nick Dekkinga and Hubert Bearss, of Ellsworth.

A. OF C. MEET A LIVE AFFAIR

FOUR SPEAKERS, INCLUDING AMERICAN JERSEY MAN

Pointed Out Interest Chambers of Commerce Should Have in Cow Testing

The Charlevoix Association of Commerce met last week on February 26th at the council chambers, the meeting being called to order at 8:20 p. m., with president F. E. Cartier in the chair. Thirty-five members were present.

After the minutes of the previous meeting had been read, R. F. Sloan, chairman of the road committee, presented a brief report covering the state's road program for the coming season. He explained that there would be just so much concrete pavement built this year. It had been planned to lay this on M-11, making one solid paved road from Chicago to Traverse City, but that considerable pressure had been brought to bear to divert this concrete from M-11 to M-10, M-13 or M-14. Committees, representing the cities and towns affected, have been organized to boost the interest of each of these other trunk lines. Mr. Sloan suggested that there should be an M-11 committee and that Charlevoix might as well start it as any other city. President Cartier placed this report in the hands of the road committee with power to take such action as they saw fit.

President Cartier introduced Burton C. Mellencamp, our county agricultural agent, whom he requested to introduce the other speakers as well as speaking himself. Mr. Mellencamp, with the assistance of a chart, explained the connection between the county agent, the state agricultural college and the United States department of agriculture, the department of agriculture being the head of the system, the agricultural college its representative in Michigan and the county agent the extension representative to the individual county. Mr. Mellencamp outlined the work that he had done during the past year and outlined his plans for 1925.

Mr. Mellencamp then introduced D. B. Jewell of Bellaire, county agent of Antrim county, who gave a short talk on the elements making for permanency in the farm population, stressing opportunities for a livelihood, interest in work and social life. The social center has changed from the "four corners" to the nearby towns and cities since the coming of the automobile and farmers are demanding better schools and churches.

H. E. Dennison of East Lansing, representing the American Jersey Cattle Club, as field man in Michigan, Ohio and Indiana, discussed the close relations existing between commerce and agriculture, comparing the value of dairy products with others crops and industries. He stated that dairy cattle were bringing into Charlevoix county more money than any other single industry, estimating that with butter fat selling for 40 cents a pound, the average dairy products brought in $400,000.00 annually. The most of this goes to the merchants in the county. He further stated that one third of the cows were unprofitable, one third broke even and only about one third made a profit for their owners. Two thirds the number of cows we now have, if good cows and properly cared for, would net $780,000.00 for the farmers. This, in turn, would find its way to the merchants and is a strong argument for the encouragement of cow testing associations by associations of commerce.

L. L. Drake, former Antrim county agent, now the extension representative of M. A. C. in northern Michigan, spoke last. He reviewed the history of extension work and the results accomplished. Mr. Drake concluded with a plea for support for Mr. Mellencamp, our county agent, in which he showed the association where they would profit by such a course.

By a rising vote, the association expressed their confidence in Mr. Mellencamp and assured him of their co-operation and also expressed their thanks to the four speakers for their efforts and kindness in addressing the association.

There being no further business, the association adjourned.

SHOCK OF OPERATION RESULTED IN DEATH

Mrs. Martha Louisa Luebke Was Nearly 54 Years Old

Mrs. Martha Louisa Heath Luebke, resident of this city for the past fifteen years, died at the Charlevoix hospital at 5:00 o'clock last Sunday evening, March 1st, following an operation performed that morning for the removal of a goitre and diseased thyroid gland.

Mrs. Luebke, who was nearly 54 years of age, was born in Bay City, Michigan, on July 12, 1871, the daughter of John Heath and Sarah Jewell Heath. She left Bay City and moved to Tuscola county with her parents when a child of a few years and from there to Petoskey. She was married in the latter city to August Luebke, in October, 1889 and to this union were born three children, all of whom survive. They are Carlton, George and Albert of Petoskey. Her sister, Mrs. Ben Sweeney, who lives at Merrill, Mich., had been visiting here for some time prior to her sister's death. Mrs. Sarah A. Heath, mother of the deceased, had been living with her daughter in the Ward residence at the corner of Mason and State streets.

The funeral was held Tuesday morning at ten o'clock from the rooms occupied by the Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Burns in the Ward residence, Rev. Herman Burns officiating. Dr. Frank H. Wilkinson of the Christian Science church, which Mrs. Luebke attended, sang two selections. The remains were taken to Petoskey on the afternoon train yesterday and will be interred in the family lot at Greenwood cemetery.

New Menace, Worse Than Cross-word Puzzles, Threatens

At last! We feared it for a long while, but dared not breathe a word until we could be sure. But now the sad truth is apparent! The cross-word puzzle is doomed in Charlevoix! A rival has appeared, sweeping all before it and it first got its start in Ray Ashdon's barber shop, that favorite haunt of the hunter, the trader and the teller of large tales. It is chess!

Drop into this well-known den of iniquity at any time during the day and see the hardened sinners gathered round the board. Absolute silence reigns as the gallery grows with the entrance of each poor fish who comes for a haircut and remains to become enmeshed in the seductive toils of this hydra-headed monster that is about to send the products of Noah Webster and Eberhard Faber to the scrap pile. Finally—"Check"—and the spell is broken, but the game has claimed another victim.

At least a dozen new players have thrown their hats into the ring and more coming. Where will it end? If you see an erstwhile promising and healthy looking citizen staggering along the main drag, bowed over like Millet's "Man with a Hoe" and muttering feverishly to himself about kings and queens and knights, don't phone the sheriff or send in a hurry call for the ambulance—it's only another delerious chess-nut of the horse variety. He's harmless, unless you happen to be wearing a suit of plaid cheeks.

Now, this is graveyard stuff—psst-psst-s-h-h—the fiends responsible for this sad state of affairs are Lon Powers, Charley Hamlin and Johnny Macey. They are the guys "higher up." Don't tell 'em we told you, but something ought to be done about it.

GURLEY BOAK DIES IN WESTERN HOME

Lived in This City Some Thirty Years Ago

In a letter received yesterday by Mrs. Clinton Cooper of this city from her mother-in-law, Mrs. H. C. Cooper, the death of the latter's oldest brother, Gurley Boak, is announced, the end coming suddenly at the close of a long illness at the home of the deceased in Bandon, Oregon, on Wednesday of last week. Heart disease was the cause of his death.

Mrs. Cooper left here on February 19th last, called to Bandon by a telegram stating that her brother was seriously ill, and was at his bedside when he passed away.

Mr. Boak is a former resident of this city and will be remembered by its older citizens as having resided here on Clinton street some thirty years ago. He was a brother of Will Boak of Charlevoix and of Tom Boak who is spending the winter here at the home of their sister, Mrs. Henry C. Cooper on the north side. The deceased is also survived by a son and three daughters.

The funeral was held at Bandon on Saturday of last week. Mrs. Cooper will probably remain there with the family of her late brother for a couple of months longer before returning to Charlevoix.

floor managed to save quite a good portion of the stuff without damage. The Odd Fellows had about $5,000.00 of insurance on their building and Charles E. See and Lou S. See owners of the corner building, carried $5,000.00 on their property.

Where the fire started and what was the cause of it has been the subject of a good deal of speculation without any very definite conclusion being reached. It was first thought that the explosions heard by Mr. and Mrs. See came from the heating plant in the basement but an examination proved this theory to be erroneous. The fire chief is making a careful inspection of the building in an endeavor to learn the true cause of the fire.

Sell Your Milk — Cut the Cost of Raising Calves

Milk is good for calves, but it makes a costly calf. You can raise them just as good and a lot cheaper by feeding Blatchford's Calf Meal. One pound makes a full gallon of rich milk substitute. They like it; they thrive on it. They grow like weeds—strong, vigorous, healthy and develop early into profitable producers.

Blatchford's Calf Meal

is not an experiment. It was first on the market—the most widely known calf meal; used by the most successful breeders for over forty-five years. It contains no waste materials, no cheap by-products. It is a quality feed, but most economical because it gets such splendid results. Every bag guaranteed. Take a bag home on trial.

HOW THEY FEEL ABOUT A PARK

VIEWS EXPRESSED BY SOME OF OUR SUMMER PEOPLE

All Heard from So Far Approve, and There Are No Dissecting Voices

The Shakespeare and Dickens Clubs of Charlevoix which have taken an active interest in civic improvements in Charlevoix and particularly in the direction of securing park improvements, are receiving many encouraging responses from summer residents and offers of assistance. A letter from Daniel H. Burnham, the well known architect of Chicago, writes:

"I have your letter addressed to Mrs. Burnham regarding proposed park improvements overlooking Round Lake. If unybody has made a drawing of this suggested treatment, will you please send me a print of same so I can give it intelligent thought, and possibly, if it is not presuming, I will offer any suggestions that might occur to me."

Another from August Schlafly, of St. Louis, who apends his summers at the Belvedere Club, says:

"Your circular letter of February 11th received and carefully read. My family are very much pleased with your great enterprise and hope it will meet with great success, and no doubt every member of the Belvedere Club will join you in your good work—I am willing to join in any proposition that will help to bring about your splendid enterprise."

Mr. Schlafly is extensively interested in Hot Springs Ark., and his judgment and opinion on resort development is always valuable and safe.

A reply from Mr. Snm Levy, a long time booster for Charlevoix, writes from Fort Wortb, Texas:

"Your letter of February 11th is received. Any improvement you make in the little town of Charlevoix will help it very much. I have been an annual summer resident of your little town for n great number of years, having come there first in 1900 and every year except during the war, have seen all the improvements since the beginning, and I believe the improvement you speak of now will be more valuable than any that has been made. It will help the looks of the town and I BELIEVE IT WILL DRAW MORE TRADE THAN YOU HAVE BEEN GETTING. Wishing you success to that end, I remain."

A letter from Mr. Sidney M. Shoenberg, of St. Louis, one of our "permanent" resorters, and a large taxpayer here, writes:

"Acknowledging your favor of February 11th, I wish to advise you that I um in favor of the plan as outlined in your letter, for the Chnrlevoix Municipal Park. I am of the opinion that this beautifying of your city would add materiully to your increased number of Summer tourists as well ns Resorters and in every way be a great asset to your city."

And now here is one from Charlevoix's old friend and standby. The man who has turned in many times to boost a needed improvement and has secured results. Charlevoix is already much in debt to him for his loyalty and devotion. John says:

"I beg to aeknowledge receipt of your letter dated Febrnury 11th and in reply beg to state that I am heartily in favor of its contents. There is no doubt in my mind tbat the resorters would like to see your plan carried out, and I am sure would be willing to take an active part in this WONDERFUL IMPROVEMENT. During the summer months, no doubt, an affair could be given whereby a substantial sum of money could be raised from the Resortera which could be given to the city of Charlevoix to aid in this work.

I shall be more than pleased to assist you in any may that I possibly can to further this cause."

Yours very truly,
J. R. Wineman."

These are surely satisfying messages. They show the feeling and sentiment, when it comes to matters of moving forward in this city of ours. The ladies of these two clubs are to be praised for their enterprise and activity in obtaining the sentiment of the people. These ladies do not wish it to be understood that this proposition is original with them, but rather that it is one that all organizations in the city should take up and discuss pro and con. They invite all societies or groups of citizens and particularly the many women'a organizations to join with them for this as well as all betterments. In this way only, can we get ahead and keep pace with the times. It is not expected that all will be of the same mind, but by open discussion and exchange of ideas, nnd honest and fair expression

MORE WINTER SPORTS DOPE

THINKS MISS HANNAH BEMIS STARTED SOMETHING

St. Louis Editor Speaks of Charlevoix in Same Breath with St. Moritz

In a recent issue of "The Censor," a weekly magazine published at St. Louis, Missouri, appeared the following article—an echo of the late visit of the Bemis party to Charlevoix:

"If Charlevoix, Mich., eventually becomes a popular rendezvous for winter sports, much of the credit therefor will be due to Hannah Bemis, whose very attractive younger sister, Elizabeth, made her debut this winter. Hannah conceived the novel idea of converting Charlevoix into a background for winter sports some time ago and took the matter up with one of the hotel proprietors. The result of the correspondence was an experimental trip to Charlevoix the latter part of last month, with a party of friends, chaperoned by two young married couples. It was found that geographically the site lent itself ideally to the purpose. Among the diversions offered were skiing from Mt. McSauba, ice skating, sleigh riding and fishing through the ice on Pine Lake, a body of water frozen solid at this season of the year, which skirts the southeastern shores of Charlevoix for a distance of eighteen miles. Dancing and cards occupied the evenings. One of the inviting features of the accommodations at the hotel was the savory dishes or home raised fowl, such as chickens and turkeys and the wonderful fish and steaks that were served, for which the appetites, sharpened by the health-giving ozone of the northern regions and a day spent in exhilerating exereise, amply

BOYLE MAIL SLEIGH LOST IN ICE FLOES

Mail Pouch and Contents Swallowed Up by Lake

Carrier of the Beaver Island mail from Cross Village to St. James, William Boyle had the misfortune to lose his sleigh, the pouch and all the latters it contained in a peculiar accident last week Tuesday.

Mr. Boyle sent two of his assistants ahead with the mail while he waited for the undertaker who bad been summoned to the Island to prepare the remains of the late Mrs. Ulysses McCann for interment. The two men proceeded until tbey camo to a place where the ice had cracked and beaved up on edge, forming a barrier unsurmountable for the horses. So they unhitcbed to lead the horses a little farther down the crack where they could get across, intending to lift tbe sleigh over themselves and while they were gone the contending floes gave a mighty heave and buried the sleigh tbey had left behind them with the mail and all under tons of ice.

IS THIRD LARGEST INDUSTRY

FOLLOWS AUTOMOBILES AND AGRICULTURE IN STATE

Hugh J. Gray Bases His Statemeot Regardiog Resort Business oo Government Figures

In a letter to a prominent clubwoman of Charlevoix, written in response to her inquiry relative to the size and importance of various industries in the state of Michigan, Hugh J. Gray, secretary and manager of tbe Michigan Tourist and Resort Association, makes the following interesting statements:

"Replying to yours of the 21st which was received this morning, wish to advise that the tourist business in 1923 was recognized by the United States government statistical department as the third largest industry in the state, that is automobile manufacturing and agriculture coming ahead of it.

The active supporters of the tourist and resort association feel that the possibilities so far as the tourist and resort business is concerned have hardly been touched. In other words, as you probably know, we have many beautiful cottnge sites still unoccupied, and given a normal season the hotel and boarding house cnpacity in western Michigan is not nearly enough to take care of the business which should be secured.

Western Michigan has about 600 miles of shore line along Lake Michigan, practically all of which is good bathing beach, our territory is much cooler than most any other spot in the United States because the prevailing winds as proved by a great many years experience are from the northwest, which means that the air is purified and cooled while passing over Lake Michigan. In addition we have some 5,000 odd inland lakes, practically all of which are available for cottage sites, the fishing in most of them is excellent as it is also in the four or five rivers which traverse the lower peninsula.

Our roads are at the present time in very good condition as compared to other resort centers, the marking of these roads by the time this season opens this year will be in excellent shape and when you consider the fact that with above advantages as well as our forests, beautiful scenery, etc., is within 48 to 70 hours of nbout 35,000,000 people who are more than ever looking for summer recreation I think you will begin to grasp the possibilities of this industry.

Just how the resort business in Michignn compares with other states I am unable to advise you, except we believe that western Michigan at least is probably at this time the largest patronized resort center in this section of the United States. We have very strong competition in Wisconsin, Minnesota and Colorado, all of which are spending as much or more money as Michigan in the development of their roads in this industry, also very strong cnmpetition from southern Californiu. At the first glance it would appear that California would not be a competitor to Michigan, but a study of the figures has shown us that a great deal of the business which we originally secured from the outstanding states, also from Kansas, Nebraska and Iowa is now going to southern Cali-

SEND HIM TREES AND SOME GRASS

THIS IS GEORGE PRIEST'S PLEA FROM FLORIDA

Bnt When It Comes to Doing Thiogs for Resorters, We Are Not Io It at All

Scented with the odor of orange blossoms—its pages rustling with the gentle whisper of tropical zephyrs among the palms, comes the following letter to our editorial desk from Mr. and Mrs. George Priest, who are sojourning at St. Petersburg, Fla.:

"My Dear Friend Dell:—

Have intended writing you for some time but have been so busy looking at things and running around have neglected a good many things I should have done, especially, writing to friends at home.

We are certainly enjoying the sunshine and warm weather down here. It is just like July weather at home. This is certainly a great place for doing things. The city is voting on a $2,000,000 bond issue for park improvements this spring. They say it will pass without a doubt. They estimate $20,000,000 of building permits in 1925. Wish you could see how they protect the water front down here. They claim it is the biggest asset St. Petersburg has. There is nothing to obstruct the view of tourists. It is the same in Tampa and wherever we have been.

We took a trip to a place called Temple Terrace, about twenty-eight miles from here across Ganda bridge over Tampa Bay. This bridge is six miles long and cost one and one-half million dollars. The place is on Hillsbour River and is known as the old Potter Palmer estate. We had lunch at the club and heard a lecture on the state of Florida which was very fine. The speaker asked people from different states to raise their hands and found there were 27 states represented among about 125 people.

I think Florida will be the greatest winter resort in the world sometime. Real estate men are thicker than fleas around here and they are certainly doing things. Wish our friends could be down here and enjoy some of the grapefruit and oranges. You can have all you want if you want to go out and pick them yourselves, for the picking. The citrus crop of 1923 in Florida was 16,500,000 boxes, returning a $42,000,000 net income to growers.

There are so many things I might write about, but will not attempt to at this time. We are mighty glad to get the Courier and the news from home. I think we enjoy that ubout as much as we do the weather down here. Wish we could have a few of our maple trees to sit under and some of the kind of grass we have up there to walk on. I cannot get used to the tropical trees down here—our trees are so much nicer.

Well, I think this is about enough of this for once. Say hello to the boys and with kindest regards from Mrs. Priest and myself to you all, I am

Yours very truly,

IRENE FINUCAN NOW RADIO BROADCASTER

Has Been Heard Several Times Here from Chicago Stations

Miss Irene Finucan, of Traverse City and formerly of Charlevoix, is now in Chicago, singing for the radio broadcasting stations. She went down there about two weeks ago and since then has been heard several times by radio funs in this city. Recently, she sang at the following atations:

March 3rd—WQJ, Rainbow Gardens—Calumet Baking Powder Co.

Murch 6th—WQJ, Rainbow Gardens, Culumet Baking Powder Co.

March 10th—KYW, Westinghouse station.

Mareh 10th—WQJ, Rainbow Gardens.

She may be heard on Thursday, March 12th, from WLS, Sears-Roebuck station at 3:30 p. m., and also at WEBH, Edgewater Beach Hotel in evening.

Those who have heard Miss Finucan over the radio say that the selections came through strong and clear and that she possesses an excellent broadcasting voice. She has a fine, well-trained and powerful soprano of wide range and should find success in radio work, which it is anticipated she will ultimately take up, although she expects to return to Traverse City for a time.

ACT ON DEATH PENALTY BILL

McEACHERON'S MEASURE UP FOR DISCUSSION SOON

Its Author Believes He Has Enough Votes in Lower House to Pass His Provision

Interest in the state legislature this week centers around the McEucheron capital punishment measure involving the question upon which law makers act every two years. It is considered with as much bitter debate as anything brought before the body.

Plans of house leaders are to set Thursday afternoon aside for discussion of the bill. Unless some limit is fixed for speeches the session will be a long one. McEacheron, whose name is attached to the death bill, claims he has enough votes to pass the provision in the lower branch.

The measure as drafted this time provides a trial court may puss sentences of death in cases of first degree murder whera conviction is obtained by confession or testimony of eye witnesses. If the case is based on circumstantial evidence the death penalty cannot be invoked. Arguments on the bill are based on a thorough discussion of the theological aspect, citution of cases where innocent men were executed and others convicted of murder who were released from prison only to kill ugain.

DOWN WARNER RESOLUTION!

RINGS DEATH KNELL FOR RURAL SCHOOL LIBRARIES

Would Take from Them Beoefit of Fines aod Forfeitures Paid to County

The educational forces of Michigan, aroused by the Warner joint resolution in the legislature which would take from the school libraries in every district of this state the financial support they now receive under the constitution from fines and forfeitures paid in to each county treasury, have collected the facts to show that in most instances practically all the financial aid school libraries receive would thereby be wiped out.

There are over 7,000 school districts in Michigan, and the major part of them would he deprived of most of the support their little school libraries now receive if this Warner resolution should be passed by the legislature and later adopted by the people. The facts show that two-thirds of the counties now expend for their school libraries more than the amounts they receive from fines and forfeitures, which proves conclusively this money is being used for the purpose designated by the state constitution.

Library study shows that $1.00 per capita of all population is neceasary for school and adult popultion, according to Samuel H. Ranck of Grand Rapids, recognized as one of the leading librarinns of the state and the country. The highest per capita of penal fine money for 1923 was in Monroe county, where it nveraged 28.9 cents for all the population. The lowest was six-tenths of one cent for Ontonagon county. Few counties had a per capita of over 10 cents, and the big majority of them ranged from two nnd three to six or seven cents per capita.

For 1923 there were 51 counties that expended more for their libruries than was received from the fine money. Thus 32 spent a little less than what they received, but in most instances it was close up to the limit of that fund.

Two things then, it is pointed out by the educational forces, including the Michigan State Teachers' Association, are conclusive, and they are: (1) The per capita of school library money from fines received by each county makes up only a small part of the total amount necessary to maintain the libraries. (2) The counties, through their school districts, are now using hundreds of thousands of dollars more each year than the fines received, showing that such fund is used and vitally needed for its present purpose.

In Michigan 16 per cent of the school population graduate from high school, and 8 per cent graduate from college. In the country at large 6.7 per cent have college trnining, 25.1 per cent have high school training but a large part of this number never graduate, and 61.1 per cent have some degree of common school training. The remainder, 7.1 per cent of the people, have no training at all.

There are 23,000,000 of the nation's total population in school today. They have the advantages of educational institutions. But the remainder of the population, or about four of every five, must look elsewhere for any educational fncilities, and where would they go without the public libraries?

The joint resolution No. 3 now pending in the legislature, which proposes to take the penal fine money und place it in the general fund of the county, city, village and township, would make the following change: At the present time the

VICKS VAPORUB

Over 17 Million Jars Used Yearly

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

By B. C. Mellencamp

Pyrotol is the new war explosive that is available at the present time for use in clearing land. It is practically the same as sodatol both in strength, effectiveness, and price, and is highly recommended by the Michigan Agricultural College as a substitute for sodatol, the supply of which has been exhausted. The popularity of these war explosives can be explained by the fact that in the year 1924, 1,500,000 pounds were distributed in Michigan. If you have a large number of stumps in your fields that are continually in your way in working, stop and figure which is the cheapest—to buy this form of explosive and eradicate them quickly, easily, and cheaply, or in all of your farm operntions continue to go around, lose the use of the land, time, and labor, and no doubt your temper in addition.

Don't get me wrong, I am not encouraging the clearing of new land but rather freeing the land you are now working of stumps und other obstructions which tend to decrease the profitable and economical cultivation of it. The per unit cost is one of the important factors in managing a successful farm and having your field clean will help to lower it.

The price of this pyrotol is $9.75 per hundred laid down at Petoskey. On the average, three sticks weigh a pound. With every two hundred pounds 100 caps will be included. Also directions as to how to use it will be given away with each purchase. It was impossible to distribute a carload in one single county, so Charlevoix, Emmet and Otsego counties are cooperating in distributing a carload—that is if sufficient orders are turned in.

Send your orders with the cash or check to your agricultural agent at Boyne City. As soon as sufficient orders are received the carloads can be shipped. If we are not able to order this amount your money will be refunded. Act now!

Your agent has a few farm account books on hand now which are available as long as they last. Stop in the office and get one free. After the present supply is exhausted the new books will cost 15 cents. Send 4 cents for postage and one will be sent.

Also have a supply of Michigan new poultry house construction plans available for your use. If you are thinking about building a new house this year it will pay you to have these plans sent to you.

Arrangements Made for Spraying Demonstration Next Spring

Plans have been completed with the horticultural department of M. A. C. to hnve an all day spraying demonstration some time in April in this county. The news will be of great interest to the fruit growers throughout this section as many are planning on taking better care of their orchards and thereby being able to market a more profitable product. The most important factor in securing good fruit is the matter of spraying and that is what Mr. Cardinnell, horticultural specialist of M. A. C., who will be present at this demonstration will discuss in detail. He will start in with the mixing of the spray material, the placing of the solution in the tank and personally apply the spray to the trees. It is thought that this will be the most effective way of demonstrating the proper methods to use the spray materinl. It is impossible to make a definite date for this demonstration as the time for the first spray application varies with the season and only is applied within a limited time. Watch for further announcements concerning this demonstration.

Have you thought seriously about availing yourself of the opportunity or ordering your supply of pyrotol? The price of this explosive is only $9.75 per cwt. ut Petoskey, and is fully as good in all respects as sodatol which has been exhausted. In every two hundred pounds, 100 caps will be furnished. Send your order with the money to the agricultural agent at Boyne City and as soon as sufficient orders are received the car will arrive.

Also if you are in need of lime be sure to make your wants known to your local Co-op. manager who is taking orders for a carload at $2.50 per ton.

Our services for the coming week are announced as follows:

Preaching Sunday, March 15, at 10:30. Mrs. Vlannah Crites will give a talk from Proverbs, 16:6, "By the fear of the Lord men depart from gvil."

Sunday school at 11:45. There is nothing like a good Sunday school with good quallfied teachers for religious trainng. In contempt of christianity, it is sometimes said preacher's children are the worst of nny and stand but little show of making good, but a compilation of facts show that:

Three preacher's sons were in the White House;

Nine were signers of the Declaration of Independence;

Five supreme court judges, many governors and others in government positions were minister's sons. In proportion to their number, minister's sons should have one name in two hundred and twenty in "Who's Who in America." They have but twelve. Seven of the mistresses of the White House have been minister's daughters.

Young people's meeting at 6:30 Sunday evening.

Preaching service at 7:30 Sunday evening.

Prayer meeting at 7:30 Wednesday evening.

Young people's prayer meeting at 7:30 Thursday evening.

Everybody is invited to our services.

ROCK ELM

Local fishermen nre now moving their fish houses from the lake.

Joe Whitfield and Ben Smatts were out Sunday, looking over telephone lines 162 and 118 which were not giving satisfactory service.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Jensen made a short call at the Lawton home Saturday afternoon.

Several from this neighborhood helped Walter and Charlie Cooper to celebrate their 23rd birthday.

Miss Jessie Metz, who has been sick in bed for the past two weeks, is slowly regaining her strength.

Mrs. Whitfield, Mrs. Smatts, Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Kowalski and Mrs. Lawton were callers at the Metz home Sunday, and all wished Miss Jessie a speedy recovery.

Returning to the hotel he dismissed the carriage, climbed the three short steps to the entrance and was passing through the revolving portal, when from his rear some one gave the door a violent shove, with the result that the turnstile partition behind him collided with his back with sufficient force to throw him against the partition in front. Instantly the door ceased to pivot, with Webster locked neatly in the triangular space between the two sections of the revolving door and the jamb.

He turned and beheld in the section behind him an officer of the Sobranteau army. This individual, observing he was under Webster's scrutiny, scowled and peremptorily motioned to Webster to proceed—which the latter did, with such violence that the door, continuing to revolve, caught up with the Sobranteau and subjected him to the same indignity to which he had subjected Webster.

Once free of the door, Webster waited just inside the lobby for the Sobranteau to conclude his precipitate entrance. When he did, Webster looked him over with mild curiosity and bowed with great condescension. "Did any gentleman ever tell the senor that he is an ill-mannered monkey?" he queried coolly in excellent Spanish. "If not, I desire to give the senor that information, and to tell him that his size alone prevents me from giving him a nice little spanking."

"Pig!" the rude one answered hotly. His olive features paled with anger, he trembled with emotion and seemed undecided what to do—seeing which Webster grinned at him tantalizingly. That decided him. No Latin-American, with the exaggerated ego of his race, can bear even a suspicion of ridicule. The officer walked fiercely toward Webster and swung his arm toward the latter's face in an effort to land a slap that was "meant."

Webster merely threw back his head and avoided the blow; his long left arm shot out and beat down the Sobranteau's guard; then Webster's right hand closed around the officer's collar. "Come to me thou insolent little one," he crooned, and jerked his assailant toward him, gathered him up in his arms, carried him, kicking and screaming with futile rage, out into the patio and soused him in the fountain.

"Now, then, spitfire, that will cool your hot head, I trust," he admonished his unhappy victim, and returned to the hotel. At the desk he paused.

"Who was that person I just bathed?" he inquired of the excited clerk.

"Ah, senor, you shall not long be kept in ignorance," that functionary informed him. "That is the terrible Captain Benavides—"

"Do you know, I had a notion it was he?" Webster replied ruminatively. "Well, I suppose I'm in for a duel now," he added to himself as he climbed the stairs to his room. "I think that will be most interesting."

John Stuart Webster changed into dry clothing and descended to the dining-room. Miss Piney was already seated at her table and motioned him to the seat opposite her, and as he sat down with a contented little sigh, she gazed at him with a newer and more alert interest.

"I hear you've been having adventures again," she challenged. "The news is all over the hotel. I heard it from the head waiter."

"Coffee and pistols for two at daylight," he answered cheerily. "By the way, I have made my will, just to be on the safe side. Will you be good enough to take charge of it until after the funeral? You can turn it over to Billy then."

She fell readily into the bantering spirit with which he treated this serious subject. Indeed, it was quite impossible to do otherwise, for John Stuart Webster's personality radiated such a feeling of security, of absolute, unbounded confidence in the future and disdain for whatever of good fortune or ill the future might entail, that Dolores found it impossible not to assimilate his mood.

At seven-thirty, after a delightful dinner, the memory of which Mr. Webster was certain would linger under his foretop long after every other memory had departed, he escorted her to the open carriage he had ordered, and for two hours they circled the Malecon with the elite of Buenaventura, listening to the music of the band, and, during the brief intermissions, to the sound of the waves lapping the beach at the foot of the broad driveway.

"This," said John Stuart Webster, as he said goodnight to Dolores in the lobby, "is the end of a perfect day."

It wasn't, for at that precise moment a servant handed him a card, and indicated a young man seated in an adjacent lounging-chair, at the same time volunteering the information that the visitor had been awaiting Senor Webster's return for the past hour.

Webster glanced at the card and strode over to the young man. "I am Mr. Webster, sir," he announced civilly in Spanish. "And you are Lieutenant Arredondo?"

The visitor rose, bowed low and indicated he was that gentleman. "I have called, Mr. Webster," he stated in most excellent English, "in the interest of my friend and comrade, Captain Benavides."

"Ah, yes! The fresh little rooster I ducked in the fountain this evening. Well, what does the little squirt want now? Another ducking?"

Arredondo flushed angrily but remembered the dignity of his mission and controlled his temper. "Captain Benavides has asked me to express to you the hope that you, being doubtless a man of honor—"

"Stop right there, Lieutenant. There is no doubt about it. I am a man of honor, and unless you are anxious to be ducked in the fountain, you will be more careful in your choice of words. Now then: You are about to say that, being a man of honor—"

"You would accord my friend the satisfaction which one gentleman never fails to accord another."

"That lets me out, amigo," Webster laughed. "Benavides isn't a gentleman. He's a cutthroat, a murdering little black-and-tan-hound. Do I understand he wants me to fight a duel with him?"

Lieutenant Arredondo could not trust himself to speak, and so he bowed profoundly.

"Very well, then, Lieutenant," Webster agreed. "I'll fight him."

"Tomorrow morning at five o'clock."

"Five minutes from now if you say so."

"Captain Benavides will be grateful for your willing spirit, at least," the second replied bitterly. "You realize, of course, Mr. Webster, that as the challenged party, the choice of weapons rests with you."

"Certainly. I wouldn't have risked a duel if the choice lay with the other fellow. With your permission, my dear sir, we'll fight with Mauser rifles at a thousand yards, for the reason that I never knew a Grenser that could hit the broad side of a brewery at any range over two hundred and fifty yards." Webster chuckled fiendishly.

Lieutenant Arredondo bit his lips in anger and vexation. "I cannot agree to such an extraordinary duel," he complained. "It is the custom in Solorante for gentlemen to fight with rapiers."

"Oh, dry up, you sneaking murderer," Webster exploded. "There isn't going to be any duel except on my terms—so you might as well take a straight tip from headquarters and stick to plain assassination. You and Benavides have been sent out by your superior to kill me—you got your orders this very afternoon at the entrance to the government palace—and I'm just not going to be killed. Beat it, boy, while the going is good." He pointed toward the hotel door. "Out, you blackguard!" he roared. "Vaya!"

Lieutenant Arredondo rose and with dignified mien started for the door. Webster followed, and as his visitor reached the portal, a tremendous kick, well placed, lifted him down to the sidewalk. Shrieking curses, he fled into the night; and John Stuart Webster, with a satisfied feeling that something accomplished had earned a night's repose, retired to his room his mauve silk pajamas, and slept the sleep of a healthy, conscience-free man.

At about the same hour Neddy Jerome, playing solitaire in the Engineers' club in Denver, was the recipient of a cablegram which read:

"If W. cables accepting reply rejecting account job filled otherwise beans spilled. Implicit obedience spells victory.

"Henrietta."

Neddy Jerome wiped his spectacles, adjusted them on his nose and read this amazing message once more. "Jumped-up Jehosophat!" he murmured. "If she hasn't followed that madcap Webster clear to Buenaventura! If she isn't out in earnest to earn her fee, I'm an orang-outang! By thunder, that's a smart woman. All right! I'll be implicitly obedient."

Two hours later Neddy Jerome received another cablegram. It was from John Stuart Webster and read as follows:

"Hold job ninety days at latest may be back before. If satisfactory cable."

Again Mr. Jerome had recourse to the most powerful expletive at his command. "Henrietta knew he was going to cable and beat the old sourdough to it," he soliloquized. He was wrapped in profound admiration of her cunning for as much as five minutes; then he indited this reply to his victim:

"Time, tide and good jobs wait for no man. Sorry. Job already filled by better man."

When John Stuart Webster received that cablegram the following morning, he cursed bitterly—not because he had lost the best job that had ever been offered him, but because he had lost through playing a good hand poorly. He hated himself for his idiocy.

CHAPTER XI.

For fully an hour after retiring John Stuart Webster slept the deep, untroubled sleep of a healthy unworried man; then one of the many species of "jigger" which flourish just north and south of the equator crawled into bed with him and promptly proceeded to establish its commissary on the inner flank of the Websterian thigh, where the skin is thin and the blood close to the surface. As a consequence, Mr. Webster awoke suddenly, obliterated the intruder and got out of bed for the purpose of anodating the injured spot with alcohol—which being done, an active search of the bed resulted in the discovery of three more jiggers and the envelopment of John Stuart Webster's soul in the fogs of apprehension.

"'Tis an evil land, filled with trouble," he mused as he lighted a cigaret. "I wish Bill were here to advise me. He ought to be able to straighten this deal out and assure the higher-ups that I'm not butting in on their political affairs. But Bill's up-country and here I am under surveillance and unable to leave the hotel to talk it over with Andrew Bowers, the only other white expert I know of in town. And by the way, they're after Andrew, too! I wonder what for."

He smoked two cigarets, the while he pondered the various visible aspects of this dark mess in which he found himself floundering. And finally he arrived at a decision. "These chaps aren't thorough," Webster decided. "They'll see me safely to bed and pick me up again in the morning—so I'll take a chance that the coast is clear, slip out now and talk it over with Andrew."

He looked at his watch—eleven-thirty. Hurriedly he dressed, strapped on his automatic pistol, dragged his bed noiselessly to the open window and tied to the bed-leg the rope he used to lash his trunk; then he lowered himself out the window. The length of rope permitted him to descend within a few feet of the ground.

Webster made his way to the street unnoticed and ten minutes later appeared before the entrance of El Buen Amigo just as Mother Jeaks was barring it for the night.

"I am Mr. Webster," he announced, "—Mr. Geary's friend from the United States."

Mother Jeaks, having heard of him, was of course profoundly flustered to meet this toff who so carelessly wired his down-and-out friends pesos oro in lots of a thousand. Cordially she invited him within to slow a peg of her best, which invitation Mr. Webster promptly accepted.

"To your beautiful eyes," Webster toasted her. "And now would you mind leading me to the quarters of Billy's friend Mr. Bowers?"

"Poodles" Hanaford, since his entry into motion picture comedy, has surprised in no small degree that part of the public that heretofore has regarded "Poodles" as a circus clown only, without knowing his great comedy ability.

"Poodles'" second Educational-Tuxedo comedy, "No Loafing," will form the comedy portion of the bill at the Palace Theatre Saturday and Sunday, March 14 and 15, and those who did not have the pleasure of witnessing his first picture "Front!", will have the opportunity of seeing "Poodles" in a comedy that stamps him as one of the most capable of the funny men. In neither of his two motion picture comedies has "Poodles" resorted to grotesque make-up or "mugging," but he has played his comedy parts with a skill and effectiveness remarkable in a "straight" make-up.

Can a man and a woman, both products of our modern hot-house civilization, wrest a living from Nature, unaided by any of the present-day conveniences?

That is the interesting question that "Empty Hands," the new Paramount picture, coming shortly to the Palace Theatre, raises and answers. It is a Victor Fleming production based on Carey Wilson's adaptation of Arthur Stringer's daring novel of the same name which originally was published in serial form in Harper's Bazaar.

Let's go to FLORIDA

Every day some tired, prosperous or otherwise travel-inclined man says to his wife, "Let's go to Florida!" And such is the power of advertising that, although neither of them may have been there before, they know just how to go, approximately what it will cost, and where they will want to stay.

The same with anything you may need or want. You already know all about it, by whom it is made, what it costs, and where it is for sale. Advertising is the modern intelligencer. It keeps you informed, advises you of new things, suggests new uses for articles you already own, and prepares you today for wise and useful purchases tomorrow.

It does all this for you, almost unconsciously, during the half-hour or so you spend each day with your newspaper. Little by little—the best and surest way to learn—advertising makes you informed of what is going on in the world that is useful to you.

"I SOLEMNLY SWEAR"

When a man buys a hunting license in Michigan he is required to appear before a county clerk or game warden in person, make out an affidavit, swear to its truthfulness, pay the fee and depart happy.

If the truth was known there isn't one sportsman out of five that raises his right and and repeats the oath when he procures his hunting license and worse, the law calling for this is without any penalty for its violation through negligence of a county clerk or warden.

Here is a case in point. We will omit names. A prominent sportsman of his state invited two young men attending a Michigan college to be his guests during the last deer hunting season. He appeared before his county clerk and secured two resident deer hunters' licenses for these chaps, as a matter of convenience and courtesy. They were given him, which was all wrong in the first place. The boys spent the hunting season up north and were successful in bagging one deer. After they departed, much to the chagrin of the host, it was discovered that both of them were residents of New Jersey and had no right hunting on a resident's license. Game wardens started John W. Law after them. In the meantime Mr. Host remits to the department at Lansing $100 for two non-resident licenses, claiming that he did not know his guests were non-residents, which is possible, and further that his guests did not know what kind of a license they were hunting with. The wardens naturally wanted to arrest someone, which is usual, and decided that the county clerk as well as the hunters were liable. This was quite correct, but found that the hunters had returned to New Jersey and could be extradited only on a perjury charge which was not committed and that the license law contained no penalty for the county clerk's violation. So no one was arrested although the violation was perpetrated.

Will someone please figure out how a law is to be upheld when those who framed it provided no punishment for its disregard.

Don't be afraid that anyone will take a crack at you for claiming that our fish and game laws need revision. They do.—Albert Stoll, Jr., in Detroit News.

DIDJA EVER TRY DIVING FOR A BIG ONE?

Ask Pearl Johnson How It's Done—He Knows

Some of these fishing fiends get so dad blamed nutty once in a while that the hook and line stuff is too slow and they pull some funny stunts trying to land their catch. As for instance, Pearl Johnson diving through the ice of Pine Lake after a big one—that got away.

Yes, we know that isn't what Pearl or Danny Bassett who figured as the hee-ro of the incident will tell you about it. According to them Mr. Johnson started out over the ice to try his luck Tuesday and just as he got far enough from shore so that the water was deeper than he was, he broke through a soft spot (according to the story) and Dan had to pull him out. He went home and changed his clothes and then—you'd 'a thought he'd 'a had sense enough to stay home when he got there, but—no, he had to go right back to the same spot again that afternoon. Funny how it affects 'em, isn't it?

Central Lake to Vote on Adoption of New Deal

Central Lake has arranged to get electric current from the Elk Electric Co. of Elk Rapids for light and power. They voted Monday on the proposition to bond for $15,000, $10,000 to build the lines from Clam River to Central Lake and $5,000 for the transformers and other equipment necessary to distribute the current in town.

They will buy the current at Clam River, and carry it at their own expense into Central Lake and distribute it. The distance is about 10 miles. The current will be 12,000 volts before being tranformed to 220 and 110 volts for power and lighting purposes.

Central Lake has had 220 volt direct current service for a great many years, furnished by A. F. Walbrecht by steam power. The hours were short, however, and the quantity not sufficient for Central Lake, hence the arrangement to get unlimited current on a 24-hour schedule.

IS THIRD LARGEST INDUSTRY

fornia on account of their vast expenditure of money for advertising, you can readily see that it is having its effect.

Wisconsin, Minnesota and Colorado spend anywhere from three to ten times more than we are able to here in Michigan to advertise their possibilities, all of which together with the lack of high-grade hotel accommodations is seriously retarding our territory and probably will continue to do so until the idea can be thoroughly sold to the business men of western Michigan and enough so that we can eradicate local petty jealousies."

EAST JORDAN ACID PLANT DESTROYED

Early Morning Fire Entails Loss of $80,000

Another recent and disastrous fire occurred at East Jordan on Friday morning of last week when at an early hour the acetic acid plant of the Michigan Iron & Chemical Co. was completely destroyed by a blaze of unknown origin. The building is a four story structure, about 70 by 40 feet in dimension.

The fire, which it is thought started at about two a. m., had gained considerable headway when discovered and quickly spread to all parts of the building. We are not advised accurately as to the extent of the loss, but reports available place it at around $80,000. Officers of the company claim that it would be some time before the machinery could be inspected to determine the exact extent of the damage.

The walls of the building, which was a unit by itself, are still standing. The other unit of the plant will continue to operate as usual.

INTERESTING BITS OF INFORMATION CLIPPED FROM OUR EXCHANGES

The half-miler on the U. of M. track team who received all "A" grades last semester is evidently on the right track.

Another case is reported of an upstate man who heard rumors of his own death. If we were he, we should take no notice of it.

A girl at Grand Rapids changed her mind while on the way to church to be married. Others wait a few minutes, and get a divorce.

The first grass fire of the season is reported from Kalamazoo. Pretty soon we will have to take precautions agninst dropping a match in the water when it is too dry.

"Dowagiac, Michigan, Pride of the Dixie Trail," is the slogan adopted by local interests for advertising this city. All that remains is for the rival cities on the Dixie trail to get proud of it.

A pickle salting plant with a capacity of 7,000 bushels is to be erected at Orleans Center this spring. Do what you will, murder and pickle factories always eventually leak out.

An Allegan county woman who weighs only 75 pounds has celebrated her eighty-sixth birthday. It is astonishing what the absence of worry about having to reduce can do for a woman.

It is hoped that residents of the Soo, tempted by the bounty on wolves, will be careful not to injure little Romulus and Remus when they go out after the big bronze fellow in the public square.

A Hastings farmer who had boasted openly of his wealth was robbed one night of $2,000 in Liberty bonds and $300 in cash. In spite of the alleged hard times, there are some farmers who can lose almost as much as a business man.

The postmaster at Ottawa Beach has retired and an effort is being made to secure a successor, but no one seems inclined to take the job. The falling off in the daily number of postal cards to read is playing havoc with many of our smaller offices.

A Kalamazoo man was walking across a vacant lot when he saw an old tin pail, gave it a hard kick, and found a new pair of shoes under it. It is no magic pail, though, and we fancy the next fellow who kicks it will find only the first man's old pair of shoes.

A Menominee small boy complains that he had 79 sparrows all laid out ready to take to the city hall for the collection of $1.58 bounty, when a cat ate the whole lot. However, if he can get the cat's hide while it is that big he may be able to sell it for a tiger skin.

The reason some business men are sarcastic with their stenographers is because they don't dare be that way with their wives.

"He never knows, the poor old bum,

ICE CREAM FREEZER IS LATEST TYPE

Northern Creamery's Big Machine Cost Twelve Hundred

The local plant of the Northern Creamery Co. has been undergoing a considernble amount of redecoration during the past week on the inside and now presents a very fine and shipshape appearance with its glistening white paint and green trim.

A new feature of the plant's equipment this spring is the new Ft. Atkinson, 40 quart ice cream freezer made by the Creamery Package Co. of Chicago, the largest concern of its kind in the United States. This machine, which cost the creamery $1,200, to install, has an hourly capacity of sixty gallons and is the latest development in ice cream making machinery. It is of the horizontal cylinder type with a screw like dasher running the full length of the cylinder, operated by gearing at one end receiving the power through an overhead belt drive hitched to an electric motor. The cylinder is a double one with a water jacket plated in German silver for the outside covering. The inner cylinder contains the cream mixture which is stirred by the revolving dasher. Into the space between the cylinders a freezing mixture of brine water is admitted. This mixture maintains a temperature of about ten degrees above zero, which insures rapid and even freezing. Besides being a tremendous labor and time saver, this machine is the last word in sanitary methods of manufacture.

Improvements

M. A. Levinson & Co. are building a dressing and fitting room in the southwest corner of their store, which promises to be a very welcome feature adding the final touch to the already excellent service afforded their patrons. New and attractive electric light fixtures will also be installed throughout the store.

"Yes Indeed, We Have Moved"

Into better quarters, where we hope to serve you better. And we have a lot of merchandise, too, that we intend to sell. And regardless of what comes or goes, we intend to see to it that we have something in the way of Price.

Not today or tomorrow, or some other day. But Right Now.

If you have any notion of buying good goods—a piece of furniture, Carpets, Rugs, a Range, or most anything else, for that matter, just remember this: No one sells better merchandise than we do. We sell the best there is.

And we might name a price that will make your eyes stick out. Don't go and give someone a great long price. You don't need to. Use the same amount of common sense that you would use in buying your groceries. You owe it to yourself to come in and find out just how some of these things are done. Don't get the notion that you can buy goods as low as a dealer. No, sir, indeed. If you have any such notion you're merely waiting around to give somebody something.

And what's more—you can't possibly go wrong here. Because we won't let you. That's the most important part of our business policy.

A TALK WITH A CHARLEVOIX MAN

Mr. Himebauch Tells Something of Interest to Charlevoix Folks.

There's nothing more convincing than the statement of someone you know and have confidence in. That's why this talk with Mr. Himebauch of W. Upright Ave., should be mighty helpful here in Charlevoix.

Daniel Himebauch, 107 W. Upright Ave., Charlevoix, says: "My back ached and mornings when I got up, catches took me across my kidneys. My kidneys were weak and acted irregularly and I had to get up many times during the night to pass the secretions. I heard a lot about Doan's Pills, so I used a few boxes from Metcalf's Drug Store, and they fixed me up in fine shape." (Statement given May 4, 1920.)

On October 10, 1924, Mr. Himebauch said: "I am glad to recommend Doan's Pills for they certainly helped me."

UNDER THE DOME AT LANSING

By Ed A. Nowack

(Special to the Courier)

At least a million dollars annually was saved to the primary school fund money and the poorer school districts by Tom E. Johnson, superintendent of public instruction, who threw the political weight of his organization into the house fight on the proposed revamping of the inheritance tax law and beat it. Lead by Rep. Osborne, Chippewa county, the battle ended when the house cut out the proposed amendment, fathered by the Michigan Realtors' Association, which would have put personal property only in the inheritance tax class. The Johnson-Osborne fight also raised widows' inheritance exemptions from $10,000 to $20,000.

Thus the legislature dealt another body blow to a former powerful lobby that has endeavored for the last two years to shape class legislation. The defeated measure was the key measure of the entire program put forward by the realtors' lobby and that organization is bitterly contemplating the legislature's demonstration that members are capable of eatching the colored man in the wood pile after all.

Now for the Trucks

Those long, 60-foot auto body carrying trucks that have knocked at least four members of the legislature into the ditch during the last two months, besides killing several persons in the state and wrecking many autos, have come in for a checking up by Rep. Gardner, Livingston. He would cut the length from 60 to 30 feet and construct other safeguards about the operations of those vehicles by reducing load limits and providing more adequate taxation.

Rep. Gardner declares the present long bodies used by those trucks are utterly beyond control of the driver so far as the rear end is concerned. Both houses have been waiting for the appearance of the Gardner bill and highway traffic will likely be made much safer when the legislature gets through with the bill.

Highway measures were put ahead a big notch last week when the house passed the Ming bill and the senate passed the Atwood trunk line mileage bill. The Ming bill provides for strict state supervision and building and maintenance of all trunk line roads. The Atwood bill provides for 500 miles of state trunk line and it also establishes a court of claims in which damages against the state will be heard.

New Bills Still Come

Sen. Condon, Detroit: Would permit administration of property of persons not heard from in 7 years the same as if they were dead. Another bill would compel fathers of illegitimate children to pay all doctor bills of the mother and provide for the child's upkeep.

Sen. Truettner, Bessemer: Would permit railroad, bridge and tunnel companies to sell stock to their employes on the installment plan. Sen. Cummins, Centerville: Would close season on muskrats in St. Joe county for two years, prohibit use of nets in that county and provide a $12,000 appropriation for the erection in the Vicksburg, Miss., National Park of a monument to Michigan's war governor, Austin Blair.

Sen. Brower, Jackson: Would license all selling steamship tickets. Sen. Greene, Richmond: Prohibit public health nurses from diagnosing illness.

Bass and Trout License

Sen. Truettner, Bessemer: Would enact a $1 license fee for black bass and trout fishing. Sen. Wood, Detroit: Would ask surety bond of $5,000 for all collection agencies except attorneys and banks. Sen. Hunter, St. Johns: Would give utilities commission power to order installation of proper signals at dangerous crossings and pro-rate the expense in some instances between the steam and electric roads and the public. Municipally owned utilities would have to adopt a uniform accounting system and publish annual reports under terms of a bill by Sen. Woodruff, Wynndotte.

Senator Baxter, Grand Rapids: Would limit bonded indebtedness of municipalities and establish periods for which certain bond issues could be made. Sen. Wood, Detroit: Would license dealers in Christmas trees and prevent their cutting any under four inches at the butt.

Rep. DeBoer, Grand Rapids: Would prevent use of stickers on auto windshields. Rep. Jewell, Houghton: Would provide uniform traffic signal for all motor driven fire apparatus in the state. Rep. Howell, Saginaw: Would appoint a poet laureate for Michigan. Rep. VanEvery, Petoskey: Would strengthen state padlock law. Rep. Ormsbee, Flint: Would require charitable organizations soliciting money to have city and village permits in addition to other safeguards. Rep. Look, Lowell: Would revoke doctors' licenses for failure to report contagious diseases. Rep. Warner, Ypsilanti: Would require $2,500 indemnity bond by bus operators against injury to any person. Rep. Musson, Montcalm: Would allow family of Bernie Sodman $5,442 for death through department of public safety.

BEAVER ISLAND EXILE IS DEAD

Dr. Protar, Man of Mystery, Has Passed On

An account of the death of a strange character who has long been familiar to residents of the Beaver Island group and those Charlevoix people whose duties or inclinations take them to those islands frequently, appears in last Monday's issue of the Petoskey Evening News. We are reprinting it herewith:

"Dr. Protar, the man of mystery who for nearly fifty years resided alone at his small farm near St. James, Beuver Island, is dead.

The Russian exile passed his day in tending his few crops, garden, cow and chickens, and much of his nights in reading.

He was brilliantly educated and a physician who quickly responded to the call of the needy on the island. People came to love and respect him although his identity and his reason for leaving Russia and seeking asylum on the wooded island, was never made known to them.

For many years he is said to have received funds from his family in Russia. Then came the war and these funds were discontinued. The doctor then turned the tables and from his scanty store sent funds back to his relatives in Europe.

Dr. Protar was a traveler, having visited many ports of the world before finally settling down on the Lake Michigan island."

prepared the guests. The trip to and from Charlevoix was made in a private car. The winter population of the village is between two and three thousand, which is increased to thirty-five and forty thousand by the influx of summer visitors. Enthusiasm is at its height among the merchants and permanent residents of the place over the possibilities of entertaining guests during the cold months and a movement is now on foot to add to the regular winter attractions. Announcements setting forth the inducements for winter patronage will probably be circulated among the tourists this summer and it is expected that Charlevoix will henceforth rank as one of our nearby winter places that will vie with Lake Placid and the famous European winter sports resort at St. Moritz, Switzerland.

Hannah has apparently started something that will grow. It was a happy and practical idea, and we commend her for it. There is enough money represented among the well known St. Louis cottagers at the pinee—such as the Moses Shoenhergs, the Charlie Rices, the Henry Stixes and the Bemises—to finance such n desirnble enterprise and make it a success from its inception, and we would not be at all surprised if some farsighted business man took hohl of the proposition and boomed it."

of opinion, uny proposition can be worked out to the advantage of all.

In the consideration of this enterprise one positive truth stands out prominently. Let no man who is really interested in the welfare of Chnrlevoix, no matter what his own opinion or personal interest may be, put obstructions in the way of this or any other public enterprise. If opposed, let his opposition be fair and open and unprejudiced. In other words, let us all pull together and act intelligently and work the whole thing out logically. We must have no arbitrary obstructionists.

WIFE OF ULYSSES J. McCANN PASSES AWAY

Taken by Tuberculer Trouble at Age Twenty-six

Beaver Island residents and Charlevoix friends of the deceased were shocked to learn of the death last week of Mrs. Ulysses J. McCann at her home in St. James. Tuberculosis was the cause of death, Mrs. McCann having failed steadily since the ravages of the disease became apparent last September.

Mrs. McCann, who was formerly Miss Irene Gallagher, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Gallagher of St. James, was born on Beaver Island twenty-six years ago and educated in the schools of St. James. She was married during the Ghristmas holidays a year ago to Ulysses J. McCann, well known Beaver Island fisherman.

She is survived by her husband; her parents; four brothers: Edward, James, William John and Joe Gallagher, all of St. Jumes, and five sisters: Mrs. William Scheld of Chicago, Mrs. Fred Zulusky of Ludington, Miss Mue Gallagher of Petoskey and Mrs. Joseph Left and Eleanor Gallagher of St. James.

The funeral was held last Friday from the Holy Cross church at St. James, Rev. Fr. McCann officiating, interment being made in the cemetery on the island.

METHODIST CHURCH

Sunday, March 15

10:30 preaching service. We will he in smaller quarters this Sunday, owing to the repairs going on in the church. Sermon topic, "The Great Confession."

12 o'clock, Sunday school. This gathering is still the largest we have had other years. The lesson on the Resurrection ought to call forth many to study this great event.

3:00 p. m., Junior League. We have every reason to believe this work pays for all the self-denial experienced in putting oneself into it.

6:00 p. m., Epworth League. 42 out last Sunday night. Good interest makes any meeting inviting. We occasionally see new faces. We welcome all. The 18th the Epworth League will hold a St. Patrick's party. Keep the date open and expect a good time.

7:00 p. m., Sunday evening service. The pastor's sermon will be from the topic, "Objections to the Christian Life." Splendid attendangg last week.

Prayer meeting this Thursday at 7:30 p. m. Read Romans, 3rd chapter. We would like you to come to prayer meeting, but read the chapter anyway.

Young people's prayer meeting next Monday evening at 7:15. We will give five minutes to questions. This service is a school of prayer and testimony.

Ladies' Literary and Sewing club meets every Thursday afternoon at 2:30.

The work at the church goes on well. Splendid response in volunteer labor. This year we are cleaning the Lord's house first. He merits the first fruits. Take a hand in this work.

The outlook for our Easter Day, April 12th, is encouraging. From April 5 to April 12 we will hold specinl meetings. Service every night in the church. Easter day will start with the usual sunrise service. The Easter morning sermon will be given at 10:30, at which time the choir will give severnl special selections. Sunday school will take its missionary offering. The evening program will be a pngeant by the young people.

Go to church Sunday.

DOWN WARNER RESOLUTION!

money is turned over to the county treasurer by the judges and justices and apportioned to the various school districts by the county treasurer in accordance with the number of children in each school district. If this resolution is adopted into the constitution then that source of money to support the libraries will be wiped out and future support can come only from direct taxation. At present school librnries nre guaranteed some degree of support, but the Warner resolution will be a death blow to the guaranteed distribution of good literature for the upbuilding of ideals and the furnishing of information.

The county, city, village and township would profit so little by the small sum thus received from fines that it would amount to practically nothing, while that same money keeps on building up and supporting the thousands of school libraries in Michigan.

ARE CLEANING UP THEIR BUILDING

Odd Fellows Donating Their Time to This Effect

The work of cleaning up the ruins of the Odd Fellow building, partially destroyed by fire in the morning of the 1st, commenced on Monday of this week.

A wooden shield has been erected from the ground to the floor line of the upper story and, with the as yet unbroken windows of the store fronts thus protected, the job of cleaning up the remains is progressing. About fifteen or twenty of the lodge members have volunteered their services and the ruins at this writing present a much more hopeful appearance than before they began work.

The lodge has no definite plan for rebuilding, as yet, but it is expected that some decision will be reached at their regular business meeting tonight, held in the temporary lodge rooms over Jacobs' store.

New Building

Officials of the County Bank have given out the statement that they are considering plans for a new building to be erected on the site left vacant by the destruction of the old bank building in the fire of February 8, 1924, and adjacent to the present bank. The new building will probably be a double store of solid brick construction.

Profitable Practice to Feed Foals Fresh Grain

Foals should not be allowed to follow mares that are working on the farm, but should run together in a roomy, clean, well ventilated box stall or paddock. If a small pasture, surrounded by a good fence and containing shade is available, it makes a good place for foals. If fresh water is not available constantly, it should be supplied often.

The foals should be nursed morning, noon and night, and allowed to run with their dams during the night. In this way they go through the summer in good condition and can be weaned without any setback.

Foals will learn to eat readily and it is profitable to let them have access to clean, fresh grain. Two parts crushed corn, two parts crushed oats and one part bran is a satisfactory mixture. If crushed grain is not available, shelled corn and shelled oats may be used.

Hogs Thrive on Milk

"If pigs could choose their place of birth, I think they would be found exclusively on farms whose operators are patrons of creameries," says George D. Britts, Barron county, Wisconsin.

There is no feed more economical and better suited for the rapid development of pork than skim milk. As pigs come to weaning time, they also need red dog or low grade flour and a little oilmeal, with shelled corn, as a dry feed.

PLANS TO ERECT BIG BOAT HOUSE

RANSOM E. OLDS BUYS ROUND LAKE FRONTAGE

Praminent Lansing Automobile Manufaeturer Increases His Holdings Here

Another property transfer of considerable significance to the future of Charlevoix took place last week when a strip consisting of a lot and a half on Belvedere avenue with Round Lake frontage, lying between the Pillsbury holdings and those of John Roen was sold through Arebie Livingston of the State Bank to R. E. Olds, of Lansing, well-known automobile manufacturer.

Mr. Olds' expressed purpose in acquiring this piece of property is to provide a site for a building to house his 100 foot, semi-houseboat type cruiser, the Reomar. This purchase follows naturally upon Mr. Olds' recent acquisition of a summer home site on the north shore of Pine Lake and admits him to the rapidly increasing number of our permanent summer residents.

The Reomar, which at this time holds the center of the stage in interest for Charlevoix people and especially for the boating fans and marine experts who have their residence here either in summer or the year around, will bear a little description, as she is an unusual craft. Quoting from Motor Boating for December, 1924, and the article appearing on pages 34 and 35 of that issue:

"A new boat of the semi-houseboat type, which has attracted much favorable comment during the past year, is Reomar III, the new eruiser built for R. E. Olds of Lansing, Mlcb., by the DeFoe Boat & Motor Works from designs by Cox & Stevens, the New York naval architects. Reomar III is the fifth boat which has been designed by this firm for Mr. Olds. Her principal dimenaions are: an overall length of 100 feet, beam 18 feet 6 inches, and draft 4 feet.Reomar III gives the owner all the room, comfort and ventllation usually found in a houseboat, and at the same time, due to the strong, substantial steel hull, and her form being such as to make her suitable for use in reasonably rough seas, she makes an excellent cruising craft.

Her appearance is attractive and her accommodations ore remarkably good, while the operating cost is very low. This type of boat is certain to become very popular among yachtsmen who have had, as in the ease of Mr. Olds, a great deal of experience cruising both in northern nnd southern waters.

Reomar III carries her beam well aft and her sections are such as to provide the maximum floor spaee witbin the hull with surprisingly satisfactory results. Many practical innovationa have been incorporated into this craft with decided advantage. Among tbese can be lncluded the grouping of the air ports, the protective cockpit aft and the fitting of a centerboard. This centerboard doea not come above the floor and when at anchor prevents the boat from sailing around at her moorings. When underway in a beam wind, it also helps to keep her on her courae.

The power plant installed in this boat consists of two 100 h. p. Mianus Diesel engines which are located slightly forward of the center of length. The engine room contains not only the main engines, but a very complete equipment of auxiliaries required for the operation of tbe boat. Thia power plant has shown that it can praduce a apeed in excess of 12 3-4 knots or 14 1-2 miles.

The hull of Raomar III ia built of ateel and she is of the flush deck typo with slightly raking stem and transom stern. Her forward seetions have a pronounced flare and the linea as far as posaible, cansistent with the dimensions of the boat, being adapted for seagoing servlce. The dining room is located at the forward end of the deck bouse with galley and pantry immedlately aft. An unusually large and attractive living room is located in the aft end af tha deek-house.

On the berth deck, tha owner has, at tho forward end, a very large atateroom extending aeross tbe full width of the ship, witb a private bnth. From this room a passageway runs to the aft end of the quarters on this deck where there is another large stateroom, also with a privats bath. On tbe starboard alde of tbe passage are threa additional guest rooms and on the port side ane guest room, bath and a lobby into which the stairs from the upper deck enter. Three of the guest rooms have communicating baths and there is one batbroom that opens into the passageway, making it accessible from any of the staterooms. As eacb one of these staterooms bas large dimeflsions and is fitted with ample wardrobe spaee, lockers, bureaus and seats for stowage of clotbes and personal belongings, anyone comparing the accommodations secured on this boat, of relatlvely small dimensions, with what will be found on other similar vessels, cannot fail to be impressed with the economical way in which the interior has been laid out.

The quarters for the officers and crew are on tbe lower deck forward, and their quarters are provided witb every possible convenience and comfort."

IS STAR REPORTER ON "MAROON"

ALBERT WIDDIFIELD WINS U. OF C. MEDAL CONTEST

Was One of Ten Freshman "News-Hounds" Eligible to Compete on Student Daily Newspaper

The following item, clipped from the columns of the Daily Maroon, official student publication of the University of Chicago, tells of the success of Albert Widdifield, well-known and popular Charlevoix high school graduate, who was last year's editor-in-chief of the Chanticleer. The article is self-explanatory:

"Al Widdifield was declared winner of the freshman reportorial contest staged by the Maroon staff to discover the merits of the reporters. Second place was given to Fred Jones, a close contender for first honors throughout the race, while George Jones took third. Medals will be given to the first three contestants.

The contest has been running from Jan. 26 to March 6, thirteen freshmen being eligible for competition, and ten finally completed the run.

The point system was used, with merits given for work done and demerits for any failures in routine work.

'This system encouraged the reporters to bring in original stories, bring in as many stories as possible, and to do their best work while writing up their assignments," said Herbert DeYounge, business manager. Points were deducted from the individual's score if he failed to take proof or copy, or did not appear for his daily assignments.

Throughout the contest, Widdifield and Fred Jones were almost even in number of points, and until the end it was not possible to tell who would be the victor. The final score gove Widdifield 141, Fred Jones 135, and George Jones 79."

Widdi always did look to us like a "comer" in the journalistic field, his excellent work on the Chanticleer promising a wider success with the maturing of his talent. Go to it, old top, we're proud of you.

HAS CONFIDENCE OF THE PEOPLE

FIRST A POLITICIAN, SECOND A GOOD SCHOOL MAN

Thomas E. Johnson Sees That People Get Their Money's Worth in Educational Expenditures

Thomas E. Johnson, Superintendent of Public Instruction and candidate for reelection on April 6th next, has the confidence of the school people of Michigan. The reason for this confidence is not hard to find. When first appointed and then elected to office most of the school men of the state undoubtedly felt that he was first a politician and second a school man, but his record in office has been such that they feel today that he is first a school man and second a politician.

Whatever success he may have had as a politician, is undoubtedly due to the fact that he genuinely likes people and that liking begets a liking in return. In fact his definition of politics probably covers a situation. To him the art of politics is merely the art of making friends and keeping them.

There is no question but that for the cause of education he works both in season and out of season. While it is not a common thing to do, nevertheless the various organizations of educators in the state have readily endorsed him not only for his work but also for his contiauance in office.

One point which is often overlooked is that Mr. Johnson is constantly endeavoring to see that the people of Michigan get their money'a worth in tbe dollars they spend for education. The law requires the Superintendent of Public Inatruetion to approve plans and specifications for buildings, but it is rare indeed that unnecessary expense is not eut out of buildings while they are being passed on by the department. Constantly Mr. Johnson and his asaoelates are endeavoring to reduce expenditures particularly in the smaller high schools and the eonsolidated schools. His motto has always been that the people are entitled to everything possible for each tax dollar raised and expended. Most of the criticisms which have been raised against him and hia work eome from those who were anxious to keep the burden from being placed on those who eould really afford to carry it, all of which certainly entitles him to the support of those who are interested in the welfare of their children ond at the same time believe that the progress that takes place should not be at the expenae of a rash wastefulness.

It is easy to criticize and we Americans are prone to criticize aur publie officials. Certainly, however, many of the criticisms burled at Mr. Johnson are of a nature and from sources which should not in any way milltate against his support at the polls.

CITIZENS MILITARY TRAINING CAMP OPENS JULY 23

A Fine Chance for a Young Fellaw to Spend a Valuable Vacation Period

Dr. Frank H. Wilkinson, local representative of the Citizens Military Training Camps, has turned in the following explunatory notice relative to the eamp to be opened this year at Camp Custer, Michigan, from July 23rd to August 21st. Tbere are four courses—the basic, taking young men from 17 to 24; the red, open to men between 17 and 25; the white, comprising the 18 to 28 year class and the blue, including all between the ages of 19 and 31. But Dr. Wilkinson has covered the ground pretty thoroughly in the open letter hereto appended:

"The Citizeas Military Trainlng Camps have been so well attended by the young men, and so well received by the public in general, that they may be considered an established policy. The rank ond file of our people will not approve of a large standing army nor universal service, but they do approve of tbese camps, and the more they know of the nature of the training, the more they approve of the policy.

It is no longer a question of how many will attend, but how many ean be accommodated, with the limited appropriation made by congress. Last year, no npplications were received after the first of May, due to the fact that the quota had been filled. From the way applications are eoming in this year, it looks as though it would be filled considerably earlier. The policy of the government is to have the eamps made up of young men from every county of the state and not from any one section. We want our county to be well represented.

No good citizen ean reasonably disapprove of the nature of this training. It is voluntary on the part of the student and in no sense is it an enlistment in the army, nor binds one to future enlistments. Voluntary service has always been accepted by the public as one of ths fundamental principles of our country. Young men attending these campa, serve in an environment which encourages clean, wholesome living and a higher regard for the obligotions of citizenship. They return to their homes with a better physique, better fitted to take up arms, should this country again become involved in war, and better citizens.

Any young man of good moral character, between the ages of 17 and 24, is eligible to make application. Almost without exception, the boys who have taken the training, are enthusiastic over it and anxious to go again the next year. The training period this coming summer will be from July 23 to August 21, at Camp Custer, near Battle Creek. The government will pay all expenses of transportation, food, uniforms and medical care. All the young man will be out, will be 30 days time. He will be the richer for the experience, improved physique, a higher ideal of citizenship and a better groundwork for making him an all around man.

The writer spent 15 days last summer in an Officers Training Camp at Fort Snelling, Minnesota, and enjoyed it very much. He hopes to go again this coming summer. The routine of work was very similar to that taken by the boys at Camp Custer.

Additional information, and application blanks may be secured by calling at my office. To be sure of getting in, the applicant should file his application early.

Dr. F. H. Wilkinson."

CHEBOYGAN GETS CEMENT PLANT

IN CONNECTION WITH STATE CONDUCTED PINE NURSERY

Governor Alec J. Groesheck About to Put Long Cherished Plan Into Operation

Cheboygan county and its residents are all enthused over the prospects of a state conducted cement plant and pine nursery. Brother Weber of the Cheboygan Democrat has the following to say about the proposition:

"At a meeting of the State Department of Conservation held at Lansing on Monday night the proposition of establishing a pine nursery and cement plant in the southern part of Cheboygan county was talked over, and the matter will be recommended to the legislature to take steps to that end.

This has long been a cherished project of Governor Groesbeck, who visioned the possibilities of a cement plant somewhere in the south end of Cheboygan county, presumably on the Pigeon river, where there are seemingly inexhaustible wealth of lime rock suitable for cement and other commercial uses. The governor has bronched this matter before, and it looks now by this latest move on the part of the next biggest branch of the state government that the matter would crystolize into something tangible.

It is the plan of the Department of Conservation to acquire with what the state already owns in that part of the county a great tract of land on which there is sufficient lime rock to assure an unlimited supply of raw material and with this will also be thousands of acres of pine lands and some good hardwood lands as are in thot part of the county. Considerable tracts of land being utilized for the establishment of a nursery for the growing of pine and other such trees as the state shall use in its reforestration schemes to be worked out in the future. All of the work in this big operation to be carried on by prison labor.

It would seem that the location picked upon could not be improved upon in the state. There is every element necessary entering into such an undertaking. There is adequate water for all the uses of such an operation, in the Pigeon river that courses through that section. There are sufficient rail facilities and enough of that kind of lands possible to obtain at a very low price. The state also having a great aereage in there. To make the thing entirely feasable.

Representative Ming is chairman of the house committee on conservation and Senator Pearson of Boyne Falls chairman of tbe senate committee. Theae two men are both alert to conservation needs and are no doubt in perfect harmony with the department's program and will do all in their power to put it across."

Now is the time to retire that car. We carry all sizes of U. S. and Ajax tires. O'Neill Rus & Taxi Line.—Adv. 11-t4.

THE BEST AMATEUR SHOW HERE IN YEARS

Stars Stage a Carnival af Fun in Which Local Talent Shines Brightly

One of the best, if not the very best amateur shows that has been put on in Charlevoix for many years was enjoyed by a goodly audience of local people last Thursday night at the Musonic temple under the auspices of the Order of the Eastern Star.

The main feature of the evening's entertainment was a play entitled "A Regular Fix," dealing with the painful situation in which an impecunious London man-about-town finds himself when he wakes up "the morning after the night before" in a strange house and finds his exit blocked by tbe presence of a watchful bailiff, or, as we should call him, process server. T. B. Dimmick, playing the leading part, made a big hit with his audience and his ingenious attempts to explain his presence to his suspicious host, his ludicrous efforts to gain time, and the ridiculous tangles he gets into through his habit of jotting down miscellaneous information to be used later with faulty memory to his own undoing carried the spectators with a continuous laugh through to the end, where it develops that the supposed bailiff is a lawyer's clerk, seeking to advise him of his having fallen heir to a large fortune. The supporting east was all that could be desired and if the "Little Broadway" troupe were to put it across on the "Great White Way" we are sure the play would be good for a several weeks run. Other members of the cast were Mrs. Clsveland Roe, Mrs. Claire Webster, Mrs. Clarence Withers, Mrs. Leo Carey and Messrs. H. R. Fowler, E. J. Edwards, George Beeman, E. C. Sterritt and Leo Carey.

The adventures of Uncle Henry Simkins and his much-worried wife, Miranda, on the touring trip to keep a dinner appointment, perfectly portrayed by Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Stelter, provided a riot of fun from start to finish. An unintended and unforseen development in this skit only served to make it the funnier. When "Uncle Henry" pumped up the spare tire, he didn't figure that the protruding inner tube would burst, but it did, however, with a loud bang, much after the usual fashion of such things.

Leo Carey and E. C. Sterritt put on a couple of minstrel show dialogues that convulsed the house and friends of the two gentlemen are wondering yet where they managed to secure their peculiar wardrobe. Messrs. Sorensen and Macey, in costumes highly appropriute to their role, entertained with an accordian-violin duet und some solo pieces that surprised even their friends, who hadn't credited them with so much talent in this direction. Frank Poole, as the Scandinavian janitor, also found favor with his audience, and certainly looked the part. And "Do-re-me-fa-so-la-te-do," the school scene conducted by Mrs. Clevelond Roe as school marm, in which the entire company took part, was a knock-out. And—oh yes, wo musn't forget little Miss Margie Jeon Carey who was the "works" inside of the funny looking rag doll that her daddy left so unceremoniously, sitting in a chair, while he went after his partner and thst promptly got up and followed him out, much to the surprise and delight of the audience.

One still hears many surprised comments on the quality of the excellent orcbestra that furnished the music during the intermissions. The time was perfect ond the selections and execution left nothing to he desired by the most eritieal ear. Mrs. Stelter, the leader, waa at the piano, Arthur Wexstaff at the traps, wblle Messrs. Dimmick, Bellinger, Livingston and Bridgo performed respeetively on the trombone, saxophone, cornet and violin.

Much eredit is due Mrs. E. C. Sterritt, organizer of the affair and stage manager and her assistant, Mrs. Clara Todd, for the excellence

AT THE MOVIES

With a European circus as the locale, and a tragic clown as the central character, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "He Who Gets Slapped," which is to open Monday, March 23rd at the Palace Theatre, is declared to be one of the most unusual pictures of the season.

"He Who Gets Slapped" is the story of a brilliant scientist, who is deserted by his wife, and whose life work is stolen by his patron and friend. "HE," embittered, and seeking forgetfulness, becomes a clown in a French circus. This is the beginning of the story, and the picture carries its audience into the backstage of a European circus, with the story told by clowns, acrobats, trick riders and the other performers of the hippodrome.

The proceeds of this picture will be devoted to the benefit of the C. H. S. basketball team.

Thomas Meighan comes to the Palace Theatre on Saturday and Sunday, March 21 and 22 next in a Paramount screen version of "Tongues of Flame," the last novel by the late Peter Clark Macfarlane—a Joseph Henabery production with Bessie Love, Eileen Percy and others playing in support of the star.

The picture shows how Boland, an unscrupulous business man, and Scanlon, his tricky lawyer, steal a large tract of land from the Indians. Through Boland's efforts three towns spring up on the land and thirty years later Boland, rich and powerful, rules the towns and everyone in them.

At the close of the Great War, "Hell Fire" Harrington, the role played by Tom Meighan, opens a law office in one of the towns. He falls in live with Boland's daughter, Billie, and for a time works for Boland, wilfully blind to the latter's unethical transactions. Then a little half-breed school teacher who is in love with Harrington, opens his eyes to the fact that Boland is using him as a tool to swindle the Indians for the second time.

In spite of the fact that Boland threatens to ruin and disgrace him Harrington takes up the Indians' fight. The squabble over property rights reaches the Supreme Court and is decided in the Indians' favor. This turns the entire town against Boland—and what a scene there is! Crowds surge through the streets firing warehouses and shipping. It's a case of mob rule until Harrington arrives on the scene with a little band of loyal Indians who had served in his company in the World War and brings the townspeople to their senses.

"She's a lydy, sir," Mother Jenks affirmed proudly. "An' I done it. You can see with arf a heye wot I am, but for ell 'tint, I've done my dooty by her. From the day my sainted 'Enery—'e was a colonel o' hartillery under President Huey, Dolores' father—hescaped from the burnin' palnce with 'er an' told me to raise 'er a lydy for the syke of her father, as was the finest gentleman this rotten country'll ever see, she'a been my guidin' star. She's self-supportin' now, but still I ain't done my whole dooty by her. I want to see 'er married to a gentleman as'll maintain 'er like a lydy."

"Well, Mrs. Jenks, I think you will live to see that worthy ambition attained. Mr. Geary is head over heels in love with her."

"Aye. Willie's a nice lad—I could wish no better; but wot 'e'a got 'e got from you, an' where'll 'e be if 'is mine doesn't p'y big? Now, with you, sir, it'a different. You're a bit older'n Billy, an' more settled an' serious; yon've made yer fortune, so Willie tells me, an' not to go beatin' about the bally bush, I s'y, wot's the matter with you an' her steppin' over the broomstick together? You might go a bloomin' sight forther an' fore wuss."

"Too old, my dear schemer, too old!" John Stuart replied smilingly. "And she'a in love with Billy. Don't worry. If he doesn't make a go of this mining concession, I'll take core of his finances until he cau do so himself. I do not mind telling you, in atrictest confidence, that I have made my will and divided my money equally hetween them."

"Gord hless you, for a sweet, kind gentleman," Mother Jenks gulped, quite overcome with emotion.

Hastily Webster bade Mother Jenks good night and hurried away to escapo a discussion on such a delicate topic with Billy's blunt and single-minded landlady. His mind was in a tumult. So it was that he paid no attention to a vehicle that jogged by him with the cochero sagging low in his aeat, half asleep over the reins, until a quick command from the closed interior brought the vehicle to an abrupt halt, half a block in advance of Webster.

Save for an arc light at each end of the block, the Calle de Concordio wos dim; save for Webster, the carriage and the two men who piled hurriedly out at the rear of the conveyance, the Calle de Concordia was devoid of life. Webster saw one of the men hurriedly toss a coin to the cochero; with a fervent "Gracios, mi capitan," the driver clucked to his horse, turned the corner into the Calle Elizondo and disappeared, leaving his late passengers facing Webster and calmly awaiting his approach. He was within 20 feet of them when the taller of the two men spoke.

"Good evening, my American friend. This meeting is a pleasure we scarcely hoped to have so soon. For the same we are indebted to Lieutenant Arredondo, who happened to look back as we passed you, and recognized you under the arc light."

Webster halted abruptly; the two Sobrantean officers stood smiling and evidently enjoying his discomfiture. Each carried a service revolver in a closed holster fastened to his sword-belt, but neither had as yet made a move to draw—seeing which, Webster felt sufficiently reassured to accept the unwelcome situation with a grace equal to that of his enemies.

"What? You two bad little boys up this late! I'm surprised," he replied in Spanish. He folded his arms, struck an attitude and surveyed them as might an indignant father. "You kids heve been up to some mischief," he added, as his right hand closed over the butt of his automatic, where it lay snuggled in the open holster under his left arm between his shirt and coat. "Can it be possible you are going to take advantage of superior numbers and the fact that you are both armed, to force me into a duel on your terms, my deer Captain Benavidea?"

By a deferential bow, the unwholesome Benavides indicated that such were his intentions. "Then," said Webster, "as the challenged party I heve the choice of weapons. I choose pistols."

"At what range?" the lieutenant asked with mock interest.

"As we stand at present. I'm armed. Pull your hardware, you pretty pair of polecats, and see if you can beat me to the draw."

Captain Benavides' jaw dropped slightly; with a quiet, deliberate motion his hand stole to his holster-flap. Lieutenant Arredondo wet his lips and glanced so epprehensively at his companion that Webster wes aware that here was a situation not to his liking.

"You should use an open holster," Webster taunted. "Come, come—unbutton that holster-flap and get busy."

Benavides' hand came away from the holster. He wos not the least bit frightened, but his sense of proportion in matters of this kind was undergoing a shake-up.

"In disposing of any enemy in a gun fight, so a professional killer once informed me," Webster continued, "it is a good plan, to put your first bullet anywhere in the abdomen; the shock of a bullet there paralyzes your opponent for a few seconds and prevents him from returning the compliment, and in the interim you blow his brains out while he lies looking at you. I have never had any practical experience in matters of this kind, but I don't mind telling you that if I must practice on somebody, the good Lord could not have provided two more delightful subjects."

He ceased speaking, and for nearly half a minute the three men appraised each other. Benavides was smiling slightly; Arredondo was fidgeting; Webster's glance never faltered from the captain's nervous hand.

"You would be very foolish to draw," Webster then assured Benavides. "If I am forced to kill you, it will be with profound regret. Suppose you two dear, sweet children run along home and think this thing over. You may change your mind by tomorrow morn——"

The captain's hand, with the speed of a juggler's, had flown to his holster; but quick as he was, Webster was a split second quicker. The sound of his shot roared through the silent calle, and Benavides, with his pistol half drawn, lifted a bloody, shattered hand from the butt as Webster's automatic swept in a swift arc and covered Arredondo, whose arms on the instant went skyward.

"That wasn't a half bad duel," Webster remarked coldly. "Are you not obliged to me, Captain, for not blowing your brains out—for disregarding my finer instincts and refraining from shooting you first through the abdomen? Bless you, my boy, I've been stuck for years in places where the only sport consisted in seeing who could take a revolver, shoot at a tin can and roll it farthest in three seconds. Let me see your hand."

Benavides sullenly held up that dripping member, and Webster inspected it at a respectful distance. "Steel jacket bullet," he informed the wounded man. "Small hole—didn't do much damage. You'll be just as well as ever in a month."

He helped himself to Arredondo's gun, flipped out the cylinder, and slipped all six cartridges into his palm. Similarly he disarmed Benavides, expressed his regret that circumstances had rendered it imperative to use force, and strolled blithely down the calle. In the darkened patio he groped along the wall until he found the swinging rope by which he had descended from his room—whereupon he removed his shoes, tied the laces together, slung them around his neck, dug his toes into the adobe wall and climbed briskly to his room.

* * * * * * *

The next morning Webster waited until Dolores appeared and then accompanied her into the dining room for breakfast.

"Well, how did you pass your first night in Buenaventura?" she inquired, in the manufacture of breakfast conversation.

"Not very well. Jiggers bit me and woke me up, and finally I fell into a trance and had a vision—about you. After that I couldn't go to sleep again. I was fairly bursting to see you at breakfast and read your palm. I've just discovered a wonderful system."

"Show me," she flushed back at him and she extended her little hand. He picked it up gravely and with the dull tine of a fork made a great show of tracing the lines on her palm.

"You are about twenty-four years old, and your ancestors were pure-bred Castilians who came from Madrid, crossing the Atlantic in caravels. Ever since the first Ruey landed on this coast the family has been identified with the government of the country in one way or another. When you were quite a little girl, your father, Don Ricardo Ruey, at that time president of Sobrante, failed to suppress a revolution and was cornered in the government palace, which was set afire.

"Through the bravery and devotion of a cockney gentleman, Colonel Henry Jenks, an artillery officer in your father's army you were saved from perishing in the burning palace. Colonel Jenks turned you over to his spouse, now known as Mother Jenks, with instructions to raise you a lydy, and Mother Jenks has carried out those instructions. Colonel Jenks and your father were executed, and Mother Jenks sent you to the United States to be educated. You had a brother, Ricardo Luis Ruey, older than yourself by seven or eight years, I should judge. In some mysterious manner you and your brother lost track of each other, and at the present moment he believes you perished in the flames that gutted the government palace.

"You are of a proud, independent nature; you work at something for a living, and inasmuch as you haven't been able to set aside a great deal of money from your earnings, you are planning to terminate your visit to your native land at an early date and return to the United States for the purpose of getting back to work. These plans, however, will never be consummated.

"Why? Because you are to be married to a nice man and live happily ever afterward, and about sixty days from now, if all goes well, I, John S. Webster, am going to introduce you to your long-lost brother Ricardo. You will first see Ricardo riding at the head of his victorious rebel troops as he enters Buenaventura. He will be the next president of this wretched country, if, fortunately, he is not killed in the revolution he is now fomenting against his father's ancient enemy. Your brother does not know you are living and it will be a proud and happy day for me when I bring him to you. In the interim, what do you purpose having for breakfast? Ham and eggs sunny side up, an omelette or a cereal?"

He released her hand and favored her with the boyish grin that always had the effect of stripping the years from him as one strips the husk from a ripe ear of corn. She was gazing at him in wide-eyed amazement.

"Is my brother really alive?"

"He was as late as midnight last night. Do you recall the chap I saved from being assassinated in New Orleans?"

"Yes."

"Your worthy brother. And do you recall the chauffeur whose passage to this port I was forced to pay?"

"Yes."

"The same individual. I sent him ashore in the launch with Billy, and he has been housed at El Buen Amigo, but left early this morning for the back country to open a recruiting office."

She reached across the little table and squeezed his big brown hand impulsively. "You're the most wonderful man I ever knew. And does my poor brother know I am living, Mr. Webster?"

"You Ancient Scoundrel!"

"No—and I'm not going to tell him. I think it will be much nicer to restore you to each other on the steps of the government palace on the day when the Ruey faction comes into its own again. That will make his victory all the sweeter. By the way, where was Ricardo when your father's ship of state went on the rocks?"

"At school in a military academy in Kentucky."

"It is a marvelous mix-up, which Ricardo can doubtless explain, Miss Ruey. I know he believes his sister perished with her father. Mother Jenks didn't know where he was and couldn't communicate with him—and there you are. However, little old Jock Fix-it will bring you together again in due course. In the interim, how about those eggs? Straight up—or flip 'em?"

She beamed across at him. "We are going to be such good, true friends, aren't we?" she urged. He almost shivered, but managed a hypocritical nod. "While we have only known each other twenty-four hours, it seems a great deal longer than that—probably because Billy has told me so much about you, and you're—so comfortable and easy to get acquainted with, and I—I can't very well express my gratitude for what you've done—for what you're going to do." Her voice faltered; she smiled roguishly through the tears of her emotion. "If I were only Billy, now, I could put my arm across your shoulders and settle the matter by saying: 'Johnny, you old horse-thief, you're all right.'"

"The best thing to do would be to cease puffing me up with importence. And now, before we climb out of the realm of romance and the improbable to the more substantial plane of things for breakfast, just one brief word of caution. Now that I have told you your brother lives and is in Buenaventura, forget it until I mention it again, because his presence here is his secret, not ours."

"All right, Caliph," she agreed. "I think I shall call you that hereafter. Like the late Caliph Haroun Al Raschid, it appears you have a habit of prowling around o' nights in queer places, doing good deeds for your subjects. But tell me about my brother. Describe him to me."

"Not now. Here comes the head waiter with a cablegram for me, I think."

That functionary came to their table and handed one of the familiar yellow envelopes to each of them.

"We'll excuse each other," Dolores suggested. She read:

BEST ESSAY WINS A FOUR YEAR COURSE

Firestone Scholarship Again Open to Students

High school students are again given an opportunity to win the most coveted educational award offered in the United States—the H. S. Firestone Four Years University Scholarship, given for the best essay on "Economies Resulting from Highway Improvement."

This contest is conducted by the Highway Education Board, whose main offices are in the Willard Building at Washington, D. C., which is composed of the U. S. commissioner of education, the chief of the U. S. bureau of public roads, a lieut. colonel of the corps of engineers, U. S. A., a representative of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, one each from the Society for Promotion of Engineering Education and the Society of Automotive Engineers and Harvey S. Firestone, the donor of the scholarship, representing the rubber industry.

Charlevoix was not among the 100 Michigan high schools whose students competed for the Firestone award last year, but it is hoped that students from the local institution will be sufficiently interested to try their hand at it in 1925. R. S. Swinton of Ann Arbor, to whom we are indebted for the information regarding this contest, will again be one of the judges for Michigan competitors, as in former years. Requests for information should be addressed to the Highway Education Board at Washington. Essays will be accepted not later than May 22, 1925. They must be in the hands of the local school authorities by May 1st.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

By B. C. Mallancamp

From reports received from M. A. C., corn is testing very low in germination this year. As a matter of fact there is not much corn in the county that matured last fall and in case you are not absolutely sure about your seed corn by all means test it. Don't guess.

If you are fortunate enough to have some seed corn for sale be sure to use a germination test on it and stand back of your guarantee. Your agent would appreciate getting your name if you have any to sell, or if you are in need of corn. Remember that good quality corn will bring a good price. Look well to your seed corn. Following are directions for making the Ray Doll test on corn, which is simple to use.

Cut cloth (cambric, muslin or flannel) into strips five feet long and ten inches in width. Bisect lengthwise with heavy pencil line. Beginning about fifteen inches from end, draw eleven cross lines at right angles to center line, three inches apart. Number spaces from one to ten on upper side of line and eleven to twenty on lower side.

Select and number ears to be tested. Dampen cloth and lay out smoothly on table. Remove six kernels from different parts of ear, number one and place germ side up in space number one, tips pointing in same direction. Proceed with each ear in like manner. When spaces are filled, roll as not to displace kernels and tie roll around center with string, place each roll as finished in bucket, cover with luke-warm water for several hours. Drain, and cover top with damp cloth or newspaper. Place in warm room. After several days moisten with warm water. On seventh day test is usually ready to read.

To read test, unroll cloth carefully on table and study kernels in each square. Discard all ears corresponding to squares showing dead kernels which produced weak sprouts or mouldy sprouts. Save for planting ears with kernels showing strong, clean, stem and root sprouts.

Composite Test

To test germination of shelled corn or to secure approximate condition of ear corn a composite test of 100 kernels should be made. In taking samples of ear corn, extract 100 kernels from each of 100 ears representative of entire lot. Place kernels in rag doll or sawdust box. After seven days count kernels which show strong germination. It will pay to ear test corn of less than 95% germination.

PARAGRAPHS CONCERNING MICHIGAN

By Ed A. Nowack

It is estimated that more than 600,000 radios are now in use in Michigan, ranging from the little so-called vest pocket types to the largest and highest priced outfits.

Out of the waste scraps in his factories, Henry Ford is reclaiming material that brings him annually a profit of around $13,000,000. His latest factory at River Rouge, Detroit, will be able to reclaim an average of 23,000 tons of scrap iron monthly, thereby saving a shipping charge to and from Cleveland, Ohio, which will mean $10 per ton. During the last year the Ford industries added 6,000,000 square feet of floor space, an increase of about 40 per cent for the year.

The state fire marshall last year collected in fees alone the sum of $11,750. Liquor permit fees collected by the state police amounted to $593 while confiscated car sales brought the state, through the state police, the sum of $5,005.94.

That slot machines are operating in Michigan to some extent is evidenced by the report of Captain Olander of the state police. He says that during 1924 his forces confiscated $1,519.91 from all manner of slot machines, most of them being the penny and nickle in the slot type.

Three hundred thirty-nine paroled prisoners in Michigan last year broke the provisions of their parole and were punished by return to jail. Of the number of prisoners on the highways, but 96 tried to run away, while not a one was charged or accused of committing any kind of crime.

Booze runners in Michigan waters last year lost exactly $48,000 worth of boats that were being used in carrying contraband liquor. These boats would clear from Canadian shores with clearance paper for Havana, Cuba, in possession of the owners.

Michigan workmen last year received an average hourly wage of 128 per cent greater than in 1913 and 154.2 per cent greater than in 1907, while the average for 1923 was 8.3 per cent below the 1924 rate.

The state insurance department last year has licensed 59,863 agents of all descriptions. They are classified as follows: fire 30,808; life, 12,703; casualty, 15,377; co-operative, 973.

Besides the main library in the city of Detroit which cost $3,166,335 there is the downtown annex, 15 branches, and 37 sub-stations and deposit libraries that service more than one and one-quarter millions of population.

The state capitol at Lansing, which cost $1,510,130.19 in 1878, is now worth $3,000,000. The new state office building which cost more to build than the capitol has a similar value.

The Michigan state library, with its more than 300,000 volumes, is located in Lansing. The law library in the capitol is considered by authorities one of the most remarkable in the country.

Two more states have been added to the list of those having a gas tax. They are Minnesota and Missouri. A referendum in Massachusetts turned down the proposition by a decisive vote. There now are 39 states with gas tax laws on their books.

CONDITION OF MICHIGAN CROPS

1924 CORN CROP LOW IN QUALITY AND YIELD

Land Values Show Increase in Southern Portion of State—1925 Outlook is Bright

Of a total wheat crop of 20,014,000 bushels produced in Michigan in 1924, only 3,202,000 remained in farmer's hands on March 1, according to the reports received by L. Whitney Watkins, commissioner of agriculture and Verne H. Church, agricultural statistician, U. S. bureau of agricultural economics. This is 16 per cent of the crop. One year ago, 24 per cent of the crop was still on farms, and the ten-year average is 21 per cent. It is estimsted that 58 per cent af the crop has been or will be moved out of the counties where grown. This is nine per cent more thna last year and seven per cent more tban the average.

Corn: The 1924 Michigan corn crop was low in quality and yield. It is now estimated that only 37 per cent was merchantable while the inquiry made last fall showed 42 per cent was saleable. This would indicate that the quality proved to be lower than indicated at husking time. Only three per cent of the crop was shipped out of the county where grown, and only 26 per ceat remains on farms as compared with 33 per cent one year ago. As only about 50 per cent of the total acreage was husked, this leaves only 5,698,000 bushels in the form of grain on Michigan farms as compared with 12,797,000 one year ago.

Oats: Michigan farmers produced the largest crop of oats on record in 1924, of which 40 per cent, or 26,880,000 bushels were still on hand on March 1. One year ago, 36 per cent of the 1923 crop or 17,603,000 bushels remained an the farms of this state. The ten-year average percentage of the crop on hand on March 1 is 39. It is estimated that 25 per cent of the total production will move out of the counties where grown as compared with 19 per cent last year and 22 per cent the ten-year average.

Barley: The state's barley crop was somewhat larger than that of the previous year and the stocks on hand are also larger, being 1,043,000 bushels against 684,000 one year ago. This is 22 per cent of the crop, one per cent below the ten-year average and three per cent more than on March 1, 1924. Barley is grown in Michigan mainly for feeding purposes and only 11 per cent is expected to be shipped out of the counties producing a surplus.

Rye: Only 16 per cent of the rye crop, or 961,000 bushels, remains on farms out of the total production of 6,006,000 bushels. Last year the March 1 stocks represented 22 per cent of the crop. It is further estimated that 19 per cent of the crop will leave the counties where grown, as compared with 42 per cent of the previous year's production.

Hay: Michigan's hay crop in 1024 was the largest on record. The low price that has prevailed during the winter, relatively high freight rates, and poor demand have resulted in a light movement of the surplus out of the state, leaving 42 per cent, or 2,133,000 tons still on farms. One year ago, the stocks were 30 per cent of tbe crop, or nearly one million tons less than the present holdings. If all of the surplus is moved it will equal 22 per cent af the crop.

Potatoes: While the potato acreage was below normal last year, the exceptionally large yield gave a crop of 38,252,000 bushels. Reporters indicate that 41 per cent of this crap, or 15,683,000 busbels, is still on farms. This includes food and seed requiremeats. Ona year ago, 37 per cent of the 1923 crop was in farmer's hands. The portion of the crop that was available for movement out of the counties wbere grown is 42 per cent.

Land Vaiues: While there is a tendency toward Increased demand and improved prices in southern couaties over this data last year, tbere is but little change as yet in the average prices reported. In tbe northern half of tbe state, a considerble percentage of farmars wish to sell their farms but tbere is na demaad, indicating that the upward turn in prices have not yet bacome appareat there.

Rental Prices: Only a small percentage of farms are leased on a casb basis. Tha avarage price paid as reat far farma is found to ba $4.50 per acre; for plow lands, $5.40 per acro; for grazing purposes, $2.25 per aere.

Farm Labor: The supply is found to be 85 per cent of normal, and the demand 77 per cent of normal. The ratio of supply to demand is, therefore, 110 per cent. One year ago it was 87.5 per cent. Indications point to a much lsrger supply of farm lsbor for the coming season than in any recent year.

UNDER THE DOME AT LANSING

By Ed A. Nowack

(Special to the Courier)

Capital punishment met defeat for the third consecutive time in Michigan's legislature last week. Rep. McEachron, Hudsonville, father of the bill, recorded defeat, 54 to 46. Sixteen addresses, equally divided for and against the bill, were made. Speeches were limited to 15 minutes. Those talking were Representatives McEachron, Dykstra, Braun, O'Connell, Kooyers, Palmer, Will Thomas, Charles Reed, who talked for the bill, and Darin, Espie, Crutchfield, Haight, Fitch, Holland, Hartzog and Culver against it.

Those voting for the bill were: Armstrong, Brake, Braun, Bryant, Callendar, DeBoer, Dexter, Dykstra, Evans, Farrand, Fuller, Gardner, Gillett, Green, Howell, Hoyt, Hulett, Kooyers, Lawson, Lewis, Look, MacKinnon, Madill, McEachron, McKenzie, McKibbon, Miller, David Morrison, Edward Morrison, O'Beirne, O'Connell, Palmer, Raucbolz, Charles Reed, Rorick, Sink, Skeels, Smedley, Snow, Strauch, W. J. Thomas, Turner, Wade, Walters, Warner.

Those voting against it were: Mrs. Anderson, Bartlett, Beam, Binning, Birkholm, Black, Bristow, J. L. Campbell, W. B. Campbell, Carter, Clancy, Clement, Cowan, Crutchfield, Culver, Curtis, Darin, Deshano, Espic, Farrier, Fitch, Haight, Harris, Hartman, Hartzog, Holland, Hosking, Jewell, Johnson, Kirby, Langsford, MacDonald, McClain, McNitt, Ming, Murphy, Musson, Netting, Oberdorffer, O'Dell, Ormsbee, Osborn, Peters, Preston, Arcble Reid, Richardson, Roxburgh, Walter Thomas, Upjohn, VanEvery, Watson, Hayes Wells, Fred B. Wells.

Work Is On in Earnest

Scorss of bills hsve been reported out of committees. The work is on in esrnest. A resolution was prepared setting the date of adjornment at April 10. Tax reform measures entered the present week uncertainly. The major tax problems, bscked by the administration, still suffer attacks that sent them back to committee.

Conservation bills, including a reforestation bill, and the pollution bill, are on the front seat in the stage of lawmaking. Sen. W. J. Pearson, Boyne Falls, fathers the former. Tbis permits land to be withdrawn from tax rolls on application. Annual tax payments of from five to 12½ cents per acre are provided, with a 25% of the harvest tax for the state at time of cutting. Thirty years is the limit for which such land may be dedicated.

The Smedley pollution bill is being closely scrutinized by msnufacturers and cities because of its drastic departure. Every municipality in the state would be affected and so would the 225 butter factories, the 385 market milk plants, the 55 cheese factories, the 31 milk condensories, the 328 ice cream plants in the state. The curing of the pollutioa evil is an admitted necessity by all, but tha fight on the bill will center on how best to apply remedial measures. Expenditures of millions in money is involved.

More Bills Coming

In the senate 186 bills have been introduced. In the house 325. Sen. Greene, Richmond: Would empower probate judges to send dependent sick folks to any hospital. Sen. Pearson: Would have strict party enrollment. Sen. Butler, Lapeer: An amendment to the motor vehicle law to simplify its administration. Sen. Herald, Detroit: Would create uniform interests charges for loan sharks. Sen. Butler: Would create board of examiners for chiropractic.

Sen. Truettner, Bessemer: Would extend the life of the deep waterway commission to 1927. Sen. Martin, Fruitport: An amendment to the highway law to permit planting of trees and shrubbery. Sen. Young, Lansing: An old age pension law for those over 70 who have resided 15 years within the atate with no more than four months in jail to their credit and who are not known as beggars ar mendicants, or whose income is more than $300 annually. A state board and county unit would determine the amount of pensions paid.

Sen. Karcher, Rose City: Would compel fathers of illegitimate children to support them and pay mother's doctor bills. Sen. Case, Ithaca: An anti-free love bill equalizing punishment between men and women. Sen. Martin: Two bills, one reducing from 300 to 225 the population nt which villages could incorporate, and other making it optional for villages to hire town marshalls.

Sen. Woodruff, Wyandotte: Would empower state to construct walks and roads in the St. Clair flats on condemnation proceedings. Sen. Baxter, Grand Rapids: Would create state police school af instruction for state law enforcement officers. Sen. Condon, Detroit: Would abrogate

Everyone Says It—Sales Prove It

Hudson is not called "the World's Greatest Buy" for today alone. That is acknowledgment of ten years' constant refinement of a great car around the famous patented Super-Six principle. The largest production of 6-cylinder closed cars in the world give it unequaled value advantages.

All now know that higher price can buy no smoother performance than Hudson's. It cannot buy more brilliant results in pick-up, power or speed. It cannot buy greater reliability or endurance. At today's prices need you own a lesser car? Can a costlier car satisfy you more?

"C" CLUB IS COMING TO THE FORE AGAIN

Pledges Secured for Payment on New Basketball Suits

The following communication from the "C" Club of Charlevoix high school was recently turned over to us for publication and we reproduce it herewith:

"The "C" Club of Charlevoix high school, an organization known to the townspeople as well as to the studeats, have been very quiet for the past few weeks, seeing as how everything was in good running order.

Nevertheless, memory of the past activities was powerful enough to bring tbe huge assembly to instant quietness when Mr. Day mentioned the name of the "C" Club the other day.

In the meeting which he announced, great things were accomplished; a $75 debt was taken over and a pledge made to pay for new suits for our basketball team. The suits are white with a red "Charlevoix" across the front, while the white pants are trimmed with red.

Through the kindness of the Palace Theatre and Walker Miles we have made arrangements for a movie and expect the loyal support of every student of C. H. S. and also the support of the townspeople.

This movie, which is one of the better grade productions, is "The Man Who Gets Slapped," which will be given Monday, March 23rd.

DOES YOUR BACK ACHE?

Bad Backs Bring Suffering to Many Charlevoix Folks.

Is that dull, constant backache making you old and miserable? Does your back throb and ache until it seems you just can't keep going? Do you suffer headaches, dizzy spells and urinary disorders; feel weak, tired and worn-out? Then look to your kidneys. Delay may mean serious kidney sickness! Use Doan's Pills—a stimulant diuretic to the kidneys. Doan's are recommended by Charlevoix folks.

Mrs. R. B. Stafford, 103 Green Ave., Charlevoix, says: "I had a dull ache through the small of my back and when I stooped to pick up anything, sharp, cutting pains darted across my kidneys. Dizzy spells came over me frequently when little, black specks came before my eyes, blurring my sight. My kidneys acted irregularly, too. Doan's Pills, from the Central Drug Store, rid me of the trouble."

Price 60c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Pills—the same that Mrs. Stafford had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.

FRESHMAN FROLIC VOTED A TOPLINER

Basket Ball Foemies Were Buried With Touching Rites

"Shades of Greenwich Village" were to be seen at our own Palace Theatre on Monday evening when the freshmen of Charlevoix high school proved to the world that they are not as green as they look. Tho first to appear was n trim stage boy who curried the role of announcer. He introduced the "Sin Twisters," who entertained us on their ukeleles. They were followed by the "Ballet Dancers" and truly we felt that we must be transported from fair Charlevoix, for surely these were no amateurs. The "Pyramid Builders" gave an interesting number, and we are wondering what really could be done by this troupe since they did so well with such short training. It is impossible to call attention to all the good things on the program, but we did wonder if Stanley Hammond had considered acting as a profession. Oh yes, we must not forget the funeral. Charlevoix's basketball opponents were peacefully laid to rest and certainly they were given u respectable burial. Nothing was lacking in the attempt to show all due honor to the dead. I am sure the mourners will wish to thank the choir for their touching renditions, the pastor for his kind words of sympathy, and the friends who sent tha beautiful floral offerings.

You have n good start, freshmen, and we shall watch your progress through our high school with keen interest.

W. C. T. U. WORKER TAKEN BY DEATH

Mrs. Phebe Jane Howard Dies at Clark Home in Grand Rapids

Mrs. Phebe Jane Howard, probably one of the most widely known prohibition workers in northern Michigan in the early days of such endeavor, is dead at the Clark Memorial Home at Grand Rapids, having passed away there Wednesday of last week. Mrs. Howard was 91 years old and resided for many years in Petoskey.

She was head of the state and district W. C. T. U. organizations for many years and her work, in a large degree, helped to bring local option and prohibition to Michigan.

Mrs. Howard was well known to Charlevoix people, especially among members of the W. C. T. U. Her death is to be greatly regretted.

WE LOSE AGAIN TO ROGERS CITY

LAST YEAR'S RED AND WHITE HISTORY REPEATS

Harbor Springs Captures Class C and Petoskey Class C. Honors in Basketball Tournament

The Petoskey gym was the scene of a dizzy procession of basketball games that started on Thursday afternoon and closed Saturday night. The room was packed with players, spectators, statisticians and other enthusiusts attending the sixth district tournament. Many of the games were good, while others were won by wide margins.

The followers of the Red and White had but two opportunities to see their team in action. In the feature game Thursday night, the locals defeated the fast Onaway outfit by the close margin of 10 to 9. Onaway was a former Class B school and made the locals fight every minute of the game. "Chuck" Dagwell proved to he the bright light of the game.

Friday afternoon the Red and White made their final appearance at the tournament against Rogers City—a team which eliminated us a year ago. The first half was close and it was not until the final quarter that Robers City put the game on ice. Hallett proved to be our lone star in making points, scoring all nine. Jones and Captain Glasgow also played good ball for the locals, while Danny Rose of the Rogers City outfit was their bright light.

Saturday night, Harbor Springs proved to be the cream of Class C, while Petoskey was the winner in Class B.

East Jordan won second place in Class C, while Onaway won the consolation tournament in the same class. Manistee won second place in Class B, while Big Rapids won the consolation cup.

The Red and White will lose five men from the first squad by graduation, which includes Hallett, Dagwell, Jones, Captain Glasgow and Solomon.

OUR TENNIS CLUB TO BE CONSIDERED

Western Michigan Association Plans Big Tournament Here

President Richard R. Smith of the Western Michigan Tennis Association has been in correspondence with W. G. Parker, local tennis dean, and advises that tentative date of August 13th, 14th and 15th had been assigned for the big local tournament.

This is very satisfactory to Charlevoix interests, as it is about the middle of the resort season. Dr. Smith offers every encouragement and support possible and is confident that the local club will be duly elected at the next meeting at Chicago headquarters.

The Rebekahs have secured the film play, "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall" for Monday evening, March 30th, at the Palace. Don't miss it.—Adv. 11-t2.

JOHNSON DELIVERS THE GOODS

A STAUNCH FIGHTER FOR THE PEOPLE'S RIGHTS

No Man More Exemplifies Personal History of Typical American Than Does Johnson

One of the men nominated in Detroit by the Republican state convention, February 25th, was Thomas E. Johnson, who once more becomes a candidate for Superintendent of Public Instruction. Probably no man exemplifies the personal history of the typical American better than does Tom Johnson.

Born in a pioneer country in Canada, he came to Michigan when he was six years old and has continuously since been a resident of this state. His father, an itinerant Methodist minister, he found it necessary at an early date to begin to earn his own way in the world, and practically all that has come to him has been the result of strenuous personal effort.

In 1907 he was still some distance from graduation from the university, married, and the head of the school system at Stockbridge, Michigan. Twelve years later, with his college degree, he was Superintendent of Public Instruction of the state of Michigan, a rapid rise and one of the type that appeals to American imagination, for at thirty-six he was the youngest state superintendent of public instruction in the United States.

Not only a school man but a man of wide interests he has always been an interested and active member of the various boards of which he is a member by virtue of his office. Since its inception he has been a member of the administrative board, where his vote and influence has always been in favor of the peuple in less favored communities.

In 1922 he aroused a good deal of antagonism by refusing to vote for the road program, insisting that the time had come when we must adopt a pay-as-you-go program, and suggested a gas tax as a part of the solution, being the first representative of the state government to come out and favor that form of highway finance.

When Mr. Johnson became a member of the board of auditors the new state office building had not yet been constructed, and at that time the state was at the mercy of many landlords in the city of Lansing. Ona of them insisted that he must have not only an advance in rent but a large payment of back rent or the department housed in his building would be forced to leave—obviously a great inconvenience to the state. The thing did not look right to Tom and he insisted that it was a form of blackmail and should not be paid. When the owner threatened eviction Tom stepped to the telephone, called the State Police and soon had a member of that organization on duty day and night in the offices involved. Naturally they were not evicted, neither did they make any payments of back rent.

URGE PROPAGATION OF PHEASANTS

A HARDY BIRD ABLE TO WITHSTAND SEVERE WINTERS

Vice President of Isaac Walton League Speaks in Behalf of Much Maligned Bird

In view of the belief by some that the pheasant drives out our native partridge, and that there is a prevailing opinion among certain quarters that the bird has destructive tendencies, the following article by Dr. J. N. Lowe, vice-president of the Isaac Walton League of America is timely and interesting:

"It is a well known fact that our native game birds are not as plentiful in our covers as they were ten or twenty years ago. No one particular cause can be singled out, but more properly, it is the result of many contributing causes, the more important being the decreasing of the wooded areas, and the clearing of land for agriculture. Other contributing causes are the large increase of people hunting, and automobile transportation. Ever since 1912, there has been a remarkable increase in the number of hunting licenses issued.

This increasing number of hunters each year, hunting in our decreasing covers, must be appreciated. With these facts before them, the conservation commission of Michigan decided to introduce a bird that would inhabit the open country, thus attracting hunters to the open fields, and mitigating, to a certain extent, the demands made upon the partridge und other game birds.

The ring necked pheasant has been successfully introduced, and firmly established in parts of the lower peninsula. It will become established in the upper peninsula if some consistent effort is made to introduce it. So far, the colonies are too isolated to become permanently fixed. If mature birds are used for stocking, in regions where the pheasant is not yet well established, the chances for success are better. A pen of birds of one male and three females, that have been used for breeding for one or two years, are ideal, for having been confined in a breeding yard for some time, they have a tendency to keep together and breed freely, and thus become established in a short time.

Prefers Open Cover

The pheasant is exceedingly well adapted to large scale stocking of the depleted game covers of the state. It has proved itself admirably fitted to replace those birds that are lost to us forever from overhunting and cutting of forest. It prefers the more open cover, along fences, highways, small patches of woods, too thin for partridge, and abandoned fields, where there is sufficient weed growth to afford it cover. This sort of cover is shunned by the partridge, and therefore, there is no conflict between these birds.

The pheasants can be reared in large numbers at comparatively little expense and trouble. So far, all attempts at rearing partridges in captivity huve met with partial success, or absolute failure. It is estimated that in New York state, over

"G. W." WOULDN'T LEAVE THE TABLE

"Eats" Were Too Good at South Side Circle Supper

The South Side Circle enjoyed one of their justly popular dinners at the Charles Jefferies home last Tuesday evening.

It was with difficulty, however, that Will Parmelee managed to pry Captain G. W. Weaver loose from the first table. It may have been the chicken or fruit salad or the hope of dining with the ladies that held the affable postmaster to the festive board.

The evening was pleasantly passed in discussing park politics, and it was the consensus of opinion that a rest room on the Legion lot is an immediate necessity. The members seemed unanimously in favor of cleaning up and beautifying the Round Lake shore, believing that the above improvements are all that are practicable at present.

A crossword puzzle among the ladies injected a spirit of hilarity into the gathering, which was voted one of the most enjoyable so far held.

DIED AT AGE OF EIGHTY-TWO

MRS. HILTON ONE OF OLDEST RESIDENTS

Born in Ireland and Came to America in Early Girlhood—Funeral Thursday A. M.

Mrs. Mary Hilton, one of the oldest residents of this county, died at her farm home at Norwood last Monday morning, following an illness of about two weeks duration. The funeral will be held Thursday at ten o'clock in the forenoon, Rev. Tony Clark conducting the services at the home and at Brookside cemetery, where the remains will he interred.

Mary Vaughn was born in Ireland nearly eighty-two years ago, coming to this country with her father and brother at the age of eight years. She was married to Orville D. Hilton, a railroad engineer, in Chicago when sixteen years of age. They lived there for about ten years and then moved to Alabama, where they lived for a number of years before coming to Charlevoix county in 1866, settling in Norwood township on a farm, which the deceased had occupied continuously up until her death, her husband having passed away some thirty-two years ago.

Mrs. Hilton is survived by her foster son, Henry Hilton, three grandchildren, one great grandchild and a number of nieces and nephews. An own daughter, Carrie F. Hilton, well-known und much beloved in this community, died in middle life in August, 1900.

WELL-KNOWN KINGSLEY WOMAN IS DEAD

Mrs. John Baker, of Kingsley, Mich., passed away at her home in that village on Tuesday, March 17th last, following an illness of considerable duration. The funeral was held on Saturday, March 21st, interment following at Central Lake.

The deceased, whose maiden name was Elizabeth Wolfe, was born in Philadelphia, Penn., March 13, 1872 nnd came to Michigan with her parents in 1874, spending her childhood in Central Lake township. At the age of 15, she went with mother, brother and sister to live at Paterson, N. J., later removing to Chicago and finally, on the death of her mother some six years ago, coming to Central Lake. She was married to John Baker, of Charlevoix, three years ago and went to live with her husband at Kingsley, where the latter owns a farm. She is survived by her husband, a brother, James Wolfe of Gary, Ind., and several cousins.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Methodist church will serve a maple syrup luncheon and hold a baked goods sale at the Charlevoix Hardware store on Saturday next, from ten o'clock to six. Everybody come. Adv. 12-t1.

WHAT TO PLANT AND HOW MUCH

PROBLEM THAT FACES FARMERS AT SPRINGTIME

Is Too Often Influenced by the Profits or Loss of the Previous Year

What to plant and how much to plant is the problem that faces every farmer in the spring of the year. Too often he is influenced by the profits or losses of the previous year. He is reluctant to plant as many acres as usual of a crop on which he has received no profit, but is inclined to increase his acreage of a crop from which he or his neighbors have obtained good returns for the previous year. These changes made by the individual are of little consequence, but the collective effect of such changes over the entire country are of tremendous importance. The result is usually an acreage that is far above normal in some crops and far below normal in others, causing a reversed condition in money returns from that of the previous year and a heavy loss to many growers.

A report on intentions to plant is now being made annually in all states, the object being to acquaint farmers early enough in the season to admit of such changes in their plantings as may seem expedient to them. The results of the inquiry this year show that for the country as a whole, a prospective increase of 14 per cent in the spring wheat acreage, 2.3 per cent in corn, 5.6 in oats, 23 in barley, 29.5 in sweet potatoes, 9.9 in tobacco, 4.5 in peanuts, and 11 in rice. No change is indicated in the acreage of hay, and a decrease of 4 per cent in potatoes and 3.3 in flax seed is intended.

Michigan farmers reported an intention to cut the acreage of potatoes 10 per cent and hay one per cent, and to increase corn plantings one per cent, oats 5 per cent, barley 25 per cent and spring wheat 60 per cent, according to a statement issued today by Verne H. Church, agriculturnl statistician, U. S. bureau of agricultural economics and L. Whitney Watkins, commissioner of agriculture. If these contemplated changes are carried out it would result in 13,000 more acres of corn, 147,000 more acres of oats, 11,000 more acres of barley, 343,000 more acres of hay, and 71,000 less acres of potatoes than have been planted on the average for the last ten years. These contemplated changes are relatively small in percentage except that of potatoes. Last year, the acreage of potatoes was 12 per cent below normal in Michigan, the large production being due to an exceptionally high yield in all parts of the northern potato belt. Had the yield been normal, the total crop would have been below normal for the country as a whole and prices would have been satisfactory. As only a normal yield may be expected in any year, a further cut of 10 per cent in the acreage this year would, according to the law of averages, reduce the crop far below normal. This would produce a good revenue for those who have a crop to sell, but nothing for those who dropped out. A marked increase in the acreage of other crops will tend to create an over-supply and disappointing prices. However, the indicated increases in Michigan are not sufficiently large to cause any concern. Beans and sugar beets were not included in the inquiry, but comments from correspondents indicate that no marked change from last year's acreage in either crop is contemplated.

While the weather element is bayond humnn control, the greatest stabilizing influence of produetion and prices is a normal acreage. This is particularly desirable for all crops which must be fully consumed within our own country.

"Go you if I lose. You are a good, game little scout, and I like you fine.

"JEROME."

She glanced across at Webster, whose face was a conflicting study of emotions in which disappointment and amazement appeared to predominate.

"You ancient scoundrel," she heard him murmur.

"What ho, Caliph! Unpleasant news?" she ventured.

"Yes—and no. I had one of the finest jobs in the world all sinked out—and now the boss cables me it's filled—by a better man."

"What are you going to do about it?"

"Well—as soon as I've had my breakfast, I'm going to cable Neddy Jerome and tell him I'm satisfied—satisfied to stay here and satisfied he's a liar. You see, Miss Ruey, he objected vigorously to my coming here in the first place—wanted me to take a 30-day vacation and then manage the Colorado Consolidated Mines company, Ltd., for him. I like Neddy and would have been glad to go to work for his company, but, of course, Billy comes first, and so I declined the offer. Later I changed my mind, and last night I cabled him I'd accept if he'd wait 60 days—possibly 90; and now he replies that he's sorry, but the job is filled by a better man. That's why I know he's a liar."

"I see. You figure there isn't a better mining engineer than you—eh, Caliph?"

He looked at her reproachfully. "No, but Neddy Jerome does, and I know he does because he has taken the trouble to tell me so more than once. And as a rule Neddy inclines toward the truth. However, it's just as well——" He paused, staring hard at her. "By the way, you foretold this! Why, this is amazing."

She could have wept with laughter. "Well"—soberly—"I told you some other things equally amazing, did I not?"

"Yes, you told me other things more or less interesting, but you foretold this. How do you account for that?"

"The witness declines to answer on the ground that she may incriminate herself and be burned for a witch."

"Remarkable woman!"

"You were about to remark that it is just as well——"

"That Neddy's reconciled to losing me, because since cabling him yesterday evening I've changed my mind again. I'm going to stay here now."

"Indeed! Why?"

"Just to be obstinate. Apparently I'm not wanted here by the powers that be; so just to rile them I'm going to hang around Sobrante and argue the question with them. By the way, I see you received a cablegram also. Better news than mine, I hope."

She nodded. "I have a little business deal on back home. Haven't got a great deal invested, but it looks as if I might make $10,000."

He arched his eyebrows and favored her with a little disapproving grunt. Sounded like the prospectus of a fake mining promoter—yes, by thunder, that was it. Dolores was a school teacher, and school teachers and doctors are ever the mainstay of a swindler's sucker list.

"You won $10 from me yesterday," he challenged. "Bet you another ten I can tell you the nature of your investment."

"Go you, if I lose!" Unconsciously she was learning the argot of the male of the species, as exemplified in Neddy Jerome's cablegram.

"It's a mining property."

"You win. It is," she answered truthfully, starting to open her purse.

"Quartz or placer?"

"I don't know. Explain."

He chuckled at her ignorance. "Quartz is gold-bearing rock, and placer is gold-bearing gravel."

"Then my mining property is placer, because it has lots of sand."

"I knew it, I knew it," he warned her solemnly, and he shook an admonitory finger at her. "Black sand, eh? Is the gold very fine?"

"I think it is."

"Then you're stung good and deep—so don't delude yourself into thinking you have $10,000 coming. I never knew a proposition for saving the fine gold in black sand that didn't turn out to be a fizzle. It's the hardest thing in the world to save. Now, listen; you tell me the name of the flim-flam artist that got you into this deal, and when I get back to the United States I'll investigate the company; if it's an out-and-out swindle, I'll take that promoter by the throat and choke your money out of him, the scoundrel! It is just these fly-by-night fellows that ruin the finest gambling game in the world and scare off investors in legitimate mining propositions."

"Oh, you mustn't—really, Caliph. He's an old man, and I only did it to help him out."

"There should be no sentiment in business, Miss Ruey."

"Oh, well, let's be cheerful and hopeful, Caliph, and discuss a more important subject."

She was very serious now, for by her meddling she had, she realized, so arranged matters that at a time when John Stuart Webster's very life depended upon his immediate departure from Buenaventura, he was planning to stay and face the music, just to be obstinate. "You must reconsider your decision to remain in this country," she insisted. "Your life may be the price of liberty of action, you know. Isn't Billy capable of developing the mine after you advance the cash?"

"I wouldn't advance him a cent for his mine until I had investigated it myself."

"Then you should make some arrangements to safeguard yourself while making the investigation, and leave Sobrante immediately thereafter. Isn't that a sensible proposition?"

"Very—if I felt like leaving Sobrante. But I do not. If that mining concession is a potential winner, I'll have to stick around and make a winner out of it before I go away and leave Bill in charge. Besides, I'm worried about Bill. He's full of malarial fever, and last night I got thinking about him and decided to send him back to the Colorado mountains for a few months. I want some regular doctors to work on Bill so he'll be fit when he gets back on the job."

As a matter of fact, this idea of sending Billy to the United States had but that moment occurred to Jack Webster; he reflected now that this plan was little short of an inspiration. It would give Billy and Dolores an opportunity to marry and have a honeymoon; it would leave him free of her disturbing presence, and enable him to leave Sobrante when the Gearys should return. He resolved to speak to Billy about it.

Dolores' voice broke in upon his cunning reflections. "But Billy tells me you already have a fortune sufficient for the needs of a caliph without a court. Why risk your precious life to acquire more? Money isn't everything in life.'

"No, but the game is."

"What game? Mining?"

"The game of life."

"But this is the game of death."

"Which makes life all the sweeter if I can beat the game. Perhaps I can better illustrate my point of view with a story. Some years ago I was sent to Arizona to examine a mining property and report upon it; if I advised its purchase, my principals were prepared to buy at my valuation. Well, when I arrived, I found a miserable shanty close to a shaft and dump, and in the shanty I found a weather-bitten couple. The woman was probably forty but looked fifty. The man had never been anything but a hard-rock miner—$4 a day had been the limit of his earnings in any one day until he stumbled on some float, traced it up, and located the claims I was there to examine and try to buy.

"His wife had been a miner's daughter, knowing nothing but drudgery and poverty and continuing that existence after marriage. For 20 years she had been burning her husband's socks, washing his clothes, and cooking his meals. Even after they uncovered the ledge, it wasn't worth any more than the country rock to them unless they could sell it, because the man had neither the money nor the ability to develop it himself. He even lacked the ability to sell it, because it requires real ability to unload any kind of a mine for $1,000,000, and real nerve on the part of the man who buys. I examined the mine, decided it was cheap at $1,000,000, and so reported to my principals. They wired me to close, and so I took a 60-day option in order to verify the title.

"Well, time passed, and one bright day I rode up to that shanty with a deed and a certified check for $1,000,000 in my pocket; whereupon I discovered the woman had had a change of heart and bucked over the traces. No, siree! She would not sign that there deed—and inasmuch as the claim was community property, her signature was vitally necessary. She asked me so many questions, however, as to the size of the stamp mill we would install and how many miners would be employed on the job, that finally I saw the light and tried a shot in the dark. "My dear Mrs. Skaggs," I said, "if you'll sign this deed and save us all a lot of litigation over this option you and your husband have given me, I'll do something handsome. I will—on my word of honor—I'll give you the exclusive boarding house privilege at this mine."

"And what did she say, Caliph?"

"She said: 'Give me the pen, Mr. Webster, and please excuse my handwriting; I'm that nervous in business matters.'"

Dolores' silvery laughter rippled through the room. "But I don't see the point," she protested.

"We will come to it presently. I was merely explaining one person's point of view as Mrs. Skaggs of Arizona."

"Certainly not."

"All right! Listen to this! In 1907, at the height of the boom times in Goldfield, Nev., I was worth $1,000,000. On the first day of October I could have cashed in my mining stocks for $1,000,000—and I had a lot of cash in bank, too. But I'd always worked so hard and been poor so long that my wealth didn't mean anything to me. I wanted the exclusive privilege of more slavery, and so I staked a copper prospect, which later I discovered to consist of uncounted acres of country rock and about $25 worth of copper stain. In order to save $100 I did my own assessment work, drove a pick into my foot, developed blood poison, went to the hospital, and was sick and helpless when the panic came along the middle of the month. The bank went bust, and my ready cash went with it; I couldn't give my mining stocks away. Everybody knew I was a jumper—everybody but the doctor. He persisted in regarding me as a millionaire and sent me a bill for $5,000."

"How perfectly outrageous! Why, Caliph, I would have let him sue me."

"I would have, too—but I didn't. I induced him to settle for $100,000 shares of stock in my copper prospect. The par value was $1 a share, and I was going to sell a block at 10 cents, but in view of his high professional standing I let him have it for a nickel a share. I imagine he still has it. I bought back later all the other stock I sold, because the property was worthless, and in order to be a sport I offered him $500 for his block, but he thought I was trying to swindle him and asked $5,000."

"Oh, Caliph!"

"Wonderful game, isn't it—this game of life. So sweet when a fellow's taking chances! Now that I am fairly prosperous again, the only thing in life that really matters is the uncertainty as to whether, when finally I do leave Sobrante, I shall ride to the steamship landing in a hack or a hearse."

"But you could go in a hack this morning and avoid that uncertainty."

"The millionaire drudge I told you of could have gone to live in a pretty villa on the Riviera, but she chose a miner's boarding house."

"Then why," she persisted, "did you leave the United States with the firm intention of remaining in Sobrante indefinitely, change your mind before you were here eight hours, and cable this Neddy Jerome person you would return in 60 or 90 days—and the following morning decide to remain, after all!"

"My dear young lady, if I changed my clothes as often as I change my mind, the what-you-may-call-'em chaps that manufacture a certain grand of clothes couldn't keep me dressed."

"But why?"

"Then," he answered gravely, "is a secret."

"Women delight to pry into men's secrets."

"I know it. Had a friend once—married. Every night after dinner he used to sit and stare into the fire and his wife used to ask him what he was thinking about. He would look up at her owlishly and tell her it was something he couldn't explain to her, because she'd never understand it—and that was all he would tell her, although right frequently, I dare say, he felt like telling her some things she could understand? She brooded over his secret until she couldn't stand it any more, and one day she packed her duds and flew home to mother. He let her stay there three months, and finally one day he sent her a blue print of what he'd been thinking about."

"What was it?"

"An internal-combustion engine. You see, until she left him, he'd never been able to get set to figure out something in connection with the inlet valves——"

"Stop right there, Caliph. I'm rebuked. I'll let you get set to think——"

"I didn't mean that. You let me get set yesterday—and I figured it all out then—and last night—and a minute ago. I don't care to do any more thinking today. Please talk to me."

"And you refuse to tell me why you cabled your friend, Jerome?"

"You will never know. I told you it's a secret."

"Bet you I find out."

"How much? That $10,000 you expect to make from the flour-gold in your black-sand claim? And, by the way, $10, please. I won it for guessing you were interested in a mining proposition."

She returned to him the bill she had won from him the day before. "Ten thousand dollars suits me. Of course, I haven't got the money just now, and this is what Billy calls a finger bet, but if I lose, I guarantee to pay. Are we betting even money? I think that is scarcely fair. Under the circumstances I should be entitled to odds."

"Nothing doing! No odds on a bet of this nature to a seeress who has already jarred me from soul to vermiform appendix by making good! You know too blamed much already, and how you discovered it is a problem that may drive me crazy yet."

After breakfast they repaired to the veranda to await the result of Webster's experiment with Don Juan Cafetero. Sure enough, the wreck had again returned, he was seated on the edge of the veranda waiting for them; as they approached, he held up a grimy, quivering hand, in the palm of which lay—a five-dollar gold piece.

"What?" Mr. Webster said, amazed. "Still unchanged!"

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS
By B. C. Mellencamp

Plans have been completed to have a meeting of the vegetable growers, gardners and canning factory growers at the Armory in East Jordan on the 1st of April, at 2 o'clock standard time. George Starr, specialist in horticulture of M. A. C. will be present to address the gathering and discuss all problems that might be brought up. Mr. Starr has had a wide range of experience in vegetables and you may rest assured that it will be along practical lines, for Mr. Starr has in the past managed one of the largest seed farms in the country.

There are several farmers now actively engaged in vegetable farming and are quite successful, and with the large resort business increasing from year to year it apparently looks like a good field to enter. In case you are located near a canning factory you will derive much benefit from this meeting.

Don't forget—attend armory, East Jordan, April 1st, at 2 o'clock, slow time.

AT THE MOVIES

An easy method of gaining a knowledge of good music is to get a job in a William de Mille production at the Lasky studio. If there is no position open in a de Mille cast, a place nearby will help.

Contradictory as it may seem, the silent drama is made to the strains of music and all day long, and sometimes late into the night, somebody is acting to classic compositions or to jazz.

The William de Mille unit is especially noted for its fine music. During the production of "The Fast Set," the latest de Mille production, listeners heard Papini's "L'Ebineelle," Simonetti's "Madrigal," Grieg's "Erotik," Valdez's "Gypsy Serenade," Brahms' Waltzes, Rachmaninoff's "Romance," Palmgren's "May Night" and Chopin's Etude." Each composition was chosen for n definite mood in the picture.

The violinist, and pianist, after attending the reading of the screen play before its actual production, prepared an elaborate music setting, giving each one of the featured players—Betty Compson, Adolphe Menjou, Elliott Dexter and ZnSu Pitts—an individual theme.

"The Fast Set" is a screen adaptation by Clarn Beranger of Frederick Lonsdale's stage success, "Spring Cleaning;" which created a furore in New York and other cities where it was shown.

Motion picture patrons nre promised a treat when this de luxe film production opens next Wednesday, April 1st, at the Palnce Theatre.

When setting forth the qualities of a motion picture, an abundance of super-superlatives is the thing most needed, according to the unwritten law of motion picture publicity and advertising men. A photoplay is always the "most stupendous," "most beautiful and spectacular" and the "greatest ever produced."

With regard to "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall," the latest screen production of Mnry Pickford, coming to the Palace Theatre Mondny of next week, we are told by Manager Miles that the use of these well-worn superlatives is justified. "Never since Miss Pickford started her screen career has she assembled such a cast of players," says manager Miles. "Weeks were spent in the selection of the cast. Sets that for beauty and reality cannot be adequately described, were constructed after thorough study and research had been made. On the screen one sees the impressive enstles of early Englnnd set in the landscapes that transport the watcher to that picturesque country."

This new United Artists release is from Charles Major's widely read novel, "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall."

STATE BRIDGE ENGINEER WAS HERE

Highway Dept. Plans to Take Over Swing Bridge Upkeep

C. A. Melick, bridge engineer of the state highway department, was in town last Wednesday with two assistants to make a preliminary survey of the condition of the swing bridge over Pine River with a view of repairing the bridge and putting it in shape for the summer traffic.

This action on the part of the state highway department virtually constitutes a taking over of the maintenance of the bridge, comprising, of course, merely the mechanical upkeep and not the expense of swinging.

PARAGRAPHS CONCERNING MICHIGAN
By Ed A. Nowack

The last report on the relative position of states in the production of lumber places Michigan in tenth plnce in the union. For many years she was first, second and third place.

There are nbout 2,780 practicing attorneys in the state of Michigan today. Two hundred forty-two towns, cities and villages of the 500 odd places in Michigan bonst members of the legal profession. Slightly more than half the practicing attorneys in the state reside in Detroit. The metropolis lists around 1,580 lawyers while 1,200 can be found in the places outside Detroit.

Michigan's capitol city boasts of more than 100 clubs and fraternal orders, an annual industrial production of $400,000,000, about 60 churches of all denominations, 55 miles of pavement, 480 acres of cemeteries and parks, 140 miles of water mains and 150 miles of gas mains.

Aiding at shipwrecks is one of the varied duties of the state police. So far they have rescued three persons from possible drowning in shipwrecks.

Michigan began tree planting in reforestation work in 1904 with a modest planting in 40 acres. In 1924 the state planted 5,713 acres. This is the largest acreage planted in a single year by any state. Total plantings to date have been 20,760 acres with 29,471,200 trees. The department of conservation plans to plant 10,000 acres per year back to pine.

Ogemaw forest in the county of that name is four and one-half miles north of West Branch. It has a gross area of 6,320 acres. Presque Isle reserve embraces 34,957 acres in Presque Isle, Montmorency and Cheboygan counties. The state owns 22,386 acres here. Alpena forest reserve corners within one mile of the city limits of Alpena and extends south and west over 21,570 acres of which 14,000 acres are state owned.

Fundamental Transportation

Into the vast and complicated network of Transportation in Michigan have been knit several accessory types of carriers. Yet it is noteworthy that each of these accessory carriers exists only through service by certain of Michigan's 24 Steam Railroads.

Electric railroads get their power from coal. Steam Railroads bring it to them.

Motor cars, trucks and busses use gasoline for fuel. Steam Railroads bring it from far-away refineries—bring, too, the materials for the paved highways on which motor vehicles run.

Not even ships are self-sustaining. Their coal meets them at the railhead.

Steam Railroads are Fundamental Transportation.

On their faithful performance everything else depends.

This responsibility is ever before the Steam Railroad men of Michigan. And they feel they are meeting it today better than ever before.

Does your experience confirm this belief?

Do you appreciate the absolute need of protecting this Fundamental Transportation from further restrictions adding to the cost of service?

Write this association frankly and fully.

REMAINS BROUGHT HOME FOR BURIAL

Funeral of Mrs. Wansnear Held from Elzinga Home

Catherine Wansnaar was born in the Netherlands April 17, 1882, and died at Enid, Oklahoma March 14, 1925, aged 42 years, 10 months and 28 days.

She came with her parents to America when one year of age and settled in Banks township, Antrim county, Michigan, where she resided until 1907, when she went to Denver, Colorado, and resided one year.

After a short visit with relatives here she went to Bakersfield, California, and on February 8, 1912 was united in marriage to Thos. F. McMann, and two years later she with her husband moved to Oklahoma, where she lived until the time of her death.

She leaves besides her husband one son, Cecil, age 9 years, a sister, Mrs. J. H. Elzinga of Ellsworth, and two brother, Jacob and Harley, both residents of this vicinity. Her father, mother and two sisters have preceded her in death.

Mrs. McMann was reared in a christian home and during her life time always held true to her christian teachings. She was a kind and loving friend and a true help-mate, and those who knew her best will miss her most.

Funeral services were held on Saturday from the J. H. Elzinga home and from the Reformed church. The body was laid at rest in the Reformed cemetery.

The road between here and the town line of Central Lake is almost impassable at present. We do certainly hope that our township or county officials will fix up this one-half mile of road this spring, as it is a disgrace to our township.

Mrs. H. J. Timmer left for Zeeland, Mich., Friday, to attend the family reunion to be held at that city on Monday, March 23rd, in honor of Mrs. Timmer's father, Wm. Staal, celebrating the 80th anniversary of his birth. The family consists of ten children, all living.

In memory of our dear father who passed away three years ago January 17, 1922, and mother, one year ago, March 28:

A loving father, a mother dear,
Have gone and left us mourning here.

But only died to live again.

God loved them too, and thought it best
To take them home with him to rest.

PIONEER CENTRAL LAKE FARMER DIES

Ephraim E. Empey Passes at Eighty-Eight Years of Age

Ephraim E. Empey of Central Lake, pioneer resident of this region, died at the home of his son, Bertram, with whom since the death of his wife he had made his residence, on last Thursday at the advanced age of 88.

Mr. Empey had been ill for the past six week and for the last two weeks had been in a comatose state from which he failed to rally. The funeral was held from the Empey home in Central Lake, on rural route one, last Monday, services being conducted by the M. E. pastor at Central Lake. Interment was in the Antrim cemetery near Atwood. All the relatives were present except Mrs. VanDam, who could not come.

The deceased was born in Cnnada and removed to Atwood 51 years ago. He experienced all of the varied hardships of a pioneer, clearing his land and raising a family of eight children, four of whom survive him. Mrs. Empey died about twenty-one years ago.

He is survived by three daughters and a son—Mrs. A. E. Mason of this city, Mrs. Stella Carlisle of Ironton, Mrs. John VanDam of Detroit and Bertram Empey of Central Lake. A brother, J. Nelson Empey, resides at Norwood, two other brothers, Fletcher and Joe, having preceded him in death some years previous.

one million pheasants have been released since 1908. In 1924, the New York conservation commission distributed 10,280 young birds, and 123,600 eggs to a total of 1475 applicants. In 1923, the Michigan conservation distributed 31,357 eggs and about 7,000 young birds.

The pheasant is hardy, and is able to withstand the severe winters of Michigan. It is a weed seed eater, and has learned to bud. This winter, three birds were observed "budding" in white birch. This same habit of "budding" has been observed in New York. This habit will bring it through our hardest winters.

The pheasant is decidedly an asset to the farmer and agriculturist, because it feeds on insects and weed seeds. An examination of a few stomachs, collected during the winter, contained seeds of many noxious weeds. It is known to feed on the seeds of the ragweed, chickweed, mustnrd, and dandelion. It is also very fond of acorns, rose hips and mast. Its insect diet includes some of the worst insect pests, such as grasshoppers, wire-worms, june beetles, potato beetles, and many other equally harmful insects. The more insects these birds find, the better they thrive. With the above bill-of-fare before us, we are forced to conclude that the pheasant is exceedingly useful to the farmer, and for this reason alone, every thinking farmer and citizen should urge the possible increase of this valuable bird. Then, too, the sporting and aesthetic qualities of the pheasant should not be overlooked.

Not Pugnacious

It is often claimed by farmers and sportsmen, that the male pheasants are pugnacious and drive chickens away from their yards and even kill roosters. From our own observations, we find that the male pheasants get along amicably with the fowls in the same yard. There are many farmers in Michigan that nre feeding pheasants in the chicken flocks, and report no trouble. Further evidence that the pheasant is not as pugnacious as pictured, comes from a report of the conservation commission of Californis, that "owing to the pugnacious nature of the California Valley Quail, (Lophortyx californica), it makes it impossible for them to dwell or thrive in the same locality." The male quail, and especially at the mating time, will drive the pheasants from any locality. The California Valley Quail is about the same size as our Bob-White. The Bob-White is somewhat of a fighter in his own right, and it is doubtful if the pheasant will ever disturb him. It is often argued by sportsmen that the pheasant is responsible for the scarcity of the partridge. But, as I have pointed out before, the two birds seek entirely different types of cover, and do not come in contact.

The ring necked pheasant is an excellent game bird from a sportsman's point of view, and is a table bird. It is an ally to the farmer in his fight against noxious weeds and insects. It is the most suitable bird for our depleted covers and is the only one that can be consistently propagated. It is the bounded duty of every sportsman to support the conservation commission in their commendable undertaking. If we are permitted to hunt this bird in the fall of 1925, let it be the male birds only. The pheasant is polygynous, and one male is sufficient for five or six females. Some care should be exercised in hunting, so as not to scatter the birds too much."

Many Charlevoix Folks Have Found How to Make Work Easier.

What is so hard as a day's work with an aching back?

Or sharp stabs of pain at every sudden twist or turn?

There is no peace from that dull ache.

No rest from the soreness, lameness and weakness.

Many folks have found relief through Doan's Pills. They are a stimulant diuretic in the kidneys.

Charlevoix people recommend Doan's.

Mrs. Daniel Potter, 401 May St., Charlevoix, says: "I began to have severe pains through the small of my back, which were the first sign of kidney trouble. When I bent over to do my work, sharp twinges caught me across my kidneys. I felt weak and tired and my kidneys acted irregularly. I used Doan's Pills, which I bought at Metcalf's Drug Store, and they soon cured me."

REWARD OFFERED FOR VIOLATORS

Association of Commerce Moves to Enforce Game Laws

The Association of Commerce at its last regular session, in addition to regular routine business, passed a resolution offering a reward of $25 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of anyone violating the game laws as respects fishing in the waters of Pine Lake or tributary waters.

This action was felt to be necessary, inasmuch as violations of this character have been going on for a number of years and, while appeals have been made to local commercial fishermen to cooperate in putting a stop to these violations, but little has been accomplished.

Both Pine and Round Lakes have been striped of their fish this year by pirates who have used their nets without regard to the interests of the community or the ethics of good sportsmanship.

In many instances, these violations have been traced to (so-called) citizens whose records show that they have but little interest in the town and are not likely to have a great deal in future. The town would be money ahead if they would take up their residence elsewhere, although it seems a shame to wish them off on to some other self-respecting community.

VOTERS WERE BACKSLIDERS

NUMBERED 69% LESS THAN AT PRIMARIES

Monday's Election Presents Striking Example of Dangerous Indifference

Monday's election in Charlevoix was the lightest in years, as regards the vote. It seemed as though 31 out of every one hundred of the voting population were doing their duty and the other 69, confident that everything had been nicely settled at the primaries and that nothing could possibly happen to change the situation—nobody planning to run on slips, or anything—had stayed away for as many various reasons as those given by the wedding guests in the biblical parable. Now please don't accuse us of making extravagant statements, because this situation is exactly what the figures show.

The votes cast at the primary election in March for just the candidates appearing on the ticket used in the election of last Monday totaled 3,223. The total votes cast for these same candidates at last Monday's election were 1,007. Figure it out for yourself. If the result doesn't show a falling off of 69 per cent from the primary vote, our arithmetical ability is way below par.

What a grand and glorious opportunity for the candidates defeated at the primary election to have rallied their forces and descended upon the polls during the last half hour of the election period last Monday, with slips in their hands. Who in the name of common sense could have stopped them from scoring a K. O. on their complacent opponents? To say nothing of the state ticket, where as, in many other counties of the state with a different and larger population—say in Wuyne or Kent—a well-organized and alive Democratic or Socialist minority could have slipped over their justices of the supreme bench, their superintendent of public instruction, agricultural board member or state highway commissioner. That is, assuming that the same condition of lethargy prevails among the voters of those counties who have won at the primaries, and we have not any reason to suppose that it does not.

The figures just quoted are too significant to need much comment. However, in passing, one question sticks in our path to trouble us and that is this—why a regular election following the primary with all its attendant expense, loss of time, etc., if the voters are going to consider matters settled at the primary election itself.

Tuesday, April 14

This sale will be on the Cummings farm, six miles south of Charlevoix, on the Norwood Road, Mrs. Ella Cummings, proprietor. The sale starts at 1:00 p. m. and has a good list of saleable property to dispose of. See adv. on page 7.

LOCAL COMMITTEE IS CHOSEN

MOTOR CLUB ORGANIZATION PERFECTED HERE

Muskegon Enterprise for M-11 Betterment Finds Instant Favor Generally

In last week's Courier we told our readers about a new motor club formed at Muskegon and entitled the Lake Shore Motor Club, the purpose of which is to better conditions for the automobile tourists and motoring residents of the towns along the line of M-11.

This week the local organization was perfected here by the club's representative, H. E. Galvin, of Muskegon, according to the following plan. In each town served by the club along the route of M-11, from the southern state line to Mackinaw City, there is to be a director. To assist this official a local advisory committee is appointed whose duty is to see that their section of the route is well serviced. In other words, it establishes a local point of contact with and a representative working body for the headquarters of the organization.

W. S. Richardson of the State Bank is this district's member of the general directorate and his advisory committee are Dr. Frank H. Wilkinson, Horace R. Fowler, Arthur Bergeon, Fred E. Curtier, Benjamin Brown, Joseph Foster, Robt. Bridge, Archie Livingston and A. J. Usher.

Mr. Galvin, the club's representative, states that the idea is going over big in every town along the line that he has so far visited. This is but natural, as the organization fills a long felt need.

HANNAH FINDS THE TRACES OF A GUEST

Has Had Mr. Mink as a Tenant and Didn't Know It

When L. J. Hannah of the Hannah Furniture Company got down to his place of business on the first of the week he started to clean up, according to his Monday morning custom, and, in the course of his activities, opened the trap doors into the shallow four-foot recess under the floor of his building, which has been partly filled with ice all winter. He had occasion to leave the store and, on his return, observed unmistakable traces of a visitor during his absence.

A series of well-defined tracks, leading from the hole into the back part of the store showed that his guest had come out for a "look-see" and then ducked under cover again. Being considerable of a "finger-print expert," Mr. Hannah was able to identify the marks as the footprints of a mink. This gentleman had probably made his home under the floor of the store for some time, locating where rats and mice were likely to be plentiful and, scenting signs of spring, took advantage of his opportunity to come out of his winter quarters and see what was doing.

FACE A TIMBER DEARTH

U. S. FORESTS ARE STEADILY DIMINISHING

What There is Left is Mostly Second Growth—Efficient Conservation Needed

The second of the articles contributed by the Shakespeare Study Club of Charlevoix with relation to the forest growth of the United States and its importance to agriculture, industry and commerce, appears herewith:

"John Muir, writing among his beloved trees in the Yosemite Valley, said: 'To learn how they live and behave in pure wilderness, to see them in their varying aspects through all the seasons and weather, rejoicing in the great storms, putting forth their new leaves and flowers, when all the streams are in flood and the birds are singing and sending away their seeds in the thoughtful Indian summer, when all the landscape is glowing in deep, calm enthusiasm—for this you must love them and live with them as free from schemes and care and time as the trees themselves.'

The present forest area of the United States is estimated at 469,000,000 acres. This is a little more than half the original forest area of the country. The remaining virgin forests are chiefly found in two widely separated regions; the south and far west.

The lumber industry has been and is still mainly supported by the diminishing and retreating old-growth forests. A few years more will leave little but second growth in the pine forests of the south and, thereafter, the requirements of the country for softwood lumber must be met from the western forests, involving heavy transportation costs and from what has grown upon the cut-over lands of the older regions. These lands were first lumbered without provision for continuous production and then neglected. Left to take care of themselves as wild lands and exposed to progressive devastation from recurrent forest fires, they have, nevertheless, grown a certain amount of timber, but, for the most part, of inferior quality.

In consequence, the United States is entering on a period of timber shortage which is already felt in the east. Forest management, under which all timberlands not of sufficient value for agricultural use to warrant clearing will be handled with a view to full employment of their capacity to grow wood continuously, has become of urgent public importance.

The early settlers 'mined' the forest instead of harvesting it. It was only when the northeastern and lake states faced a timber famine that wise heads thought the matter out and brought about laws for the creation and protection of national forests of which there are now 146. The forest service of the United States department of agriculture is scientific farmer in charge of this valuable crop.

Timber is the father of all crops—the protector of soil and water upon which other crops also depend. Then, too, it is the only crop that does its own fertilizing and that needs no cultivation. Protection from fire and other damage is its only requirement."

WARNINGS WHICH MUST BE HEEDED

DEVASTATING FIRES CAN BE CHECKED BY CARE

State Conservation Department Means to Cut Down Unnecessary Loss

Now that the season has arrived when the prideful householder is cleaning up around his place, burning the accumulated rubbish of winter, and singeing the stubble from his lawn and field, it might be well for our readers to cast an eye over the following, which is a warning being sent broadcast throughout the state by the director of conservation at Lansing, John Baird, and that contains extracts from the Michigan forest fire law, which is apparently provided with some real sharp teeth:

(Extract from Michigan Forest Fire Law)

"(Sec. 7). Any person who wilfully, negligently or carelessly sets on fire, or causes to be set on fire, and wood, grass lunds or other combustible material whether or not on his own lands, by means whereof the property of another is injured or endangered, or any person who wilfully, negigently or carelessly suffers any fire set by himself to damage the property of another, is guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be punished by a fine not less thun twenty-five dollars nor exceeding one hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding three months. Any person who maliciously sets on fire, or causes to be set on fire, any woods, grass lands or other combustible material whereby the property of other is destroyed or life is endangered, shall be punished with a fine of not less than one hundred dollars nor over five hundred dollars, or be imprisoned in the state prison for a term of not over ten years, or both such fine and imprisonment.

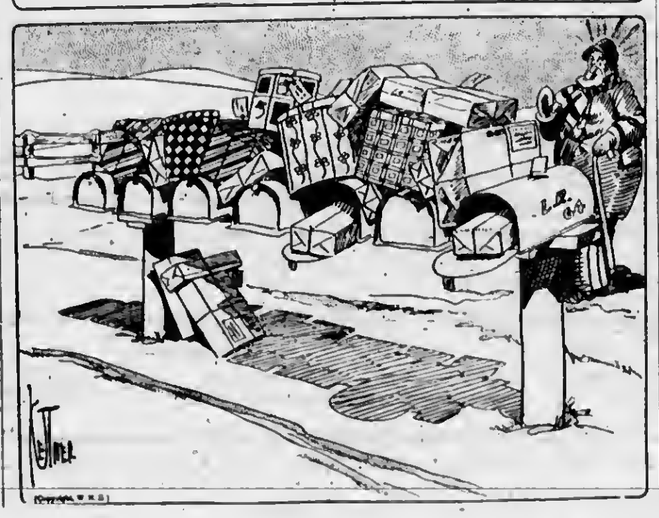
(Sec. 8). Any person who shall kindle a fire on or dangerously near to forest or grass lunds, and leuve it unquenched, or shall be a party thereto, and every person who shall use other thun incombustible wads for firearms, or who shall carry a naked torch, fire brand, or other exposed light in or dangerously near to forest land, causing risk of accidental fire, shall be punished by a fine not less than twenty-five dollars nor exceeding one hundred dollars or imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding three months.

(Sec. 9). Every person who shall wilfully deface, destroy or remove any warning placard posted under the requirements of this act shall be liable to a fine not less than ten dollars nor exceeding one hundred dollars for each offense, or imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding three months.

All vinlations should be reported to a local or state deputy or to John Baird, Director of Conservution, Lansing."

In view of the immense sums of money hurled in fire losses annoully throughout the United States, both from preventable and non-preventable causes, the above has an impressive significance. Only by the most extreme care on the part of the hunter, the farmer und the city resident can these losses be reduced. Here, indeed, the old adage about an ounce of prevention being worth a pound of cure applies with particular force.

The Easter-Tide



JUNE BRIDE GIVEN AN APRIL SHOWER

Miss Blanche Kingsnorth Was Pleasantly Remembered

A very pleasant event took place at the home of Mrs. Earle Johnston, last Friday evening, April 3rd, when a miscellaneous shower was given in honor of Miss Blanche Kingsnorth, principal of the county normal, whose engagement to O. E. Gregory of Kalamazoo was announced last summer.

The early part of the evening was devoted to music and entertainment, after which a mock wedding was observed. The bride was gowned in lustrous pink near silk with a white veil. The groom wore hair of the Benjamin type. The ring bearer carried a pacifier on a pink and white pillow. The decorations were also charmingly carried out in pink and white and refreshments were served, including the mock wedding cake. Mrs. Johnston proved a very capable hostess.

Twenty-five friends were present, each bringing Miss Kingsnorth gifts suitable for her new home and at a late hour they departed, leaving with their friend a small portion of the love and high regard they hold for her.

JUDGE TO AWARD TAX LIST JOB

RECORDS TO BE KEPT IN TREASURER'S HANDS

Sponsor of New Bill Says It Will Mean Saving of $200,000 to Tax Payers

With three dissenting votes, the senate last week passed the Case bill to place the keeping of delinquent tax records entirely in the hands of county treasurers. The records are now kept in the auditor general's office in Lansing, as well as in the county office.

The bill incidentally removes from the control of the auditor general the placing of the delinquent tax advertising. This privilege is given to the presiding circuit judge in each county.

Senator Bernie L. Case, of Ithnca, sponsor of the bill, declares it will mean a suving of $200,000 a year to the tuxpayers of Michigan. William H. Green, member of the Wayne county board of auditors, told him it would save Wayne county alone $50,000 a year, Mr. Case declares.

At present, all delinquent tax records must be made by the county treasurers and transmitted to the auditor general, who records them in his own office. This, Mr. Case held in a speech before the senate, is a duplication of effort and expense. At a committee hearing, Auditor General O. B. Fuller declared that if the bill passed it would throw 100 clerks in this office out of work. Mr. Case went to work on his figures and announced that it would mean a saving to the state of $130,000 a year, figuring the clerk's salaries at $1,300 a year average.

He adds to this figure the money required for transmission of the records from the county treasurers to the auditor general, including the $50,000 estimate for Wayne, to round out his claim of a $200,000 a year saving.

Mr. Case has been working on the bill for two years. He submitted it at the last session of the legislature, but it was defeated. This year he redrafted the bill and introduced it again. It met with stiff opposition in committee and was reported out on a split vote.

The county treasurer kept the delinquent tax records until 1883, when the legislature transferred them to the auditor general.

H. C. NEWMAN SAYS IT DESTROYS CROPS

Local Farmer Opens Much Disputed Question of Bird's Value to Agriculture

H. C. Newman, well-known farmer and apiarist of this district, has submitted the following communication that is liable to find support in some quarters and to meet with strenuous opposition in others. Mr. Newman refers to an article appearing in the issue of the Courier for March 25th last under the caption of "Urge Propagation of Pheasants" and writes as follows:

"Editor Courier:

I read with interest a recent article concerning the ring-necked pheasant, in which he is claimed to be of much benefit to the farmer and, as my experience with him has been such as to give me an unfavorable impression, I believe it my duty to warn the people before allowing the state to increase their number, by breeding and turning loose upon the already overburdened farmer.

Last spring was the first experience we had with them, when we took contract cucumbers und Mr. Ring-neck proceeded to destroy them as fast as they came up, going along and either pulling the young plants or digging the seeds. The seeds would be gone and a little round hole in the ground showed where they were dug. This was kept up until part of the patch was planted three times; Mr. Ring-neck cooperating with the cutworms. If he was so fond of insects, why didn't he take the cutworms. He also showed his fondness for melons and corn in the same way. I don't doubt his liking for buds, as I found most of the blossom buds gone from two young apple trees.

If they take all of the crops of the small farmer or gardener, of what use would be their destruction of weed seeds and insects? I would much prefer a hailstorm on a crop that is just coming up, than to have a flock of pheasants go through. The farmer has to fight the insects with poison and if he wants any help from the fowls he can raise a flock of turkeys or chickens and when they get too destructive of crops he can shut them up or kill them, but he isn't supposed to do anything when the state turns loose some pest to destroy his crops. The state, for a while, paid a bounty on crows, which are not as destructive to crops as the pheasants and are just as fond of insects.

Sincerely yours,

H. C. Newman."

As will be noted, Mr. Newman hits the ring-neck pheasant a tremendous wallop. We have never before heard of pheasants feeding on plants and, indeed, it is a disputed question whether they are destructive of crops or not, some holding one view, others another; but if Mr. Newman is not mistaken in the identity of the marauders who dug up his cucumbers, the weight of argument would appear to be on his side and the pheasant is truly an "undesirable citizen." Still, it may be alleged in his favor that he does more good than he does harm. There is no doubt that the woodpecker damages trees with his busy beak, but such loss is far overbalanced by the number of plant destroying insects that he consumes. Similar flaws may be found in the conduct of many other birds that we would hardly care to do without on that account. As in human nature, we have to take some bad with the good and if a man's life and conduct incline heavily to progress and helpfulness we call him good, shutting our eyes to his perhaps more spectacular faults. Probably we'd better apply this test to the pheasant before passing sentence upon him.

Most of the residents around Norwood are sitting on top of the bigh-board fence, crowing over the outcome of election, as we have proved that Norwood is not dead yet and is still on the map.

Cecil Richardson and mother visited over the week end with relatives in Traverse City. They were accompanied to Traverse City by Gerald Thayer, who spent the vacation week at the Richardson nome.

Word has been received here of the death of Bert Jackson of Detroit, who was a relative of Geo. Lord. He was a former resident here, having been born and raised in Norwood and spent the early part of his life here. Mr. Jackson was 39 years old, and his passing was due to plural-pneumonia. He leaves a wife and two daughters.

The members of the Aid Society drove over to the H. Brock farm southeast of Charlevoix last Wednesday, to meet with one of their members, Mrs. Ed. Jones. After the big pot luck dinner, the ladies were shown about the place by Mr. Jones, and noted the splendidly equipped dairy barns and other buildings. During the business session the Mesdames Stafford and Light rendered a beautiful song entitled, "In the Garden," which was much enjoyed. There were fifteen ladies in attendance and all had a very enjoyable day.

NERVES ALL UNSTRUNG?

Charlevoix Folks Should Find the Cause and Correct It.

Are you all worn out? Feel tired, nervous, half-sick? Do you have a constant backache; sharp twinges of pain, too, with dizzy spells and annoying urinary disorders? Then there's cause for worry and more cause to give your weakened kidneys prompt help. Use Doan's Pills—a stimulant diuretic to the kidneys.

Charlevoix folks recommend Doan's for just such troubles.

Mrs. Mabel Bassett, 110 Wood St., Charlevoix snys: "I had bearing-down pains in the small of my back and when I stooped to do my housework, knife-like twinges caught me across my kidneys. I felt worn out and gradually became nervous and all out of sorts. My kidneys didn't act regularly, either, but after using Doan's Pills, from Fessenden's Drug Store, I was cured."

Price 60c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Pills—the same that Mrs. Bassett had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

By B. C. Mellencamp

Professor Starr, extension specialist in vegetables led a highly interesting discussion on the vegetable situation in this state at the meeting of truck growers held at East Jordan on April 1st. He gave many pointers that will surely be of great benefit to those in attendance and explained in detail some of the experiments that his department is performing to discover the best varieties to use under our conditions. The main trouble in selecting various varieties from seed firms is the fact that they all state that their particular varieties are the best and how is a farmer to know who is right and who is wrong. In a short time the results will be made public and will clear this uncertainty.

Prof. Starr particularly recommended the growing of asparagus. He said there is not enough being grown at present to satisfy the demnnd and that this condition will hold true for some time yet. Last year 12c per pound was paid at the canning factories and at this price a good profit can be realized. Traverse City will can asparagus this year and no doubt Central Lake and Ellsworth will soon follow suit. As high as 6,000 pounds per acre have been secured by some growers. As the vegetable is more largely grown of course the price will not hold up to 12c per pound, but Prof. Starr did not think that the price would go below 8 cents.

The following remarks were given on the cultivation of asparagus:

1. Sow seed in spring, ½ pound will furnish plants for about one acre. Soak seed for three days before sowing as seed germinates very slowly.

2. Next spring transplant roots in a trench 10-12 in. deep in 5 foot rows with 2 ft. apart in the rows. As growth takes place gradually cover the trench until finally the trench is leveled off with rest of land. Clean cultivation is necessary in all cases.

3. Next spring work well and disc to chop up the old stalks.

4. After taking crop off, which is around 1st of July, it is desirable to fertilize. This increases the quality and quantity of the next year's crop. At this time all the benefit goes for the next year's cutting. 4-8-6 fertilizer is recommended and not exceeding 1,200 pounds per acre. The best variety to grow is the Mary Washington, as it is most resistant to rust, which is about the only touble we experience. Kill the beetle with arsenate of lead.

In connection with sweet corn, use n 4-8-6 fertilizer at about 200 lbs. per acre on the hills. Plant early, as the biggest price of course is the first coming on the market. Alpha is the best variety, followed by White Cob Cory and the Golden Bnntnm.

Sure Crop Wax seems to be the best variety for string beans.

With tomatoes, the Enrliana, John Benr and Chalks Early Sewell are best. As prevention for blight, use Bordeaux Mixture on new plants and then usually one more application will be all that is necessary.

"Oh, I'm Robin Hooding it around this part of the country. It is so secluded, you know, and Sarros hasn't any friends or any telegraph lines or any garrisons up this way. I heard in San Miguel de Padua that you were camped yonder, and I was on my way over to confer with you on matters of state. Met your friend, Geary, at El Buen Amigo a couple of weeks ago, just before he sailed for the United States. He was telling me you had to have a lot of tools for road building, so I cabled in a secret cipher to the Sobranean revolutionary junta in New Orleans to ship these tools to you immediately. They arrived on the last trip of the Atlanta and now repose in Leber's warehouse waiting for you to call and remove them."

"You scoundrel! What have you sent me?"

"A couple of hundred rifles and three machine guns, brandied axes, picks, shovels, plows, and so on. I also ran in three cases of ammunition, labeled grindstones, two more cases disguised as bolts, and quite several thousand labeled nails in kegs. I should feel rather sorry for you if my friend, Sarros, should get suspicious and investigate, but I haven't any fear that he will. You see, he knows you're here on legitimate business. He has investigated and learned that you are a bona fide mining engineer of considerable reputation—and then, you know, your friend, Geary, dickered with him for the concession. The mining property you are about to develop belongs to the people, not to Sarros; yet he has bartered it away and will divert the royalty to his own pocket instead of the public treasury."

"Hum-m-m! What do you want me to do with all those munitions consigned to me?"

"Arrange with Leber to keep them there until you get ready to build your road into the mine. I want them there when my American mercenaries arrive in Buenaventura. By the way, you are going to import these mercenaries for me. They are American miners and road builders in the employ of the Honda Mining & Development company, which is to be the name of your enterprise. I hope you'll like the name, Webster. I picked it out myself."

"You cool scoundrel! You're making cat's paw out of me."

"That is because you happen to be so handy for my purpose. You see my plan, do you not? I'm going to attack Buenaventura from within and without. I'm going to come down on Sarros like a wolf on the fold, and the job is scheduled for next Saturday night a week."

"Look here, Rick, my boy, I have no desire to mix in the politics of this country."

"You have some desire, however, to mix in its wealth," Ricardo reminded him.

"Well?"

"I'm the only man that can help you. By the way, do not order your machinery shipped until after I am seated firmly on the throne of my fathers."

"Why?"

"It's been framed with Sarros to let you spend your money on that concession and get the mine in running order; then a fake suit, alleging an error in the government survey, will be filed. It will be claimed that the concession given your friend, Geary, is, by virtue of erroneous government surveys, the property of a citizen of Sobrante. The courts here do as Sarros tells them. You are to be kicked out, busted, and despairing, and your nicely equipped little mine will be taken over as a government monopoly and run for the benefit of the government, to-wit, Sarros and his satellites. We had to cook up a dirty deal like that to save your life. Of course, now that I have warned you in time, you are safe. We schemed a proposition, however, that worked both ways. It enabled us to save you and to save us, by sabotaging the shipment, free of suspicion, of arms for the rebels that are to attack the city from within. Naturally I had to cache their arms within the city—and that was a hard problem until you happened along. Thank you, fairy godfather."

"My thanks are due you, Ricardo. I'm for you, first, last, and all the time, and against this Sarros outfit. By the way, how do you purpose moving your machine guns?"

"We'll have to carry them, I guess."

"Well, I'll have a small auto-truck delivered in Buenaventura by that time. You might arrange to armor it with sheet steel; and with a couple of machine guns mounted in it, and a crew of resolute Americans behind the machine guns, you could caper from one end of the city to the other and clear a path for your infantry."

"Thank you, my friend. I'll borrow the motor truck and arrange to armor it. That's a hully idea. Are you in Buenaventura now?"

Webster nodded. "Then," Ricardo suggested, "I'll meet you in my room at El Buen Amigo next Wednesday night at 11 and explain the details of my plans to you if you care to hear them. I think they're air-tight myself, but somehow I think I'd feel more certain of them if you approve them."

"I'll be there, Rick, and the day you run that outlaw Sarros off the grass you'll know why I am for you."

"Good-by, old bonn. You will never know how grateful you have made me."

Ruey shook hands with Webster and rode off through the timber, leaving John Stuart Webster to pursue the even tenor of his way, until at length he arrived once more in Buenaventura and sought accommodations at the Hotel Mateo. And there, as he entered the lobby and gazed through a glass door across the patio and into the veranda, he saw that which disturbed him greatly. In a big wicker rocker Dolores Ruey sat, rocking gently and busily stitching on a piece of fancy work!

Billy Geary gone back to the United States, and Dolores was still in Buenaventura! Amazing! Why, what the devil did Billy mean by letting her have her own way like that? Of course, they hadn't been married, or she would not now be out there on the veranda, and, of course, they hadn't quarreled, because that was an impossibility, and, of course, Billy had departed alone for the U. S. A., else he would have returned to their camp in the hills back of San Miguel de Padua.

"Well, I know what I'm going to do," Webster decided. "I'm not going to be led into temptation while Billy's not on the job—so I'll not put up at the Hotel Mateo after all. I'll just sneak around to El Buen Amigo and fix it with that old Mother Jeaks not to tip off my presence in town to Dolores Ruey until I can get the lay of the land and see what the devil has happened to all my well-laid plans."

He retreated out the front door and called a carriage, into which he was about to step, bag and baggage, when Don Juan Cafetero came rushing up in great excitement. "Sure, where are ye goin' now, sor. Is there no room for ye in the Hotel Mateo?"

"Their beds have jiggers in them, and I just remembered that," Webster fibbed. "Hop in, John, and we'll drive around to Mr. Geary's lodgings in El Buen Amigo."

"But I come through the patio just now," Don Juan explained, "an' who should I meet but the young leddy."

"You infernal scoundrel! Did you tell her I was in town?"

"Sure I did, sor. An' why not?"

"None of your infernal business. You've spoiled everything. You're a muddle-headed monkey and I've a great notion to let you get drunk again. Take the baggage back into the hotel."

Don Juan Cafetero, greatly humbled and rebuffed, stepped aside and watched Webster stride back into the hotel. "God love ye, sor," he mumbled, "knowin' what I know, is it likely I'd let ye make a moakey out av her or yerself? Ye made yer plans wit' Misther Geary wit'out consultin' her. Now go, ye grrand big divil, an' find out why she kicked yer schame to smithereens." And with a solemn and knowing wink at the duffle bag, Don Juan picked that article up and followed after his master.

CHAPTER XIII.

John Stuart Webster's agile brain was the repository of many conflicting emotions as he bathed, shaved, and changed from his soiled khaki field clothes to a suit of ducks before presenting himself before Dolores.

Had Billy's courage forsaken him at the last minute, with the result that he had gone back to the United States without having settled the question of Dolores' future? Had he proposed and been rejected, or had he proposed, been accepted, and had his plans for an immediate marriage vetoed by Dolores?

In either event, why had Billy failed to leave a note for him at the Hotel Mateo, or mailed him a letter to the Globo de Oro at San Miguel de Padua, advising him of the change in the plan of action outlined for him by Webster?

In the simplicity of his single-hearted devotion Webster was puzzled to understand how any woman in her right mind could fail to fall in love with Billy Geary. A man he was, from heels to hair, and a man with prospects far above the average. To Webster's way of thinking, the girl who married Billy might well count herself fortunate.

Dolores greeted him with unaffected pleasure. "Well, Caliph!" she said. Just that. It made Webster sensible of a feeling of having returned to her after an absence of several years. "I'm so glad to see you, Miss Ruey," he replied, and added boldly, "particularly since I didn't expect to."

She knew what her reply would lead to; nevertheless, with that dissimulation which can only be practiced in perfection by a clever and beautiful woman, she answered with equal boldness: "Indeed! Pray why?"

"Well, for a pretty good reason, I think. A few weeks ago, after examining Bill's concession very thoroughly, I told him he was a potential millionaire. Now, while I disclaim any appearance of braggadocio, when John Stuart Webster, E. M., makes any mine owner a report like that, he is apt to be taken very seriously. And having made Bill a potential millionaire and arranged to give him three or four months' vacation back home, I had a notion he'd present to you a very valid reason why you should accompany him."

"You are very frank, Caliph."

"That's because I'm curious. He had a certain dream, and told me about it, and I did my little best to make it come true."

"I think I understand, Caliph. It would be very difficult, I think, for anybody to meet Billy without being attracted toward him. He's one of the dearest, most lovable boys in the world—and he did do me the signal honor of asking me to marry him. So there!"

"Well, and why didn't you?"

She smiled at his blunt insistence on forcing the issue. "For a number of excellent reasons, Caliph. In the first place, he wanted me to marry him immediately—and I wasn't ready to leave Sobrante, while Billy was. Indeed, it was highly necessary that he should leave immediately, for the sake of his health, and I had Billy's interest at heart sufficiently to insist upon it. You seem to forget that when a girl marries she must make some preparation for the event, and if she has any close relatives, such as a brother, for instance, she likes to have that relative present at the ceremony. You will recall, Caliph, that I have a brother and that you have promised to introduce me to him very shortly."

"Well, and Why Didn't You?"

"By Judas, I never thought of that, Miss Ruey," the repentant Webster answered. "In fact, I wasn't thinking of anybody's interest in this matter but Bill's."

"Not even of mine, Caliph?" reproachfully.

"That goes without saying. Could I have done anything nicer for you than fix it for Bill so he would be in position to marry you? Here you are, practically alone in the world—at least you were when Bill met you and fell in love with you—and I know that boy so well I was convinced, after meeting you, that his future happiness and yours would best be conserved if you married him. I realize this is a most unusual conversation——"

"Quite to be expected of an unusual man, Caliph. And I do not think you were one bit presumptuous. It was wonderfully dear of you, and I am profoundly grateful that Billy and I have such a true, unselfish friend, whose first thought is for our happiness. Of course, you realize how bad I felt to think I couldn't accede to Billy's plan. Billy's such a dear, it quite broke my heart to disappoint him, but a little temporary unhappiness will not ruin Billy, will it? It makes me feel blue to talk about it, Caliph."

"Not at all, not at all, Miss Ruey. Bill is one of the impulsive, whirlwind kind, up in the clouds today and down in the slough of despond tomorrow. He'll survive the shock. However, I'm glad to know everything will come out all right. Seeing you here gave me a momentary chill; thought a cog had slipped somewhere, so I helped myself to Cupid's license and asked. A man cannot learn very much from a woman unless he asks questions, can he? I mean on the subject of love."

She smiled a little, wistful, knowing smile. "No, Caliph," she answered seriously, "somehow the Master of Things ordained that on the subject of love man must do all the talking."

"Yes, but on the other hand, woman has the last word—as usual. However, the only thing in your case and Billy's that worries me is the thought that since Bill left his magnet behind he will be drawn back here before he is in the kind of shape, physically, that I want him to be in before he relieves me on the job so I can go away."

QUICK WORK SAVES THE KNUDSON FARM

Neighbors Turn Out In Force to Fight Grass Fire

On Thursday afternoon of last week fire destroyed the barn and silo of Pete Anderson, who occupies the old Courier farm on the East Jordan road, to the extent of $500 and menaced the buildings on the adjacent John Knudson place.

The blaze was the result of a small bonfire set by Mrs. Anderson on the north side of their place, near the house. The flames got a big start in the high wind that prevailed at the time, worked around the house and ignited the barn and the silo. Besides the buildings, a considerable quantity of hay was lost. The cattle, however, were removed in safety.

Sweeping across the field to the south, a line of fire 25 rods in width and roaring high in the air, raced across the stubble of the meadow straight for the Knudson farm. The neighbors, realizing the peril of the situation, turned out in force, both men and women and the young prairie fire was checked at the Knudson line fence, just a few rods from the house and outbuildings. The fire fighters worked with a will and Mr. Knudson is very grateful to them for their unselfish efforts in his behalf.

A. E. MASON

--FARMERS--
A GOOD CASH CROP

A man who makes a success of raising Pickles year after year, writes as follows:

"We planted our cucumbers on the 9th of June on new land. We put a shovel of well-rotted horse manure in each hill about 6 inches deep, hills six feet apart each way.

When I grow on new ground I leave four good strong plants. If old ground, I leave but three plants. We had but few bugs and only used soot and slaked lime mixed.

My yield in 1924 was on the basis of $606.28 PER ACRE. One picking from a half acre gave us $52.40. This is not my first big crop.

I would say I am a man 71 years old and can pick 16 and 17 bushels of pickles per day. I differ perhaps from some young men of today, as the sun never shines too hot for me to care for my crops."

(Special to the Courier)

That seething caldron of contention, legislative reapportionment, has now apparently boiled dry and the legislative atmosphere will no doubt be more clear in consequence. After considering for many weeks several redistricting bills, proposing to give Wayne county as high as 25 seats in the house, the apportionment committee finally reported out without recommendation a bill to increase Wayne's representation from 14 to 17 members.

A motion to send the 17-for-Wayne bill to the committee of the whole and thus allow it to pursue the regular course of a bill through the house was defeated by a vote of 32 yeas and 56 nays. This left the bill considerably up in the air. A motion to indefinitely postpone further consideration of the whole matter then carried 51 to 37. It is doubtful if there will be any further move to revive the redistricting issue during the present session. The feeling seems to be that this subject should be settled at the constitutional convention which will probably be held in 1927.

Oppose 90 Day Sessions

By a vote of 27 for to 56 against the house defeated Senator W. L. Case's proposed constitutional amendment to provide that in the future legislative sessions would be limited to 90 days, except that they might be extended by a two-thirds vote of the members of both houses. The feeling was expressed that a specified time limit would result in hastily considered legislation and that progress was not unnecessarily delayed under the present system. Members receive $800 for their two year term of office regardless of the length of the session, so it was argued that no member could have any selfish reason for desiring long sessions.

One of the most dramatic legislative battles of the past week centered around final consideration in the house of Rep. Bryant's bill providing for the creation of a fifth normal school to be located somewhere in the northern part of the lower peninsula. When this bill came up before the house committee of the whole it was the butt of a bitter attack launched by Rep. Miles Curtis of Battle Creek, who charged that the educational system of the state was being developed into a great political machine and that the superintendent of public instruction had under his authority an army of 26,000 teachers who dare not disobey his orders.

There are many interesting features to this struggle to get an additional normal school for the upper part of the state. Two years ago several northern Michigan cities were backing bills providing for the establishment of normal schools within their limits. This year about a dozen towns were actively in the race for the desired plum. Finally they got together and agreed to pool their influence and work for a bill authorizing the school and providing the necessary appropriation, but leaving the selection of the site up to the state board of education. The Bryant bill was the result of this agreement. Withstanding a heavy barrage of proposed amendments, the most of which were proposed by Rep. Crutis, the bill survived committee of the whole and the following day was passed on third reading by a vote of 87 to 6.

To Abolish State Rewards

There will be no more state awards for the construction of county roads if the senate agrees to the Kirby bill which passed the house 58 to 30, after having been once defeated. Two years ago the legislature found that the state was over $6,000,000 behind in its awards to the various counties and townships, so the award system was suspended for a two year period.

In urging the passage of the Kirby bill, Rep. Charles Evans declared that the award system had been outgrown and that inasmuch as the legislature had passed the Ming bill, under the terms of which the state will take over the entire cost of trunk lines, it was only fair and proper that the state awards on county roads should now be permanently discontinued. It is difficult to prophesy what reception will be accorded the Kirby bill in the senate.

Without discussion or debate the senate unanimously passed Senator Norman B. Horton's bill to change the name of the Michigan Agricultural College to the Michigan State College of Agriculture and Applied Science. The fate of this proposal regarding the future name of M. A. C. now rests with the house of representatives.

Counties and groups of counties would be authorized to erect and maintain sanatoriums for the treatment of tuberculosis according to the bill, sponsored by Charles E. Greene of Richmond, which passed the senate by a vote of 26 to 0. Taxes for such purposes could not exceed one mill. The state would pay $1 per day for each patient in such hospitals.

Favor New Apple Grades

By a vote of 26 to 0 the senate voiced its approval of Senator Leland's simplified apple standards bill which reduces the number of grade from 7 to 4. While apple growers and packers have failed to reach an agreement as to just what they would consider as a perfect grading system for Michigan apples, it is understood that most of the interested individuals and organizations are fairly well satisfied with the Leland bill in its present form.

Without a single vote to spare, the house passed, 51 to 40, Rep. Harris' bill to increase hunting licenses from $1.00 to $1.25. The purpose of this extra fee is to provide revenue to pay taxes on state owned game preserves and refuges, as provided by a companian bill which was also passed by a close vote after being once defeated. In the past these lands, being state owned, have not been on the tax roll. Often they were located in poor communities, so the tax rate was oppressively high on the other property situated in the same assessment district. Under the proposed plan the state owned game reserves will be assessed as other property and the same tax rate will apply, but the state will foot the bill.

Pass Primary Fund Bill

Seeing the justice the Bohn bill to provide a more fair and equitable system of distributing the primary school fund, the house approved by a 83 to 6 vote this important measure which will afford much needed relief to the poorer school districts of the state. The Bohn bill is far more conservative then the Meggison bill which was considered by the 1923 legislature. Under the terms of the Bohn proposal, 95 per cent of the fund will be distributed on the school census basis as at present, while the remaining 5 per cent will be divided among the more needy districts according to a carefully worked out method specified in the bill.

This 5 per cent will amount to approximately $750,000. It is said that Wayne county will lose nearly $300,000 under the Bohn bill, yet several of the Wayne members voted for it because they could see its justice and could realize that its enactment would help to insure an equality of educational opportunity in Michigan. Kent members declared that it would cost their county between $25,000 and $30,000 annually, but they gladly supported it, believing it to be for the best interests of the state. The bill had previously passed the senate and now goes to the governor.

Red Crown is the thrifty man's gasoline because it burns clean—every drop is vaporized and converted into a steady, steam-engine-like drive of sustained pulling power.

Every gallon of Red Crown contains more miles, because of the unbroken flow of energy in its continuous chain of boiling point fractions—unbroken clear to the heavy ends—the power end of the chain.

We welcome small estates to be administered. They will receive the same careful attention that is given to all business intrusted to our care. Our charges will be so small that no one will criticise them--the regular statutory fees fixed by statute passed in 1846 which have never been increased. We expect to gain from this business only indirectly, through the contacts they will bring and the agreeable results to all individuals concerned. We try to do things right; and our experience of 35 years helps in this.

There are several "Reasons Why it is Better and Less Expensive" to secure the services of this Company in administering small estates. Send for our circular upon that particular subject.

Election was a tame affair here Monday, there being but eighty-two voted polled. The fact that there was no opposition on the township ticket was responsible for the light vote. One half of one per cent was voted for road repair and the same amount was voted for improvement, while twelve hundred dollars was raised for the contingent fund. It was decided to build the mile of road running east from M-11 at Atwood and also the piece of road between Ellaworth and Central Lake near the township line.

Very brond powers are given the commissioner of conservation by the terms of Representative Ming's hill which has passed the house 69 to 19. This measure provides that the commissioner shall have full authority to open nnd close hunting and fishing seasons in any part of the stnte, whenever he deems such action to be necessary for the protection of desirable forms of wild life.

Does a bounty on predacious beasts pay, is a question frequently asked at the department of conservation. Six counties, since the state stopped bounty payments, have been paying hounties on wolves and coyotes. They are Delta, Menominee, Gogebic, Dickinson, Luce and Chippewa. For the first six months the counties paid bounties 125 wolves and coyotes were bountied. In the last six months, up to the fore part of 1925, this number had dropped to 52.

The Pigeon river forest reserve lies almost wholly in Otsego county, although a very small portion is in Cheboygan county. It has a gross area of 8,538 acres while the state owns 6,628 acres. All the above mentioned forests have resident managers. Each reserve is well crossed with fire lines, there being 654 miles of fire lines already built.

FARMERS PAY TOO MUCH FOR CLOVER

Exhorbitant Price Asked for Early Crystal Dwarf

Reports that farmers in some aections of Michigan are paying too much for strains of sweet clover known as Early Crystal Dwarf have reached the crops department at M. A. C. recently. Prices for this seed are said to have ranged as high as $30.00 a bushel in some instances.

"This seed may be obtained from reliable sources, in large quantities, at $9.30 a bushel," says Prof. C. R. Megee of the M. A. C. crops staff, in discussing the reports of "thirty dollar" prices. "The ordinary strain is quoted at $9.00 a bushel. Farmers should not pay more than fifty cents premium a bushel for Early Grystal Dwarf clover seed.

"This strain of sweet clover has been known for some time, having gained considerable prominence in Grundy county, Illinois. It has been tested here at the Michigan experimental station and under Michigan conditions has been found to be from ten days to two weeks enrlier in maturity than the white or ordinary sweet clover. Due to its dwarf habit, it yields only two-thirds to three-fourths as much forage per acre as common sweet clover. The stem is a little finer, however, and it may give a little better quality of hay. As a pasture crop, however, it is not likely to prove as popular as the ordinary sweet clover due to its earlier maturity.

"The Early Crystal Dwarf or Grundy County White Blossom Sweet Clover is an excellent seed producer. The seed ripens more uniformly; consequently larger yields may be secured. This sweet clover may well be used under Michigan conditions, but exhorbitant prices should not he paid for the seed."

Ladies of the Eastern Star will hold a baked goods sale, Saturday, April 11, in store vacated by Mrs. Oldham, Bridge St.—Adv. 14-tf.

LOEB FARM SOLD SOME VALUABLE LIVESTOCK

Several Registered Animals Recently Disposed Of

During last week, the Loeb Farm has sold the following livestock:—

Young Holstein bull to J. B. Stahlman, Brookville, Penna.

Yearling Belgian stallion to a party at Brutus, Mich.

Two five year grade Belgian stallions to Mr. Noight of Gaylord.

Registered Duroc-Jersey sow to Sheesley Brothers, Orion, Ill. This was a yearling, for which was received the sum of $350. She won all records this last fall.

Young Duroc boar to W. H. Hendiger of Highwood, Conn.

Michigan Junior Champion, a Duroc-Jersey, to D. L. Rice of Washington, D. C., treasurer of the National Tribone.

Young registered Duroc-Jersey sow with 12 young pigs.

It is very gratifying to note the progress being made by the big institution south of town. Such a farm is eminently worth while in a community because it stimulates better breeding of animals among stockmen and provides a nucleus for the exchange of experiences, demonstration of methods and dissemination of valuable instruction.

Time to think about fencing that field. We have the wire fencing that will give you long service. Charlevoix Hardware Co.—Adv. 13-tf.

You've heard about the wonderful colorful photoplay in Cecil B. DeMille's "The Ten Commandments"? Well, this one's done entirely in color. There's not a black and white sequence throughout the length of the film. Think of it!

Bebe Daniels, as the star of the Paramount picture, "Dangerous Money," is due at the Palace Theatre Wednesday, April 15th.

"Dangerous Money" is Miss Daniel's first Paramount star picture, adapted to the screen by Julie Herne and directed by Frank Tuttle.

Tom Moore has the leading man's role and other big names in the strong supporting cast include Willinm Powell, Dolores Cassinelli, Mary Foy and Edward O'Connor.

Vested Chorus Choir Sings at Congregational and Episcopal Churches

Owing to the fact that Dr. B. G. Mattson, newly elected pastor of the First Congregational Church of Charlevoix, was not able to be present and take charge of the services on Easter Sunday, no regulur morning service was held at this church. However, in the afternoon at four o'clock, the vested chorus choir, under the direction of Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Oldham, assisted by A. F. Bridge, as reader; Robert Bridge, as violinist and Mrs. Marguerite Swinton, as pianist, with Mrs. Oldham at the organ, rendered a musical service appropriate to the day's significance as a feast of the church which was enjoyed by un exceptionally large congregation.

Following is the program, which wus distinguished by some of the most famous sacred musical compositions by the well-known composers whose names are appended:

Marche Triomphale, Guilmant—violin, piano and organ.

"The Seven Words from the Cross"—Responses by the choir.

Postlude, "Easter March," Brackett: violin, piano and organ.

In the evening at 7:30 o'clock, a major portion of the chorus choir, with Mrs. E. J. Edwards at the piano, assisted in the Easter evensong at Christ Episcopal church, the Rev. W. A. Datson of Petoskey having charge of the service. The musical program was as follows:

Processional, "Christ Is Risen," Ruffner.

Recessional, Hymn No. 171, "Tho Day of Resurrection."

Benediction.

The services during the day at the Methodist church, while not entirely given up to music, included some very fine numbers. At the sunrise meeting at 6:00 a. m., the choir sang "Thanks Be To God" and the "Gloria In Excelsis." At the 10:30 service, Hymn No. 180, "Crown Him," the anthem, "Blow Golden Trumpets," the anthem, "Lift Up Your Heads" and the hymn, "Christ Is Risen," formed the musical part of the program and at the evening service, "Crown Him with Majesty" was sung and the hymn, "I Gave My Life," was illustrated as aung by Baloptican slides.

At the Baptist church, a saxophone-piano duet performed by Miss Nottie Correll and W. G. Bellinger and a solo by Miss Erma Carey delighted one of the largest congregations that the church has seen in years.

EMMET SHERIFF HIT BY PRISONER

Receives Blow on Head from One of Prisoners in Jail

Sheriff George Carpenter of Petoskey is suffering from a severe blow on the head, inflicted by Bernard Klise at the county jail last Tuesday afternoon. As the officer was passing the table where the prisoners were having their meal he was struck across the side of the head with a chair leg, which had been removed from one of the chairs in the jail. Mrs. Carpenter, who was on duty at the jail door, witnessed the attack.

The blow inflicted a deep gash and left Sheriff Carpenter dazed and bleeding. He staggered against the cell wall but did not lose consciousness. Shaking off the dizziness he groped for his assailant and succeeded in landing him in a cell.

Later a physician was called and dressed the wound. The officer stated that while he still felt dizzy and weakened from the effect of the attack he did not anticipate serious results.

The prisoner had been placed in the county jail on Monday, at the request of his guardian and father, A. B. Klise.

RESORT ADVERTISING STARTS

FURNISHED COTTAGES ARE NOW FEATURED

Later On, Hotel Accommodations Will Be Stressed to Catch the Vacationists

The Charlevoix Association of Commerce has opened the Charlevoix advertising campaign for 1925 with a slightly different plan than that adopted last year. Advertising has been placed with a number of the leading daily papers of the south with an end to attracting first the summer vacationist seeking a furnished cottage for the entire or a greater portion of the resort period. The resort sections of the Sunday and week day issues of the following publications are to be used: the Atlanta Journal, the Birmingham News, the Meridan (Miss.) Star, the Houston Chronicle, the Fort Worth Star Telegram, the Oklahoman, of Oklahoma City, Okla; the Arkansas Gazette of Little Rock, the Memphis Commercial Appeal and the New Orleans Times-Pieayune. An advertisement similar in form to that used last year will be employed.

Later on, as the resort season approaches, the above list of mediums will be enlarged to include a number of leading dailies of the middle central states and the emphasis shifted from furnished cottages to hotel and boarding house accommodations. In addition to the newspaper advertising, liberal use will be made of booklets, folders and calendars and an efficient follow-up system will be handled by Miss Doris Hammond, secretary of the association.

The plan of newspaper advertising above described will enable the association to concentrate its advertising and its efforts on each phase of the resort appeal at the time when it is most effective. Now is the time when the southern business man is making plans to locate his family in some cool, northern climate for the summer months. He is after a cottage. Later on, the vacation periods begin and then hotel and boarding house accommodations are sought. Advertising the latter at this present early period of the year would not be productive of worth-while results.

The people of Charlevoix may be assured that their Association of Commerce is making good use of their advertising appropriation for the coming season. All that we can do now is pray for hot weather in the south and in the meantime get things here in such good shape that when our visitors come they will not be disappointed.

ALAS! THE RING-NECKED PHEASANT

WHAT CRIMES HAS HE NOT COMMITTED

H. C. Newman Supplements His Charges with Further Damaging Evidence

The case against the ring-neck pheasant grows stronger as further evidence of his predatory and destructive nature comes to light. H. C. Newman, our contributor last week on this subject, replies to our editorial expressions of doubt as to the identity of the despoiler of his cucumbers, submitting proof, not only of this particular offense, but referring to a considerable number of other specific instances where the ring-neck bird has done great harm to the farmer.

The subject would seem interesting enough to merit further discussion and we invite such other of our readers as are willing and qualified to enter the controversy, to let us hear from them. Here is what Mr. Newman goes on to say:

"Editor Courier:

In writing of the destructiveness of the ring-neck pheasant, it seems I didn't give sufficient evidence of his identity, so I offer some further information. We were puzzled to know what was destroying our cucumbers, until the manager of the Charlevoix Pickle & Produce company informed us that it was their habit to walk up and down the rows taking all they found. I then frequently noticed their tracks and heard their squawk, hut he is too expert a criminal to be easily caught in the act, and can disappear the quickest of any bird or animal I know. If the time comes when it becomes necessary to destroy them, it will be found a difficult job.

I wish to refer the editor to some of our neighbors for further evidence of his varied, destructiveness, although I don't douht that there are places in sparsely settled communities where they may do more good than harm. Ask W. F. Johnson about that raspberry and strawberry patch he set out a few years ago. The pheasants didn't even let him have enough berries for n shortcake. Ask George Block who took his squash seeds, or young squash plants. Ask Mrs. August Cellner ubout the six young turkeys she saw a pheasant kill. Ask N. A. Harper how many bushels of corn they ate for him. Ask Harry Coblentz if they ever killed any poultry for him. Ask Joe Stover how they dig up young corn.

I believe there are few birds or animals that are not either decidedly harmful or beneficial. For instance, the woodpecker which the editor refers to as doing much good and some damage, I believe does no damage at all, his work being confined to unsound wood, whlle his cousin the Yellow Bellied Sapsucker, who looks much like n woodpecker, only works on sound wood, sucking the sap, and eating the inner bark, sometimes nearly girdling a tree. The squirrel is also more destructive than is generally known, destroying the nests of song birds, and girdling trees in times of scarcity of food. I have seen large branches of trees, and young saplings which have been girdled by fox squirrels.

I believe that people should study with more interest the habits of the different birds and aaimals, that those which are most beneficial may be better known and protected, while those which are known to be most detrimental to the interests of the community as a whole, should be destroyed. The skunk is considered by some to be beneficial, but he has many bad hahits, besides his offensive smell. He destroys every bird nest he finds, eats eggs and young chickens, eats bees, eats green corn, and gives us in exchange for this damage, the destroying of insects, and a pelt of fur when killed. The bird life that he destroys might, if left to live, do more toward exterminating insects than the offensive odored skunk.

Sincerely yours,
H. C. Newman."

Easter Bonnet Party

About fifty young people attended the Easter bonnet party given by the Y. P. S. C. E. last Monday evening and everybody had a good time. The crepe paper bonnets displayed by the girls were works of art and the boys showed great discrimination in making their selection as the shadows were thrown on the screen. The committee is to be congratulated on the success of the affair.

WILL TAKE OVER HIS CHARGE

DR. MATTSON COMES HERE ON SUNDAY NEXT

Splendid Reputation of Manistee Congregational Divine Promises Much

The Rev. B. G. Mattson, D. D., of Manistee, pastor-elect of the First Congregational church of Charlevoix, will take over his new charge in this city on Sunday, April 19th.

Dr. Mattson comes most excellently recommended to the church in Charlevoix, as the following communication submitted to us for publication by the Ministerial Association of Manistee will attest:

"Rev. B. G. Mattson, D. D.
Manistee, Michigan

Dear Brother:—We, the members of the Manistee Ministerial Association, deeply regret the fact that you are so soon to sever your connection with us and with our city. We feel that in your departure from us to a new field of labor in Charlevoix, we are losing the true fellowship of a brother beloved.

Deeply interested as you have been in matters of civic and community welfure, you have always stood for those things that tended towards the highest and best in the various phases of public life.

As a citizen you have made a large place for yourself, and you leave behind you a host of friends who are sorry to see you go. As a brother minister you have been gracious and fraternal in all your relations with the other churches and pastors in our city. Your courtesy has been an example and inspiration to the rest of us.

May the blessing of the Great Head of the church be upon you, your family and your work wherever you go.

For the Ministerial Association, E. M. Favrholdt, W. J. Atkinson, committee."

The above should leave no room for doubt as to Dr. Mattson's high standing in the community which he is leaving to take up his work here. Those who had the pleasure of hearing him preach on the occasion of his recent visit to Charlevoix will agree, we think, that he possesses remarkable force and magnetism as a speaker, and, as he is credited with considerable executive ability as well, it is evident that he will be a strong asset to the forces making for betterment in this community. We welcome him, heartily, with the best of wishes for his success in his new field.

Among the new students announced at Western State Normal, Kalamazoo, at the beginning of the spring term is Miss Violet Mears of Charlevoix, who is enrolled for a later elementary life certificate course.

A FOREST WEEK IS ESTABLISHED

FIXATION OF ARBOR DAY LEFT TO GOVERNORS

President's Proclamation Warns the Public to Consider Forests As a Trust

Arbor Day, according to the proclamation of the president of the United States establishing the week of April 27th-May 3rd as American Forest Week, will fall within that week on a date to be later designated in each state by its governor. The text of the president's proclamation is herewith reproduced in full by the courtesy of the Shakespeare Study Club of this city:

"In proclaiming American Forest Week, I desire to bring to the attention of all our people the danger that comes from the neglect of our forests.

For several years the nation has observed Forest Protection Week. It is fitting that this observance be enlarged. We have too freely spent the rich and magnificent gift that nature bestowed on us. In our eagerness to use that gift we have stripped our forests; we have permitted fires to lay waste and devour them; we have all too often destroyed the young growth and the seed from which new forests might spring and though we already feel the first grip of timber shortage, we have barely begun to save and to restore.

We have passed the pioneer stage and are no longer excusable for continuing this unwise dissipation of a great resouree. To the nation it means the lack of an elemental necessity and the waste of keeping idle or only partly productive nearly one-fourth of our soil. To our forest-using industries it means unstable investments, the depletion of forest capital, the dishanding of established enterprises, and the decline of one of our most important industrial groups.

Our forests ought to be put to work and kept at work. I do not minimize the obstacles that have to be met, nor the difficulty of changing old ideas and practlees. We must all put our hands to this common task. It is not enough that the federal, state and local governments take the lead. There must be a change in our national attitude. Our industries, our landowners, our farmers, all our citizens must learn to treat our forests as crops, to be used but also to be renewed. We must learn to tend our woodlands as carefully as we tend our farms.

Let us apply to this creative task the boundless energy and skill we have so long spent in harvesting the free gifts of nature. The forests of the future must be started today. Our children are dependent on our course. We are bound by a solemn obligation from which no evasion and no subterfuge will relieve us. Unless we fulfill our sacred responsibility to unborn generations, unless we use with gratitude and with restraint the generous and kindly gift of Divine Providence, we shall prove ourselves unworthy guardinns of a heritage we hold in trust.

Now therefore, I, Calvin Coolidge, President of the United States, do recommend to the governors of the various states to designate and set upart the week of April 27-May 3, 1925, as American Forest Week, and, wherever practicable and not in conflict with state law or accepted customs, to celebrate Arbor Day within that week. And I urge public officials, public and business associations, industrial leaders, forest owners, editors, educntors, and all patriotic citizens to unite in the common task of forest conservation and renewal.

In witness whereof, I have hercunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Calvin Coolidge."

There will be placed in the library during this week, two maps, furnished by the U. S. department of agriculture. These maps show the national forests, state forests, national parks, national monuments, Indian reservations and forest regions of the United States.

UNDER THE DOME AT LANSING

(Special to the Courier)

With April 10th, the date originally set for final adjournment, already passed, the lawmakers are beginning to wonder as to just when the work of the present legislative session can be brought to an end. Hopes for an early adjournment daily grow fainter as prospects of a deadlock between the senate and the house loom up more ominously. One potent source of friction between the two branches of the legislature is in connection with appropriation bills. Thus far no final agreement has been reached regarding any of the more important budget requests.

A sample of the situation is in connection with the house bill to provide $350,000 for the construction and maintenance of a fifth normal school to be located somewhere in the northern part of the lower peninsula. This bill passed the house with strong support, but the senate cannot get up much favorable enthusiasm regarding it. Consequently, about a score of representatives who regard this normal school bill as their special pet, are not in a very friendly frame of mind toward the senate. This is only a typical sample of many other similar situations.

Redistricting Up Again

Another fruitful cause of ill-feeling is in connection with the reapportionment. Despite the fact that the house has gone on record by passing a resolution to postpone indefinitely the whole subject of reapportioning the representative districts, this troublesome issue does not seem destined to lie still in its grave. Senator Elijah B. Howarth, Jr., of Royal Oak, has introduced in the senate a bill to allow Wayne 21 house members instead of the 14 which they now have. This hill has now been reported favorably hy the senate committee on apportionment and is up for general consideration. Even if it passed the senate it can not be considered in the house except under a suspension of the rules, which requires a two-thirds affirmative vote.

It is somewhat hard for the upstate members to see why the Wayne people should crave ndditional members as long as those that they already have are not taking their responsibilties very seriously. In a debate on the floor of the house during the past week Rep. John Holland of Gogebic pointed out that Wayne county delegution averaged about four members short at each daily session and one Detroit representative hadn't been present only about ten days during the entire session.

Potato Grades Adopted

Bills of direct interest to agriculture are receiving a considerable portion of the attention of the lawmakers. Senator Leland's potato grnding bill held the center of the stage in the house last Thursday morning. This measure in its final form would make the federal potato grades compulsory in Michigan, but would exempt from its provisions direct sales from producers to consumers or grocers. Several umendments which would have taken most of the teeth out of the bill and made it practically worthless were defeated and the bill was passed 78 to 13. It now goes to the governor for his signature.

Other agricultural standardization bills passed by the house during the last few days include Senator Leland's bill to decrease the number of apple grades from 7 to 4 nnd Rep. Kirby's bill providing some amendments to the present grape standards law.

Despite this apparent interest of law-mnkers in the matter of grndes and standards for farm products, they have cut down the appropriation for the enforcement of these grades from $85,000 to $25,000, and it is evident that unless this item is increased by the senate, Michigan's standards of agricultural products will be so loosely enforced that they will carry little weight and merit slight respect either on the home or out-state market.

Limit Corn Borer Fight

Another appropriation hill of particular interest to the farmers has also been pared to the bone. This is Rep. Joseph Warner's bill which in its original form would have set aside $25,000 of the state money for suppressing and controlling the Europenn eorn borer, a very destructive pest which has during the past three or four years spread rapidly in southeastern Michigan until today it is found in ten counties. If the full $25,000 had been granted the federal government would have put up between $35,000 and $50,000 to aid in repelling the invasion of this enemy which is such a serious menace to southern Michigan's chief farm crop, but the appropriation has now been cut down to $12,000 and at are of terror and despair and lonenaess. He pictured her through n grim processional of years of skimping and petty sacrifices—and all hecnuse he, John Stuart Webster, had hesitated to lend a dreamer and an idealist a paltry $40,000 without security.

No, there was no nlternative. If his friendship for Billy was worth a sou, it was worth $40,000; if his silent, uarequited love for Dolores Ruey was worthy of her, ao sacrifice on his pnrt could be too great, provided it gusrsnieed her happiness.

"Ruined again," he sighed. "This is oaly another of those irumerons occasioas when the tail goes with the hide. How soon do you want the money?"

Ricardo Luiz Ituey leaned forwarl and gazed very earnestly at John Stuart Webster. "Do you really trust me that much, my friend?" he nsked feelingly. "Remember, I am nsking you for $40,000 on faith."

"Old sport," John Stnarl Webster aaswered, "you went overboarl in Buennventura harbor and took a chance among those hig, liver-colored, hammer-headed sharks. And you did that beeause you had a cnuse you thought worth dying for. I never knew a msn who had a cause that was worth dying for who would evrn espouse a cause worth swindling for. You win—only I want you to understsad one thing, Ricarlo: I'm not doing this for the sake of saving that mining coacession the Sarros government gave my friend, Geary. I'm nbova daing a thing like this for money—for myself. It seems to me I must do it to guarantee the happiness of two people I love: My friead, Geary, aad the girl he's going to marry. I reject your promissory note and your promise of a deed of gift for that concession, and accept only your gratitude. There are no strings to this loan, because it isn't a loan at all. It's a bet. If you lose, I'll help you get out of the country and nbsolve you of any indebtedaess to me. However, if you should win, I know you'll reimburse me from the national treasury."

"And you do 'aot desire a bonus?"

"Nothing that will cost the citizens of this country one penny of their heritage. I'm going to bet this money—bet it, understand, aot loan it. However, if you want to be a sport and grant me a little favor in return, you can."

"Fire away."

"After I give you this money, I don't want the Doctor and the colonel to kiss me to show how grateful they are."

"You wonderful fellow! Jack Webster, if I had a sister I should want her to marry you."

"Show how little you'd think of your sister—staking her to a sentimental 'jackass. Shall I cable the money to New Orleans in the morning?"

"That will do very nicely."

"To whom shall I cable this money?"

"Send it to the Picayune National Bank of New Orleans, with instructions to credit account No. 246, J. E. P., trustee. In this little game we are playing, my friend, it is safer to deal in numbers and initials rather than names. The local cable office leaks quite regularly."

"Very well, Ricardo. I'll attend to it first thing in the morning. Go to it and win, or there'll be several new faces whining around the devil, not the least of which will be mine. When you charge, remember you're charging for my $40,000—and go through with it. I worked rather hard for that $40,000, and if I must lose it, I do not want to do it in a half-hearted fight. Give me, at least, a run for my money. I'll have a reserved seat somewhere watching the game."

"If you'll take my advice, you'll go aboard La Estrella and stay there until the issue is decided. When the first gun is fired, it signals the open season on mining engineers who butt in on affairs of state."

"What! And me with a healthy bet down on the result! I hope I'm a better sport than that."

"You're incorrigible. Be careful, then, and don't get yourself spotted by a stray bullet."

"Shall I see you fellows before the blow-off?"

"I scarcely think so."

"Then if you're through with me, I'll bid you all good-by and good luck. I'll have dinner with you in the palace Sunday evening."

"Taken."

"May I bring a guest?"

"By all means."

Webster shook hands with the trio and departed for his hotel. For the first time in many years he was heavy of heart, crushed. "Neddy Jerome was right," he soliloquized. "This is the last place on earth for me to have come to. I've made Neddy sore on me, and he's lost patience and put another man in the job he promised me; I've raised Billy's hopes sky-high and had to bet $40,000 to keep them there; I've been fool enough to fall in love with my friend's fiancee; I'm a human cat's paw, and the finest thing I can do now is to go out next Sunday morning with that machine gun company from Leber's warehouse and get killed."

this lower level passed the house 96 to 0, and been sent to the senate.

The M. A. C. appropriation bills for new buildings, maintenance and agricultural extension work have passed the house and are now being considered in the senate. The college requests for maintenanee and extensions funds were cut practically in half. If the bill passes the senate in this form it will mesn curtailing extension work and abandoning county agent, boy's and girl's club and extension activities in several counties.

Defeat Pay Boost

Not following in the footsteps of the congressmen who recently increased their own pay, the bouse defeated Rep. Palmer's resolation which would have submitted to the electors a coastitutional amendment iacreasing the pay of the legislators from $800 to $1,800. Tha voto was 57 for to 34 against, but inasmuch as this was a proposed constitutional amendment it required a two-thirds vote, or 67 yeas.

Probably there can be little question but that the preseat amount of $800 for a two year term is wholly inadequate to cover the expenses of a primary and final election campaign and four months time and living expenses during the regular biennial aession. However, probably many of the members thought that the increase was a little too great, and no doubt others were fearful as to what the folks back home would have to say about it. However, after the defeat of the resolution, the vote was reconsidered and the matter laid on the table so that it may be revived before the end of the session.

With only two votes to spare, the house passed Rep. Turner's bill to prohibit secret societies or fraternities in high schools. This proposal provoked considerable debate pro and con, but it finally prevailed 53 to 35.

Because of its effect on the co-operative movement in Michigan, probably no bill passed at the present session of the legislature is of greater importance to the farmers than Rep. Wm. Thomas' bill to exempt producers' co-operative organizations from the provisions of the Michigan anti-trust law. This bill has now gone to the governor for his approval.

New Income Tax Scheme

An income tax suggestion having much apparent merit has been introduced in the senate by Senator Harvey Penney of Saginaw. It is in the form of a resolution requesting the Michigsn delegation in congress to work for a modification of the federal income tax law so that hslf of the amount collected in each state would be returned to it and go into the state treasury. The presumption is that the federal income tax would be doubled in rates, so that after returning 50 per cent to the states, the national government would have just as much as at present. It is pointed out that such an arrangement would minimize the expense of collection, prevent duplication and avoid the confusion which would result from two separate income taxes which might have different rates, exemptions and deductions.

William Jennings Bryan would have been right in his element if he could have been in the legislature Thursday, April 9. Everywhere hottles of grape juice were being tipped back and drained greedily by thirsty law-makers. There was a reason. The prohibition drink was furnished by the Co-operative Associations of Van Buren county, the stronghold of Michigan grape production.

It was an interesting and significant moment when the house paused in its deliberations while Rep. Clancy of Hillsdale county introduced young Coe Emens, Jr., of Prattville, boy's and girl's sheep and calf club member and national health champion. Rep. Clancy declared, "We are proud of the splendid products of Michigan and especially of our greatest asset, our boys and girls. I am honored to present to you a national figure, the Health Champion of the United States, Coe F. Emens." The boy received a real ovation from the representatives.

The so-called long bed sheet bill, sponsored by Rep. Cora Anderson, lady member of the house, has been the butt of much good natured merriment. It forbids the use of quilts or comforts in hotels and requires that sheets be at least 99 inches in length, so that they may be well tucked in at the bottom and turned down over the other bedding at the top. Perhaps because of a spirit of chivalry toward their feminine member, but probably largely from the standpoint of sanitsry consideration, the house passed the bill 63 to 21.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

By B. C. Mellencamp

I am desirous of organizing several boy's and girl's clubs in the county this spring and ask your cooperation and assistance. You no doubt remember the Pig Club that was organized two years ago and made up of over 20 boys and girls each of whom got a registered pig. Several of those members today have a mighty good start in the pig business and have made excellent profits. I am very sure you are interested in your boy or girl and would be glad to aid them in their development and training. This club work is your best chance. It affords them pleasure and satisfaction in owning something of their own. It shows them the correct farm practices to follow. It will create an interest in the farm. Give your boy or girl a partnership in your business, you will never regret of so doing.

Last fall n Calf Club was organized with 14 members, and we would like to increase the membership to about 20. It is open to any boy or girl between the ages of 10 to 20, inclusive. They can have their choice of a Jersey, Guernsey or Holstein, grade or purebred, and any age they wish. They will exhibit at the County Fair in the fall and attractive premiums will be offered.

Also wnnt to organize a Bean Club. Ages of from 12 to 20. Between ages 12 to 15 inclusive, they must plnnt not less than ½ acre. Ages over not less thnn 1 acre. GET AT THE CAUSE!

Many Charlevoix Folks Are Showing How to Avoid Needless Suffering.

There's nothing more annoying than kidney weakness or inability to properly control the kidney secretions. Night and day alike, the sufferer is tormented and what with the burning and scalding, the attendant backache, headache and dizziness, life is indeed a burden. Doan's Pills—a stimulnnt diuretic to the kidneys—have brought peace and comfort to many Charlevoix people. Profit by this Charlevoix resident's experience:

Mrs. H. H. Fales, 110 Robinson St., says: "I had a dull ache through the small of my back and when I tried to do anything around the house that required stooping, cutting pains darted across my kidneys. Then as time passed, my eyes were blurred with little, flickering specks. At first my kidneys were weak and then they became sluggish and failed to act often enough. Two boxes of Doan's Pills were all I needed to rid me of the trouble."

POOR SHOWING ON WHEAT CROP

OUTLOOK IS DISCOURAGING IN CENTRAL STATES

Other Crops Make Average Showing and About Same Average as Last Year

The nation's growing wheat crop offered the poorest prospect on April 1 of any year except that of 1917. The condition is 68.7 per cent as compared with 83 per cent last year. This condition represents a production of 474,255,000 bushels, which is 116,000,000 less than raised in 1924. The outlook is the most discouraging in the southern portions of Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois, and over a large portion of the southwest states of the wheat belt. The condition is much better in the northern tier of states.

In Michigan, the crop came through the winter with very little injury, and the spring has been generally favorable. There were only scattering reports of damage from freezing and thawing during March, these being mostly in the northwestern counties of the lower peninsula. While the top growth was less than normal last fall, the plants are alive and in good condition for growth if sufficient moisture is received. The monthly report issued by L. Whitney Watkins, commissioner of agriculture and Verne H. Church, U. S. agricultural statistician, shows the state's average condition to be 85 per cent, one per cent below last year and one per cent above the ten-year average. Michigan farmers are to be congratulated upon this satisfactory condition when the general prospects in other portions of the country are so far below normal.

The condition of rye in Michigan is rated at 87 per cent, two points below that of one year ago and one point below the ten-year average. As is usual in most years, the condition averages slightly higher than that of wheat. At the date of report, rain is needed but the outlook is generally good from every standpoint, except in a very few local areas.

For the entire country, the crop shows a condition of 84 per cent which is about the same as it was one year ago but nearly four per cent below the average. Interpreting this condition figure, a crop of 61,652,000 bushels will be harvested if conditions remain normal throughout the remainder of the growing season. This would be about two millions less than produced last year.

The inquiry relative to pasture is rather early for Michigan, but shows a prevailing condition of 80 per cent. The average for all states combined is 85.5 per cent.

Farm wages are slowly reaching a lower level in Michigan. Monthly wages with board average $40 as compared with $43.20, and without board, $53 as compared with $58.60 last year. For the country as a whole, the average with board is $33.97 and without board, $47.58, there being practically no change from those paid one year ago. The demand for farm labor has increased during the past year from 79 to 83 per cent of normal, and the supply from 67 to 87 per cent of normal in Michigan, the present ratio of supply to demand being 105 per cent as compared with 85 per cent on April 1, 1924.

For the United States, the labor supply averages 89.5 and the demand, 90.7 of normal, a ratio of 98.7 per cent.

REV. PAYNE IS A REAL HE-PREACHER

Appears in Rostrum with Spurs, Gat and Cartridge Belt

Rev. Joe J. Payne, the cowboy preacher, who for many years has been conducting successful evangelistic campaigns throughout the nation, opened his special services at the Parr Memorial Baptist church, last Sunday. He will be in Petoskey until May 3rd, holding services every night in the week except Saturday at 7:30 o'clock.

The Rev. Payne was born in Texas. He was a cowboy for 17 years, 4 years a Texas ranger, 17 months with Buffalo Bill's wild west show and seven month with the 101 Ranch (Miller Bros. Show). He has traveled all over the world and has had some hair raising experiences, such as getting shot and carved up by Mexican greasers, trailing negro murderers and performing all sorts of terrifying stunts on the backs of untamed broncbos. He is also a dead shot with rifle or revolver. He lost his father, mother, brother and four sisters in the Galveston flood of September 8, 1900, and it was this terrible misfortune that turned his mind to serving humanity in the ministry. He appears on the platform each night in full cowboy regalia, with chaps, spurs, frilled hunting shirt, wicked looking gat and cartridge belt.

AT THE MOVIES

Egypt of the countless centuries, lulled by the Nile, the land of the Pharaohs and the minaretted tombs of Caliphs, the land of mystery and romance, is the intriguing background of Priscilla Dean's new Hunt Stromberg feature for Producers' Distributing Corporation, which will open at the Palace Thentre next Saturday and Sunday, April 18-19.

"A Cafe in Cairo" is the interesting title of this new offering in which "The Fiery One" is starred, and if all advance reports may be believed, it should be one of the most interesting things she has yet done.

If cast and the past achievements of author and director can be relied upon as any kind of a criterion, then "The Wise Virgin," an Elmer Harris production which comes to the Palace Thentre next Tuesday and Wednesday should be a "whiz bang" of a picture.

The cast is headed by Patsy Ruth Miller and Matt Moore and these names alone guarantee good acting. No finer performances have been recarded on the screen than those Miss Miller gave as Esmeralda in "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" and as Charles Ray's girlish sweetheart in "The Girl I Loved." And who can forget Moore in "Strangers of the Night," that delicious comedy made from the stage play, "Captain Applejack"?

YOUNG SAMSON knows what he's aiming at---a bottle of our rich, creamy milk. It's a ringer every time, and the prize is health.

EDWARDS NOW IN FLOWER BUSINESS

HILLCREST GARDENS TAKES ON A NEW LINE

Two Greenhouses Are in Use and Two More Will Be Built Next Fall

The well-known firm of A. E. Edwards & Sons, truck farmers and proprietors of the Hillcrest Gardens on May street, have launched out this spring into the production of flowers and the raising of potted plants, bulbs, etc., for the local trade, in addition to their regular line of vegetables and small fruits.

Their program calls for a greenhouse business of large proportions. Two units of their plant—one, 100 feet by 18 feet, and the other 70 feet by 16 feet—are already completed and in use and they now have a considerable variety of flowers and bulbs under glass. This spring and summer a large portion of the thirty acres which is comprised in the Gardens tract will be devoted to flower raising and the services of an expert horticulturist have been secured for the care of this department of their business. In the fall, two additional greenhouse units of latest type—each 100 feet by 29 feet in dimension according to present plans and possibly larger if found necessary—will be built to take care of the winter business and the storing of house plants for our summer visitors and those of the townspeople who leave Charlevoix in the winter season. All kinds of cut flowers, potted plants and bulbs will be carried in stock throughout the year and special attention will be given to the preparation of funeral floral designs, wreaths, pillows, etc.

Mr. Edwards states that sufficient capital is available for as rapid expansion as the business warrants. His long experience as a gardner, commencing many years ago in England, supplemented by his thirty years of farming (the last twelve of which have been spent by himself and his sons in the intensive production of vegetables and small fruits) eminently qualifies him to engage in the kindred profession of horticulture and is a strong guarantee of his future success.

Hand in hand with the development of the greenhouse business will go a general alteration of the Gardens tract with a view of making it one of the show places and beauty spots of the community. New driveways will be laid out, flower beds located at various strategic points and other improvements made to harmonize with the character of the new venture.

The demand for flowers and plants in Charlevoix is not exceeded by that of any other resort town in this region. It is with extreme gratification that we learn that this demand is to be supplied by local enterprise, especially by those whose labors have already contributed so largely to the upbuilding and prosperity of the community.

AUCTION SALES OF IMPORTANCE COMING EVENTS

This week's issue of the Courier contains three auction sales, two of which are of more than usual in character. The annual spring stock sale at the Loeb Farms is booked for Tuesday, April 28th. This sale draws buyers of purebred stock from long distances, and without doubt this year's event will attract the usual number of buyers. The auction sale of household goods on May 2 will be the largest ever conducted in the city, and the articles offered are of exceptional value. The sales by dates are as follows:

Tuesday, April 28

Annual spring stock sale at the Loeb Farms commencing at 1:00 p. m. Some thirty head of purebred stock will be sold under the hammer. Read the adv. on page 3.

Wednesday, April 29

Another one o'clock sale at the farm home of H. G. Schleffel, on the old John Brown place, just south of the Maple Grove school house in Hayes township. Read the adv. on page 3.

Saturday, May 2

The adv. which appears on page six contains the largest number of articles offered for sale so far printed at one time. A goodly portion of the furniture is new and should sell fast. The sale starts at 10 a. m. The ladies of the M. E. church will serve a 25c lunch at noon. W. E. Byers will cry all sales.

Immediately after the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Shaw left for Traverse City, where the groom has employment.

NEW FOLDER IS A WORK OF ART

TWELVE PAGES PACKED FULL OF BEAUTY

Product of Lithographer's Art Designed to Supplement City's Advertising

The Charlevoix Commercial Association has just received from the printer the first consignment of its new twelve-page, lithographed, three-color folder, setting forth the advantages of Charlevoix as a summer playground, to be used as supplemental literature to the big booklet put out each year.

The reading matter and accompanying illustrations are divided into nine sections, one section to a page, with the exception of fishing, which takes up two pages in the center of the outside pages with a fine cut of the prize rainbow trout caught last year off the railroad bridge by the bridge tender, Mr. Webster, and displayed for some time in the windows of Wood Brothers Electric & Hardware Shop.

The front outside cover, as the folder lies folded carries an entrancing scene along the bridle path in the city park on Lake Michigan in three colors and on the back page a similarly tinted view of Old River. A page of general information and a description of motoring delights with an exceptionally fine cut of Lake Michigan from the auto park drive completes the outside pages of the folder.

The six inside sections are devoted to bathing, boating, horseback riding, golfing, tennis and playgrounds, each with its appropriate illustration in lithotone black. Take it all in all, a very attractive little representative to advertise the most beautiful resort city of the north country, as you will see and agree when a copy comes to your hands.

ANOTHER WALLOP AT MR. PHEASANT

C. L. STOTT OF CENTRAL LAKE SAYS "THUMBS DOWN"

Claims Bird Has Too Great a Liking for Corn on Cob and Small Game

Here's another phase of the ring-necked pheasant question, presented by C. L. Stott of Central Lake, route one. This is good—keep her up, boys — we'll soon have evidence enough against this bird to hang him or else turn him loose with a clean bill of health. Here goes:

"Editor Courier:

I am not much of a writer and do not know much about the ring-necked phessant, but I do know that they are good at picking corn off the cob when the corn is standing in the field or in the shock.

In the winter of 1923, my boy had a few traps set and at 9 o'clock one night we heard a pheasant and thought someone was after him, but when my boy looked at his traps the next morning, he found a lot of pheasant tracks around one of the traps and about two-thirds of a rabbit in the trap. Apparently, the other third had fed Mr. Phessant. If they will do that at night, I do not see why they will not destroy small birds and other game as well. I think the state would do better for the farmer if they would ship in some quail and keep a closed season on them.

Respectfully yours,
C. L. Stott."

Well well, it does seem as if Mr. R. N. Pheasant had an awful smelly reputation around this part of the country. In fact, we haven't heard a word yet in his favor. Has he no backers at all? Well, if so we want to know it so let's hear from another reader on this subject. Possibly some of the folks mentioned by Mr. Newman as having had dealings with the critter would like to corroborate his statements.

Seriously speaking though, folks, this question of the ring-necked pheasant is a mighty important one for the farmers in Michigan. If this bird is really a menace to crops to a greater extent than to insect life the sooner it is established as a proven fact the better for all of us. Theories about anything sometimes conflict with the facts, but the latter must always prevail.

BRIDGE CLUB LADIES ENTERTAINED

Covers Laid for Twelve at Shores Home Wednesday

The fortnightly bridge club was delightfully entertained last Wednesday at a luncheon given by Mrs. J. B. Redpath at the home of Mrs. N. A. Shores on the north side.

The table was lovely with sweet peas and ferns and May basket favors carried out the idea of spring. Covers were laid for twelve, the guests including Mesdames Henry Partridge, P. D. Campbell, Jr., Clinton Cooper, Robert Bonthron, Rollie L. Lewis, Walter Richardson, Clare Webster, Lee Smith, Enrl Young, Lisle Shanahan, J. B. Redpath and T. B. Dimmick. The first prize was won by Mrs. Webster.

The Bluebirds of the M. E. church will give a bake sale Saturday, April 25th, Brown's store.—Adv. 16-t1 pd.

DICKENS CLUB HELD BANQUET

HOTEL HALLETT WAS OPENED FOR OCCASION

Fine Meal Followed by an Attractive Program, Including Musical Numbers

On Thursday evening, April 16th, the Hotel Hallett was the scene of the annual banquet of the Charlevoix Dickens club.

The hotel was especially opened for the occasion and the interior tastily decorated in the club colors. On the two long tables in the dining room, at which the guests were seated, were placed large bowls of daffodils, giving an effect of the spring season. At each place were dainty, hand-painted place cards, painted by Mrs. F. J. Fessenden.

The president, Mrs. R. W. Faulkner, conducted the program, which was carried on between the courses of the dinner by cleverly announcing each number.

The program was as follows:

Vocal solo, "E'en as the Flower" and, as an encore, "Tiptoe," by Mrs. Archie Livingston.

Instrumental solo, Rachmaninoff's Prelude in C Minor, by Mrs. Ralph Dimmick.

Vocal solo, Dr. Frank H. Wilkinson.

Reading, "The Littlest Rebel," by Mrs. M. H. Rose.

The program and dinner were followed by the entire company solving a huge crossword puzzle, which cleverly contained the names of several of the guests of the evening.

The evening was made especially pleasant by the presence of Mrs. T. G. Finucan, of Grand Rapids, a former member of the club.

LEAGUE TO HOLD "CHEST" CLINIC

County's T. B. Deaths in Last Ten Years Total 124

The league is planning a "chest" clinic to be held in the county, probably in Charlevoix, some time next month. Any persons who suspect themselves to be victims of this malady, in either the incipient or more advanced stages, will be allowed a free examination. Dates of the clinic will be announced later.

WALLOON LAKE SCHOOL DAMAGED

Fire in Basement Quickly Handled by Volunteers

The fact that men of the Walloon Lake region were generously assisting a neighbor and friend in the construction of a new home to replace one destroyed by fire is believed to have saved the Walloon Lake school building from destruction on Wednesday of last week. About 45 men were at work on the new house at the Charles Hass farm when a fire alarm was sent in by telephone. They hurried in automobiles the one and one-half miles to the school, arriving in time to prevent heavy damage.

Fire started in the furnace room and was burning in the floor when the men arrived. They removed the books and furniture and chopped holes through the floor to get at the flames with water from the school well. The loss is estimated at about $500 and is covered by insurance.

The school is a two-room structure with modern heating plant and equipment. It is located in a large grove just south of the village of Walloon Lake.

MONT WITHERS PLANS A SECOND JUILLERET'S

Will Remodel Unused Store Next to His Restaurant for Cabaret Dance

Mont Withers is remodeling the store building adjacent to his restaurant on Bridge street and formerly occupied by the Little French Novelty Shop and will convert this space into a cabaret dance floor, similar to the very successful affair of this kind operated by Juilleret's in Harbor Springs.

The floor of this building is being overlaid with a splendid maple flooring, cut in foot length pieces. When planed and sandpapered, this will present an unexcelled surface for dancing purposes about 50 feet by 22 feet in dimensions. An archway will be cut through on the south wall of the building into the present restaurant and small tables will line both sides of the room. The work of remodeling is now going on and Mr. Withers expects to have his new annex ready for business by the middle of May. A mechanical piano or phonograph will furnish the music.

This kind of a place fills a long felt want among our summer people and townspeople as well. While no one who has ever been in Charlevoix has expressed other than appreciation of its wonderful natural beauties and resources, the criticism has often been made that amusement and entertainment facilities were lacking. The present generation of young people (and, we may as well include their older brothers and sisters) are dance lovers. They are accustomed to the cabaret dance in the cities from which they come and naturally miss it while here. They like to go somewhere to eat a light luncheon, listen to good music and dance once in a while. The popularity achieved by Juilleret's and similar places attests this fact. We are glad that someone has had the foresight and the courage to provide the lacking element in our summer entertainment program and predict that he will find it a highly successful venture.

CATS SMOTHERED IN SMOKY ROOMS

FIRE AT WOOLEY RESIDENCE A MEAN ONE

Principal Damage Done by Heat and Immense Volume of Thick Smoke

Last Friday there occurred two fires—one in the morning at the home of Theodore DeBoer on the north side, a slight roof fire, doing little damage and a more serious one in the afternoon at the home of Percy R. Wooley on East Lincoln avenue.

Mrs. Wooley was out at the time the fire started, attending the funeral of the late Mrs. Paul Heise. When she returned from the funeral she opened the front door and was driven back by the rush of smoke that poured from the opening. She turned in the alarm at once and the department responded with its usual promptness and discovered one of the hottest and smokiest fires that has occurred in a long time in this city. Evidently, according to the fire chief, some box or other inflammable material had been resting against the clean-out plug in the basement end of the chimney and had been ignited from the heat of this metal plug, the soot in the lower part of the chimney having burned out. The flames worked their way up a wooden partition in the basement and up through the kitchen wall, burning out completely the china closet containing nearly all of Mrs. Wooley's dishes and causing both cupboard and contents to fall crashing to the cellar beneath. So great was the heat that the varnish on the woodwork and furniture was blistered, although little damage outside of the destruction of the cupboard was done by the flames. Nothing but the chemical engine was used to extinguish the fire.

One peculiar incident of this fire was the death of two pet cats who had been left shut up in the house during the absence of their mistress and were found lying suffocated on the floor when the firemen entered. One of the cats had crawled into one of the front rooms, as far away from the fire as she could get but so thick was the smoke that her efforts to escape were useless. Young McParland, who delivers for Milton Block, entered the kitchen with groceries a short time before the fire alarm was turned in and while there smelled smoke. He looked around the rooms but could discover nothing apparently wrong and laid it to a cake or pie in the oven burning, supposing that someone was in the house. He reported his experience on his return to the store and shortly thereafter the alarm sounded.

MAY FIRST SET ASIDE AS ARBOR DAY

In view of the especial effort of Michigan's conservation department and other agencies to create new forests where they once flourished, additional emphasis is this year given to Arbor Day. The one purpose of the observance is to create as much interest as possible in the extreme necessity of tree planting. Human existence to a very great extent depends upon our wood covered land. We should never overlook an opportunity to plant trees of all kinds and restore as far as possible the forests of a generation ago.

Therefore I, Alex. J. Groesbeck, as governor of Michigan, designate Friday, May 1, 1925, as Arbor Day and strongly urge that every community in the state take some part in fulfilling the intent for which the day has been set aside.

CHAPTER XIV.

The following morning Webster informed Dolores fully of his interview with her brother and his confreres the night before, concealing from her only the fact that he was financing the revolution and his reasons for financing it. He was still depressed, and Dolores, observing his mood, forbore to intrude upon it. Accordingly she claimed the prerogative of her sex—a slight headache—and retreated to her room, in the privacy of which she was suddenly very much surprised to find herself weeping softly because John Stuart Webster was unhappy and didn't deserve to be.

It was impossible, however, for Webster long to remain impervious to the note of ridiculousness underlying the forthcoming tragic events. Here was a little 2x4 poverty-stricken hotbed of ignorance and intrigue calling itself a republic, a little stretch of country no larger than a couple of big western counties, about to indulge in the national pastime of civil war and unable to do it except by grace of an humble citizen of a sister republic!

Five or six thousand ignorant, ill-equipped, ill-drilled semi-brigands calling themselves soldiers, entrusted with the task of enabling one of their number to ride, horse and dog, over 1,000,000 people!

How farcical! No wonder Ricardo, with his northern viewpoint, approached his patriotic task with gayety, almost with contempt. And when Webster recalled that the about-to-be-born provisional government had casually borrowed from him the sum of forty thousand dollars in order to turn the trick—borrowing it, forsooth, in much the same spirit as a commuter hoarding his train without the necessary fare hails a neighbor and borrows ten cents—his natural optimism asserted itself and he chuckled as in fancy he heard himself telling the story to Neddy Jerome and being branded a liar for his pains.

"Well, I've had one comfort ever since I first saw that girl," he reflected philosophically. "While I've never been so unhappy in all my life before, or had to tear my soul out by the roots so often, things have been coming my way so fast from other directions that I haven't had much opportunity to dwell on the matter. And for these compensating offsets, good Lord, I thank Thee."

He was John Stuart Webster again when Dolores saw him next; during the succeeding days his mood of cheerfulness and devil-may-care indifference never left him. And throughout that period of marking time Dolores was much in his society, a condition which he told himself was not to his liking but which, nevertheless, he could not obviate without seeming indifferent to her happiness. And to permit his friend's fiancee to languish in loneliness and heart-break did not appear to John Stuart Webster as the part of a true friend or a courtly gentleman—and he remembered that she had once called him that.

They rode together in the cool of the morning; they drove together on the Malecon in the cool of the evening; chaperoned by Don Juan Cafetero and a grinning Sobrantean, they went shark fishing in Leber's launch; they played dominoes together; they discussed, throughout the long, lazy, quiet afternoons, when the remainder of their world retired for the siesta, books, art, men, women, and things.

And not once, throughout two weeks of camaraderie, did the heart-racked Webster forget for a single instant that he was the new friend, destined to become the old friend; never, to the girl's watchful eyes, did he betray the slightest disposition to establish their friendly relations on a closer basis.

Thus did the arrival of The Day find them. Toward sunset they rode out together along the bay shore and noted far out to sea the smear of smoke that marked the approach of La Estrellita—on schedule time.

"You will go aboard her tonight," Webster said very quietly to Dolores.

"And you?"

"I shall go aboard with you. I have arranged with Don Juan for him to stay ashore and to come out in Leber's launch with the first reliable news of the conflict. If Ricardo wins the city, he wins the revolution, and you and I will then go ashore—to dine with him in the palace. If he loses the city, he loses the revolution, and we will both do well to remain aboard La Estrellita."

"And in that event, what will become of my brother?"

"I do not know; I forgot to ask him, but if he survives, I imagine he'll have sense enough to know he's whipped and will retreat on San Bruno, fighting a rear guard action, embark aboard the steamer that brought his men there, and escape."

"I'm worried about Mother Jenks."

"I have asked Mother Jenks to dine with us at 7:30 this evening, and have ordered a carriage to call for her. When she comes I'll tell her everything; then, if she wishes to stay ashore, let her. She's been through more than one such fracas and doesn't mind them at all, I dare say."

And in this Webster was right. Mother Jenks listened in profound silence, nodding her approval, as Webster related to her the story of the advent in the country of Ricardo Ruey and his plans, but without revealing the identity of Andrew Bowers.

At the conclusion of his recital the old publican merely said: "Gor' bli' me!"

After a silence she added: "My sainted 'Enery used to s'y the proper hodds for a white man in a hally row o' this nature was 40 to 1. Gor', but how my sainted 'Enery would benjoy boin' 'ere this night to 'elp with the guns." She sighed.

"How about a little bottle of wine to drink peace to your sainted Henry and luck to The Cause?" Webster suggested.

"That's wot I calls talkin'," Mother Jenks responded promptly, and Webster, gazing reflectively at the old lady's beard, wondered why she had not been born a man.

Dolores, fearful for her benefactor's safety, urged Mother Jenks to accompany them out aboard La Estrellita, but the old dame indignantly refused, and when pressed for a reason gave it with the utmost frankness: "They'll be tykin' Sarros, an' when they tyke 'im they'll back him eg'in the same wall be backed my sainted 'Enery and your father against, my dear. I've a notion that your father's son'll let Mrs. Col. 'Enery Jenks come to the party."

At 10 o'clock Webster accompanied Mother Jenks home in the carriage, which he dismissed at El Buen Amigo—with instructions to return to the hotel while he continued afoot down the Calle San Rosario to the bay, where Leber's huge corrugated iron warehouse loomed darkly above high water mark. He slipped along in the deep shadow of the warehouse wall and out on the end of the little dock, where he satisfied himself that Leber's launch was at its moorings; then he went back to the warehouse and whistled softly, whereupon a man crawled out from under the structure and approached him. It was Don Juan Cafetero.

"They're all inside," he whispered and laid finger on lip. "They got in half an hour ago, an' divil a sowl the wiser, save meself."

"Thank you, John. Now that I know the coast is clear and the launch ready, I'll go back to the hotel for Miss Ruey."

"Very well, sor," Don Juan replied, and crawled back under the warehouse.

Half an hour later the sound of hoof beats warned him of the approach of Webster and Dolores in a carriage, and he came forth, loaded in the launch such baggage as they had been enabled to bring, and held the gunwale of the boat while his passengers stepped aboard.

About a half a mile off shore Webster throttled down the motor until the launch barely made steerage way. "It would never do to go aboard the steamer before the fracas started ashore," he explained to Dolores. "That would indicate a guilty knowledge of coming events, and in the event of disaster to the rebel arms it is just possible Senor Sarros might have pull enough, if he hears of our flight six hours in advance of hostilities, to take us off the steamer and ask us to explain. So we'll just cruise slowly around and listen; the attack will come just before dawn; then shortly thereafter we can scurry out to the steamer and be welcomed aboard for the sake of the news we bring."

She did not answer, and Webster knew her thoughts were out where the arc lights on the outskirts of Buenaventura met the open country—out where the brother she could scarcely remember and whom, until a month previous, she had believed dead, would shortly muster his not too numerous followers.

In the darkness Webster could hear the click of her beads as she prayed; on the turtle deck forward Don Juan Cafetero sprawled, thinking perchance of his unlovely past and wondering what effect the events shortly to transpire ashore would have on his future. He wished Webster would relent and offer him a drink some time within the next twenty-four hours. In times of excitement like the present a man needs a drop to brace him up.

Five times the launch slipped lazily down the harbor along the straggling two mile water front; five times it loafed back. The moon, which was in the first quarter, sank. Then to Webster's alert ear there floated across the still waters the sound of a gentle purring—the music of an auto-truck. He set the launch in toward Leber's little dock, and presently they saw the door of Leber's warehouse open. Men with lanterns streamed forth, lighting the way for others who bore between them heavy burdens.

"They're emplacing the machine guns in the motor-truck," he whispered to Dolores. "We will not have to wait long now. It's nearly 4 o'clock."

Again they backed out into the bay until they could see far out over the sleeping city to the hills beyond in the west. Presently along the side of those hills the headlight of a locomotive crept, dropping swiftly down grade until it disappeared in the lowlands.

A half hour passed; then to the south of the city a rocket flared skyward; almost instantly another flared from the west, followed presently by a murmur, scarcely audible, as of a muffled snare drum, punctuated presently by a louder, sharper, insistent puck-puck-puck that, had Webster but known it, was the bark of a Maxim-Vickers rapid-fire gun throwing a stream of shells into the cantonments of the government troops on the fringe of the city.

Webster's pulse quickened. "There goes the artillery to the south, sor," Don Juan called, and even as he spoke, a shell burst gloriously over the government palace, the white walls of which were already looming over the remainder of the city, now faintly visible in the approaching dawn.

"That was to awaken our friend, Sarros," Webster cried. "I'll bet a buffalo nickel that woke the old horse thief up. There's another—and another."

MRS. SCHROEDER DEAD IN WEST

Former Charlevoix Resident a Victim of Heart Trouble

News reaches us this week of the death of Mrs. Charles Schroeder, which occurred at her home, 4722 St. Charles Place, Los Angeles, California, on March 30th, due to hardening of the arteries.

Mrs. Schroeder was formerly Mrs. Ed E. Newman of Charlevoix and lived here for many years, having been educated in the local public schools. She was nearly 54 years of age at the time of her death, having been born on July 13, 1871. She is survived by her husband, Charles Schroeder of Los Angeles; three sons, Ivan F. Newman of Los Angeles; E. R. Soper of Holland, Mich., and R. E. VanRy of Manila, P. I. There is one daughter, Mrs. Hale Studebaker of Corina, California and two brothers: W. E. Richardson of Norwood and Walter Monty of Petoskey.

AT THE MOVIES

Harry Myers, one of the screen's foremost comedy figures, has a leading role in "Reckless Romance," the screen version of the popular stage success "What's Your Wife Doing?", which will be shown at the Palace Theatre next Saturday and Sunday.

"Reckless Romance" is his first appearance under the Al Christie banner and he puts over some riotiously funny tricks as the husband who drags his old grandfather around in a futile effort to obtain divorce evidence. T. Roy Barnes, Wanda Hawley, Sylvia Breamer and Tully Marshall are also in the cast.

Cissy Fitzgerald, who is playing the role of a former burlesque queen in "Cornered," the screen adaptation of the Broadway hit of the same name, had considerable difficulty acquiring the hour glass figure the role required.

After a considerable amount of trouble she managed to dig up a corset that was the latest thing thirty years ago, with the aid of three maids, managed to get into it, thereby acquiring the perfect curves admired when father was a boy.

Marie Prevost has a "double role" in this mystery play scheduled for a two day's appearance at the Palace Theatre next Tuesday and Wednesday. Others in the east are Rockcliffe Fellows, Raymond Hatton, John Roche, Cissy Fitzgerald, Vera Lewis, Fred Kelcey and others.

McColl's Velvet Ice Cream now on sale at the Northern Creamery Co., 105 Clinton street.—Adv. 15-t3.

Roy Barnes, Wanda Hawley, Harry Myers, Tully Marshall, Slyvia Breamer, Jack Duffy and others. Oh boy! Was there ever such a grand array of fun-makers? "CORNERED." Greatest mystery play of the time; most thrilling mystery picture of the year. With Marie Prevost and an all-star cast including John Roche, Raymond Hatton, Rockcliffe Fellows, Cissy Fitzgerald and others, in a drama that thrills from start to finish. A picture of the unusual kind. Also another one of the GO-GETTERS.

UNDER THE DOME AT LANSING

(Special to the Courier)

Overshadowing all other issues, the question of reapportionment of representative and senatorial districts is monopolizing the center of the stage under the capitol dome at Lansing. When the house a few weeks ago voted to indefinitely postpone further consideration of the reapportionment bill, it was commonly supposed that the subject of reapportionment was dead in so far as the present session was concerned.

However, the champions of legislative redistricting saw another opportunity to revive the issue. Senator Elijah B. Howarth, Jr., of Royal Oak, introduced a bill in the senate providing 21 Wayne county representatives, an addition of 7 seats over Wayne's present allotment. The Howarth bill was speeded through the senate and adopted by a vote of 26 to 5, being opposed by Senator Butler, B. L. Case, Cummings, Herrick and Horton. It has now been transferred to the house where, it is prophesied that it will be considered favorably.

One important leverage which is being used to good advantage in winning the votes of many up-state members for reapportionment, is their desire for the passage of the Bryant bill for a fifth state normal school to be located somewhere in one of thirty northern counties. This bill is the particular pet of many up-state members and the fact that it is being held up by the senate is said to be a most effective club in gaining house votes for redistricting.

Here is the Proposal

The Howarth reapportionment bill as passed by the senate gives Wayne county 21 representatives, allows 5 to Kent, 3 each for Genesee and Saginaw, and 2 each for Bay, Berrien, Calhoun, Houghton, Ingham, Jackson, Kalamazoo, Muskegon, Oakland and St. Clair.

The following counties would have one representative each: Allegan, Barry, Branch, Cass, Chippewa, Clinton, Delta, Dickinson, Eaton, Gogebic, Grand Traverse, Gratiot, Hillsdale, Huron, Ionia, Iron, Isabella, Lapeer, Macomb, Manistee, Mason, Menominee, Monroe, Montcalm, St. Joseph, Sanilac, Tuscola, Van Buren, Washtenaw, Lenawee, Ottawa, Marquette, Livingston and Shiawassee.

The more sparsely settled counties would be grouped into the following districts, each of which would have one representative: Oceana and Newaygo, Osceola and Clare, Gladwin and Midland, Ogemaw, Iosco and Arenac, Alpena and Alcona, Montmorency, Presque Isle, Oscoda, Crawford and Roscommon, Kalkaska, Antrim and Missaukee, Wexford and Benzie, Leelanau and Charlevoix, Emmet and Mackinac, Cheboygan and Otsego, Alger, Schoolcraft and Luce, Ontonagon, Keeweenaw and Baraga, Lake and Mecosta.

One of the interesting and somewhat unexpected developments of the past week was the passage through the house, by a vote of 57 to 24, of Senator Horton's bill changing the name of the Michigan Agricultural College to the Michigan State College of Agriculture and Applied Science. There was no debate on this bill but when the vote was announced, prolonged cheering broke loose indicating that the members had been worked up to a high pitch over this issue.

Students Invade Capitol

Students of the college hailed the passage of the name change bill with wild delight. They proclaimed an all day holiday, paraded the campus, marched to Lansing, invaded the capitol, called on all the champions of their bill for speeches, sang songs, gave college yells for "Michigan State," held a big dance, and continued their jubilee far into the night.

Probably in an effort to show that even despite this name change, the college is to continue as a leader in agricultural matters and provide definite service for Michigan farmers, the senate is taking action to materially increase the appropriations granted by the house for maintenance and agricultural extension work for the East Lansing institution. The senate committee has increased this bill from $520,000 for the next two years as passed by the house, to $875,000.

The senate is also taking a rather liberal attitude toward the appropriations requested by the state department of agriculture and approved by Michigan farm organizations. The house passed unanimously Rep-Representative Joseph Warner's bill $25,000 a year for inspection service and the enforcement of grades and standards of farm products. When this bill reached the senate committee on agriculture they promptly reported it out with the appropriation doubled.

Similar treatment was accorded Representative Joseph Warner's bill providing state funds for fighting the European corn borer. As passed by the house this bill carried an appropriation of $12,000, but the senate committee on agriculture promptly restored the figure to $25,000, the amount originally requested.

Representative Eapie's bill providing $100,000 for a deficiency appropriation to provide state funds for bovine tuberculosis eradication during the balance of the present fiscal year, passed the house 82 to 1, and has been reported favorably by the senate committee on agriculture. The above three rural appropriation bills have all been reported favorably by the senate committee on finance and appropriations and by the committee of the whole and await final passage on third reading.

Representative Kirby's bill to amend the Michigan grape standards has been passed by the senate unanimously.

County Road Aid

The state of Michigan has definitely abandoned its policy of paying state awards on county roads. The senate approved unanimously Rep. Kirby's bill which permanently repeals those sections of the old general highway law which provides for the payment of such awards. Passage of the Kirby bill will not affect in any way the approximately $6,000,000 of delinquent awards now due to the counties and townships.

The senate has passed unanimously Senator Young's bill to place dealers in livestock remedies under strict regulation and a stringent license system. This measure is intended to prevent fraud and deception in the sale of so-called tonics, condition powders, etc., which are actually only compounds of common and cheap ingredients, which have little medicinal value and are actually worth but a small fraction of the price asked.

In the midst of contention as to which appropriation bills to allow and which to defer and disagreement

WHY SUFFER SO?

Get Back Your Health as Other Charlevoix Folks Have Done.

Too many people suffer lame, aching backs, distressing kidney disorders and rheumatic aches and pains. Often this is due to faulty kidney action and there's danger of hardened arteries, dropsy, gravel or Bright's disease. Don't let weak kidneys wear you out. Use Doan's Pills before it is too late! Doan's are a stimulant diuretic to the kidneys. Doan's have helped thousands. They should help you. Here is one of many Charlevoix cases:

John Stephens, 209 W. Upright Ave., says: "My kidneys were weak and acted too frequently, often causing me to get up several times during the night to pass the secretions. The passages of the secretions burned a great deal. Doan's Pills relieved the trouble and made me feel better in every way."

Price 60c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Pills—the same that Mr. Stephens had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.

PIANO RECITAL A GREAT SUCCESS

Methodist Church Packed to Capacity Friday Evening

The piano recital at the Methodist church last Friday evening packed the building with an interested and appreciative audience. The church was very prettily decorated and the playing of the music pupils proved not only the hard work and natural musical ability of the class but the care and patience exercised by Mrs. D. W. Sage, their teacher, both in her teaching and in the arrangement of the program.

Solos, duets and trios on the piano as well as a vocal solo by Miss Frances Conklin and a vocal duet by the Misses Francea Conklin and Merla Springstead, were among the offerings of the class, and a cello and piano duet by Rev. Manker and Mrs. Sage and violin and piano duets by the same people were a feature of the evening. The latters numbers were the "5th Air Varie" and the Minuet in "G". Both Mr. Manker and Mrs. Sage are so far above the average in music that these numbers alone amply repaid those who attended.

as to the size of the bequests to be granted, the senate has passed Senator Brower's bill appropriating $500,000 for the construction of an entirely new state tuberculosis sanitorium upon a site to be selected by a joint legislative committee provided for in the bill. It is contended that the institution at Howell is antiquated and that for the proper care of the tuberculosis sick in Michigan, four additional sanitoriums the size of that at Howell would be required. It is said that Michigan is short 900 beds of being adequately equipped to give sanitorium treatment to those requiring it.

Another very important bill relative to human tuberculosis is Senator Greene's proposal for the construction of county tuberculosis sanitoriums and for allowing $1.00 per day of state aid for patients confined therein. After weathering a storm of hostile motions and amendments, this bill was finally passed by the house 80 to 7, and has been sent to the governor for his approval.

EXPLAINS LAKE LEVEL PROBLEM

WATER-STEAL QUESTION NOT AT ALL SIMPLE

Iovolves Coostruction of Controlliog Works and Artificial Sewage Disposal

In 1913, the United States government sought to enjoin the Sanitary District of Chicago from diverting from Lake Michigan more than 4,167 cu. ft. of water per second and in 1923 the United States district court granted this injunction. An appeal was taken to the United States supreme court and the outcome was the granting of the district of a five year permit, the provisions of which were made public by the Secretary of War on March 7th.

The features of this permit are the diversion of an annual average of 8,500 sec.-ft. of water, the "instantaneous maximum" not to exceed 11,000 sec.-ft. (this is in addition to the water Chicago draws for water supply—about 12,000 sec.-ft. in 1924); submission by the sanitary district for the approval of the chief of engineers and the secretary of war plans for controlling works to prevent the discharge of the Chicago river into Lake Michigan in times of flood; execution of a sewage treatment program (artificial processes) providing for treatment, by the expiration of the permit, of sewage for 1,200,000 persons; and adoption of a program within six months from date of permit for metering 90% of Chicago's water service, with meter installations of 10% per annum.

Permit provisions follow closely the recommendations made to the chief of engineers by Major Rufus W. Putnam, Corps of Engineers, district engineer at Chicago. Particular attention was called in Major Putnam's report to the fact that diversion means actual water taken by the district through its main drainage canal and channel auxiliaries. This, added to the 1,200 sec.-ft. discharged by the sewers, amounts to 9,700 sec.-ft., which controlled flow is to be measured at Lockport. (The district asked for 10,000 sec.-ft. at Lockport).

According to the Engineering News-Record, from which a portion of the above data is taken, it is believed that the artificial sewage-disposal program in accordance with terms of the permit will relieve the load on the drainage canal so that a reduction to 7,250 sec.-ft., or even lower, may be possible by 1929. This, Major Putnam's report asserts, looks to the reduction in diversion to 4,167 sec.-ft. by 1935. The "instantaneous maximum" of 11,000 sec.-ft. may be continued until works are installed to prevent reversal of flow of the Chicago river. It is to be understood "that this instrument (the permit) does not give any property rights, either in real estate or material, or any exclusive privileges; and that it does not authorize any injury to private property or invasion of private rights, or any infringement of federal, state or local laws or regulations, nor does it obviate the necessity of obtaining state assent to the work authorized. It merely expresses the assent of the federal government so far as concerns the public rights of navigation."

The taking of testimony in the government's injunction proceedings hereinbefore mentioned was concluded in 1914 and, as a basis for the injunction, it was set forth by navigation and other interests in opposition that there was a lowering of lake levels of from 4 to 6 inches, with a consequent damage to navigation in the Great Lakes system.

Accepting the conclusion that the diversion of lake water at Chicago has contributed to the present low stages of the lakes, the sanitary district made an offer to the United States to pay the cost of remedial works to compensate for the lowering caused by its diversion, these

NO LICENSE IS REQUIRED FOR LOCAL ANGLERS

The impression that a resident fishing license is required by citizens of Michigan for hook and line fishing within the state is erroneous, according to County Clerk Chas. H. Emrey, who is besieged with applications for such licenses. There is no such thing as a resident fishing license, he declares, although he receives numerous applications with one dollar bills enclosed.

The only licenses issued in this state for hook and line fishing are to non-residents, special licenses at $2 permitting outsiders to fish for anything but bass and trout during the open season, and general licenses at $5 which allow the fishing of any kind of fish within season. The trout season opens May 1. The season on large and small mouth bass opens June 16.

There is a bill before the legislature at Lansing now which would require a $1 resident license to sit on the end of the dock and catch perch, or any other kind of fish, but this bill is declared to be without a chance of passing. Its proponents assert the bill is no more justified than would be one which would require a person to obtain a license to dig angleworms in his own back yard.

No change will be made affecting the extended season for catching rainbow and steel head trout in the waters of Pine and Round lakes. In fact, to date no material change has been made in fishing laws.

ROAD OFFICIALS ARE COOPERATING

CHARLEVOIX AND EMMET AGREE ON JOINT PLAN

Will Pave Stretch at Bay Shore, Long "Little Orphan Annie" of Highway Jobs

A week ago last Monday, members of the Emmet and Charlevoix county highway boards of control held a joint session in Petoskey, taking the necessary legal steps to adopt the road along the south county line of Emmet county as a joint Emmet-Charlevoix county highway. Division of the work of building this road was also made at this meeting.

Charlevoix county will build the first mile from Walloon Lake east and Emmet the second mile. Charlevoix will build the two miles east of M-13 and the railroad track, south of Petoskey, and Emmet county the last two miles. Emmet county will start at once on her share of the work. Charlevoix county will build the first mile this spring but may not get the next two miles built until late this season or early next.

This action has brought to a final close the squabble over where the responsibility rested and what line should be followed in paving the unspeakable succession of chuck-holes and thank-you-marms lying between the concrete and the foot of the hill at Bay Shore. Already the soil thereabouts has been tinged a deep blue by the curses and righteously indignant ravings of ten thousand times ten thousand drivers of automobiles, but if they will only get busy now and fix this awful little patch of spring and temper destroying roadbed, the road officials of the two counties will undoubtedly improve their standing with the traveling public to such an extent that a prayer or two may be offered up for the future repose of their souls. Otherwise, a coal shovel and a pair of horns for theirs!

Well, boys, we are glad anyway that you have found out at last that cooperation pays in road building as well as anything else. Disputes never leave any real money in anybody's pocket. They do often leave one with a black eye, however, as in the case above.

JUDGE WM. H. COLLINS DEAD

DECEASED SAW SERVICE IN THE CIVIL WAR

Enlisted as Drummer Boy at Age of 13 and Later Joined the Navy

William Henry Collins, one of the last surviving members of that little group of Civil War veterans which Charlevoix, as well as other towns and cities in the Union, has long held in veneration for their unselfish sacrifice in behalf of their country, passed away at his home in this city early last Thursday morning, April 23rd, at the age of nearly 77 years. He had been in poor health for a number of years and about two weeks previous to his death had taken to his bed, continuing to fail until the end came shortly after midnight of Wednesday.

Mr. Collins was born in Philadelphia, Penna., on July 26, 1848. He was enlisted September 2, 1861, at the assumed age of 15 yeurs as a drummer boy, but at the real age of 13 yeurs. His organization was the 69th Pennsylvanla Volunteer Infantry, with which he remained until about May 3, 1863, when he wus taken sick and removed by ambulunce tn a hospital in Washington where he remained until the latter part of the following July. He also served as first class boy on the U. S. S. North Carolina, the Pontoosuc, the Yantic, the New Hampshire, the Vermont and the Peoria, his enlistment in the navy commencing July 29th, 1864. Frnm both branches of the service he received an honoruble discharge and was drawing pension up until tho time of his death.

The deceased came to Michigan some 47 years ago, first settling in Pentwater, where he was engaged for some time in the lumber business. He moved from there to Elk Rapids, where he entered the fishing industry an occupation which he followed for some time after his arrival in Charlevoix or up until he and the late R. W. Kane formed a partnership to conduct a cold-storage business here. He retired from the last-named enterprise in 1903, his health not permitting him since that timo to engage in active business.

Mr. Collins served two terms as justice of the peace and held this office at the time of his death. He was a member of the F. & A. M. and R. A. Musonic lodges in this city and at one time held membership in the I. O. O. F. He was also, of course, a member of Baxter Post of the G. A. R.

Judge Collins was twice married and is survived by two chidren of the first union, a son, William Edward, who is in the government rum chaser service with headquarters at Boston, Mass.; a daughter, Mrs. Catherine O'Brien of Detroit, Mich., and fifteen grandchildren. He was married on March 4th, 1900, to Mrs. Hannah M. Wagner, who also survives him.

The funeral services were held Sunday, April 26th, at 2:00 p. m. from the Baptist church, Rev. Herman Burns officiating. Interment was made in the Baxter Post, G. A. R. plot at Brookside, members of the Masonic order conducting the last ceremonies at the grave.

SHEPARD'S HERO LEO THE BUNCH

HELD HIGH HERD HONORS FOR FOUR MONTHS

Longest Time That Any One Herd in C. T. A. Has Kept This Record

The nine grade Holsteins owned by Arthur Shepard of East Jordan, have again proved their worth by repeating last winter's record. For the past four months they have held the position of high herd, having the higbest butter fat average per cow, of any herd in this association. In December, the nine cows averaged 40.5 pounds of butter fat; in January, 46.8; in February 42.0, and in March 48.0 pounds of butter fat. This is the longest any herd in this association has held the "high herd" honor, having as high an average. The main feature of this C. T. A. record is good breeding, good feeding and good care.

One of the high individuals of the association for the last three months is a grade Guernsey, which was purchased by Elmer Murray (upon the recommendation of the cow-tester), on January 1, 1925. This Guernsey heifer freshened and during the next three months she made 133 pounds of butter fat and 3,200 pounds of milk. In the same three months she made profit above cost of feed which comes within $10 of the price paid for her last September. This 2 year old cow is a daughter of the highest milk and butter fat producing Jersey in the C. T. A. of this county last year. Her father is a pure bred Guernsey. Mr. Murray, the present owner of this Guernsey, thinks that it is a safe bet to buy cows from herds having a good C. T. A. record behind them.

Orchard Bay Farm also produced a couple of good pure-bred Holstein heifers, both of them were fresh in February and both gave 46.8 pounds of butter fat in March. A senior 2 year old grade Jersey owned by Clint Blanchard of Phelps, was second highest butter fat producer in her class during January.

In the 3 year old class, the grade Holsteins owned by Dan Swanson and Arthur Shepard have been holding down the larger share of high records in this class for the last five or six months. Other good 3 year olds are owned by Orchard Bay Farm and B. E. Waterman. Mr. Waterman has the first short-horn cow in this association which has been able to get among the three highest producers of their classes.

The 4 year old class winners are divided up among the pure bred Holsteins owned by Breezy Point Farm and Frank A. W. Behling.

In the 5 year old and over class, the good cows for the last three months have been found at Dan Swanson's, Arthur Shepard's, Breezy Point Farm and Loeb Farms. The highest individual monthly record of this group is 73.9 pounds of butter fat and was made by a pure-bred Holstein owned by the Loeb Farms.

During the first three months of 1925, 20 cows were culled out as unprofitable and sold to the butcher, where their financial troubles were ended. Culling out the poor producers explains why the cows in the association this year are averaging more milk and butter fat than the cows in last year's association.

B. E. Waterman and Bergman & Son have bought good pure-bred Holsteins to replace those sold to the butcher.

Clarence Mullett,
(Cow-Tester.)

"OUR" BAND PLAYS ON THURSDAY NEXT

Come Out, People, at Eight O'clock and Hear Them

The Charlevoix band, under the leadership of Al Winnick, will make its maiden bow to the public of Charlevoix next Thursday evening on Bridge street, the evening's program commencing at about eight o'clock.

The boys have been working hard at their music since their first rehearsal on March 30th, and, while nearly all the players have had previous experience in band work, those who have heard them at their rehearsals agree that, for the length of time they have been at it, the way the different intruments harmonize is nothing short of marvelous. They have quite a list of stirring pieces, some of them quite difficult music, and we can predict a very pleasant evening's entertainment for their auditors next Thursday evening.

TENNIS TOURNAMENT IN AUGUST

RECEIVES AUTHORIZATION OF NATIONAL BODY

Date is the 13th and Following Days —Thirty-two Players Compete in Singles

For the last thirty years, lawn tennis has been growing in well-merited popularity and 1925 promises to be the greatest year of all. Borotra, French ace, recently won the national indoor championship and nearly every nation will be represented in the internatinnal Davis cup matches.

Charlevoix is indeed fortunate in having its tennis affairs placed in the hands of experienced and enthusiastic followers of the ancient game. W. Gordon Parker, former national interscholastic champion, is president of the local club and is being ably assistd by Archie Livingston as treasurer and Harold Cartier as secretary. The Association of Commerce has generously subscribed to the cause.

Charlevoix has been authorized by the United States Lawn Tennis Association to hold a tournament on Thursday, August 13th and following days. In order to receive this recognition, it was necessary to join the West Michigan Tennis Association with headquarters at Grand Rapids. Every courtesy was shown the local club, which will in turn send representatives to play in the Grand Rapids event, which will precede the Charlevoix tournament. Charlevoix's veteran player will make the trip and secure entries for his city.

It is the present intention to limit the events to men's singles and the entries to approximately 32 experienced players. These should draw good galleries and will offer many younger players an opportunity to see how it's all done. An earlier Charlevoix tournament will no doubt be held and will be open to all comers, featuring events for both sexes in singles, doubles and mixed doubles.

Manager A. I. Crenmer of the Inn has written the local club, saying: "I am very glad to hear that you have placed Charlevoix in the right channel for tennis activities. I think you can count on me to help you in every way that is fair and right and I will be glad to assist you in carrying out the program as you have outlined it in your letter to me."

During past seasons, Manager Creamer has generously offered the use of the Inn courts to all outside players and in other ways has actively encouraged and supported the game. Ronald Larzelere will again have charge of the Inn's tennis, while John Knight has been employed in a like capacity at the Belvedere.

BARD OF AVON WAS HONORED

SHAKESPEARE CLUB HELD REVEL ON ANNIVERSARY

Supper Enjoyed on 361 Birthday of the Immortal "Wully" a Memorable Affair

On April 23rd, the Shakespeare Club celebrated the three hundred and sixty first birthday of their beloved bard with a birthday supper at the Hotel Hallett.

As Mrs. Stelter at the piano, accompanied by Robert Bridge on the violin, struck the notes of a popular air, the doors to the spacious dining room were thrown open and the club members and their guests marched in and found their places marked with beautifully decorated cards, the work of Mrs. Earl Young.

The committee, consisting of Mrs. Paddock, Mrs. Shanahan and Mrs. Harsha, had very artistically arranged one large table. The club colors were cleverly worked out with large bowls of daffodils in the center of the table and boutonnieres of purple sweet peas, combined with ferns were placed at each plate. Graceful strands of ferns were carried the length of the table and a soft glow was over all from the many lighted candles.

The last course consisted of a huge birthday cake and ice cream. The cake, well lighted with candles, was brought in and placed in front of Mrs. Paddock. Mrs. Robert Bridge, president of the club, graciously called on Mrs. Paddock for a birthday greeting. Mrs. Paddock welcomed the guests; then briefly sketched the life of the club and the pleasure derived from studying the works of the Bard of Avon. She also spoke of the Shakespeare luncheon being given on that day at Stratford-on-Avon, at the King's Arms Hotel and she knew it would be no better than the supper served by Mr. Hallett.

At the close of the supper, the president called on Mrs. Beeman for the program as arranged for the evening.

Mrs. Swinton gave a delightful rendition of the Juba Dance, by Dett and, responding to an encore, she gave "O Sole Mio." The feature of the program was a forecast and what could be more interesting or intriguing than the club woman and who could better depict her than Mrs. Armstrong. She fully convinced all present that the clubwoman is here to stay and is entering every activity. With sallies of wit and humor, she paid tribute to the model woman, as outlined in the last chapter of Proverbs.

The State Federation of Women's Clubs asked each club to stress Michigan, so, "Michigan, My Michigan" was sung by the entire company, with Mrs. Swinton at the piano and Mrs. Stelter leading the singing.

P. M. LOST SALE BECAUSE OF NEW POSTAL RATES

A resident of a small village not far from Charlevoix learned some interesting features of the new postal rates when he went to his local postoffice one morning last week to mail a birthday card to a friend who lives in the same village.

"Let me have a 1 cent stamp," he requested.

"You can't send that card for 1 cent any more," the postmaster replied. "Under the new rates that will cost you 2 cents."

"All right, give me a 2 cent stamp."

"Wait a minute," said the postmaster. "If you put it in an envelope and leave it unsealed you can send it for 1½ cents."

"Well, give me a 1½-cent stamp then."

The postmaster turned the pages of a book of regulations.

"Say," he remarked. "Do you know that if you put it in an envelope and seal it, you can leave it here for him at the drop letter rate of 1 cent."

"Never mind," said the customer. "Here he comes down the street. I'll give it to him."

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

By B. C. Mellencamp

Last Tuesday night a big meeting was held at Boyne Falls in the nature of a community gathering in co-operation with the consolidated schools and it proved to be highly interesting. At least 250 people were in attendance to listen to the talks by A. C. Baltzer, dairy specialist of our college, and B. O. Hagerman, formerly county agent and now connected with the Pennsylvania railroad. Also the present county agent gave a few details concerning the nature of the work to be carried on this summer. Mr. Kitson, agricultural instructor and superintendent of the Boyne Falls school, acted as chairman and handled the meeting in a very capable manner. Also county agriculturnl agent, Mellencamp, used the moving picture machine in showing two films, which were very enthusiastically received. Meetings of this kind are worth while from the standpoint of the community, as well as being very instructional. Mr. Baltzer emphasized the necessity of feeding properly, breeding intelligently, and weeding out the undesirables. Mr. Hagerman discussed crops and in particular the comparison of freight rates on different crops. If a bushel of potatoes was shipped to Cincinnati, the freight rate cost would be 82 per cent of the value of the bushel when sold. If n bushel of alfalfa seed wns shipped to the same place, the freight cost would be only 2 1-2 per cent of the value of the bushel.

During the day, Mr. Baltzer spent some time in looking over our county cow-testing ussociation, and found it to be one of the most efficiently munnged in the state, due to the exceptionally fine work of the tester, Clarence Mullett.

Wednesdny, the 22nd. J. A. Hannah, poultry specialist, was in the county working on poultry demonstration farms. As a result, three of our leading poultry raisers are having demonstration farms. In the past all orders for baby chicks have been sent out of the county, which will not be necessary in the future, as these farms will have a source of high producing hatchery eggs and in all probabilities also of baby chicks. These farms will be under the direct supervision of the college and accurate records will be kept for both the eggs and cost of feed. The following farms are carrying on this work:

Wm. Sanderson, Ironton, Barred Rocks.

Arthur Guild, Charlevoix, W. Wyandottes and W. Leghorns.

Mrs. Roy, East Jordan, W. Leghorns.

During the past winter Mrs. Roy has had exceptionally fine production. Her flock of 120 hens averaged 85 eggs per bird for the 5 month period from November 1, 1924 to April 1, 1925. Who can beat this in the county?

During the past week two more members have been enrolled in the boy's and girl's calf club, which makes at the present time, 16 members. Having seen several of the calves of late, it is very gratifying to note how well they have been cared for and the interest that their young owners are taking. Be sure and plan on seeing them at the county Fair this fall.

Also a bean growing club is gradually being brought into existence, and at the present time have 8 members enrolled. These boys and girls are buying sufficient certified Robust seed to put in from 1-2 to one acre. They will buy their own seed and do all the work possible nnd get the proceeds of the crop. The main reason for the club is to introduce these beans in the county. They outyield the other beans and are decidedly more resistant to blight and anthracuose.

Also a canning club for girls will be organized near Boyne Falls next week.

"The Iron Chink" Has Role in New Paramount Picture

"The Iron Chink" has been added to the cast chosen to support Thomas Meighan in his new starring vehicle "The Alaskan," coming to the Palace Theatre next Saturday and Sunday. Herbert Brenon who produced the picture for Paramount, made the addition when he beheld this celebrated Oriental at work in a salmon cannery at the entrnnce to an Alaskan river.

"The Iron Chink" is one of the most efficient machines which this mechanical age has produced. It is a piece of mechanism which works with an intelligence uncannily human.

In "The Alaskan," a James Oliver Curwood story of the far north, which Willis Goldpeck adapted to the screen, this super-human machine is shown at work. Next to Estelle Taylor, John Sainpolis, Charles Ogle, Frnnk Campeau nnd Anna May Wong, who head the supporting cast, "The Iron Chink" plays one of the most important parts in the picture.

Lots of Pep in "House of Youth"

Oil and water, East and West, gin and gasoline—never the twain shall mix. "The House of Youth," the Regal photoplay which comes to the Palace Theatre next Tuesday and Wednesday, is not concerned with oil or water, or East or West, but gin and gasoline it is vitally concerned. They do not mix, but they form two of the ingredients of nn absorbing motion picture, among the others of which are youth and age, foolishness and wisdom.

The uproar swelled, the noise gradually drifting around the city from west to south, forming, seemingly, a semicircle of sound. "The government troops are up and doing now," Webster observed, and speeded up his motor. "I think it high time we played the part of frightened refugees. Mauser bullets kill at three miles. Some strays may drop out here in the bay."

He speeded the launch toward La Estrellita, and as the craft scraped in alongside the great steamer's companion landing, her skipper ran down the ladder to greet them and inquire eagerly of the trend of events ashore.

"We left in a hurry the instant it started," Webster explained. "As Americans, we didn't figure we had any interest in that scrap, either way." He handed Dolores out on the landing stage, tossed their baggage after her and followed; Don Juan took the wheel, and the launch slid out and left them there.

At the head of the companion ladder Webster paused and turned for another look at Buenaventura. To the west three great fires now threw a lurid light skyward, mocking an equally lurid light to the east, that marked the approach of daylight. He smiled. "Those are the cantonment barracks burning," he whispered to Dolores. "Ricardo is keeping his word. He's driving the rats back into their own holes."

* * * * * * * *

The weeks of clean living, of abstention from his wonted daily alcoholic ration, had inspired in Don Juan Cafetero a revival of his all but defunct interest in life; conversely, in these stirring times, he was sensible of an equally acute interest in Sobrantean politics, for he was Irish; and flabby indeed is that son of the Green Little Isle who, wherever he may be, declines to take a hand in any public argument. For the love of politics, like the love of home, is never dead in the Irish.

It is instinct with them—the heritage, perhaps, of centuries of oppression and suppression, which nurtures rather than stifles the yearning for place and power. Now as Don Juan turned Leber's launch shoreward and kicked the motor wide open, he, too, descried against the dawn the glare of the burning cantonments west of the city, and at the sight his pulse beat high with the lust of battle, the longing to be in at the death in this struggle, where the hopes and aspirations of those he loved were at stake.

Two months previously a revolution would have been a matter of extreme indifference to Don Juan; he would have reflected that it was merely the outs trying to get in, and that if they succeeded, the sole benefit to the general public would be the privilege of paying the bill. Today, however, in the knowledge that he had an opportunity to fight beside white men and perchance even up some old scores with the Guardia Civil, it occurred suddenly to Don Juan that it would be a brave and virtuous act to cast his lot with the Ruey forces. He was a being reorganized and rebuilt, and it behooved him to do something to demonstrate his manhood.

Don Juan knew, of course, that should the rebels lose and he be captured, he would be executed; yet this contingency seemed a far-fetched one, in view of the fact that he had John Stuart Webster at his back, ready to finance his escape from the city. Also Don Juan had had an opportunity, in the hills above San Miguel de Padua, for a critical study of Ricardo Ruey and had come to the conclusion that at last a real man had come to liberate Sobrante; further, Don Juan had had ocular evidence that John Stuart Webster was connected with the revolution, for had he not smuggled Ruey into the country? It was something to be the right-hand man of the president-of-u-rich little country like Sobrante; it was also something to be as close to that right-hand man as Don Juan was to his master, Webster; consequently self-interest and his sporting code whispered to Don Juan that it behooved him to demonstrate his loyalty with every means at his command, even unto his heart's blood.

"Who knows," he cogitated as the launch bore him swiftly shoreward, "but what I'll acquit meself with honor and get a fine job undher the new administration? 'Tis the masther's fight, I'm thinkin'; then, be the same token, 'tis John Joseph Cafferty's, win, lose or draw, an' may the devil damn me if I fail him afther what he's done for me. Sure, if Gineral Ruey wins, a crook av the masther's finger will make me jefe politico. An' if he does—hoo-roo! Hoo-ray!"

With his imagination still running riot, Don Juan maile the launch fast to the little dock, down which he ran straight for the warehouse, where the Ruey mercenaries were still congregated, busily wiping the factory grease from the weapons which had just been distributed to them from the packing cases. A sharp voice halted him, he paused, panting, to find himself looking down the long blue burrel of a service pistol.

"Who are you, and what are you doing here?" the man behind the weapon demanded brusquely.

"I'm Private John J. Cafferty, the latest recruit to the Ruey army," Don Juan answered composedly. "Who did ye think I was? Private secreth'ry to that divil Sarros? Man, dear, lower that gun av yours, for God knows I'm aervous enough as it is. Have ye something' ye could give me to fight wit,' avic?"

The man who had challenged him—a lank, swarthy individual from the Mexican border—looked him over with twinkling eyes. "You'll do, Cafferty, old timer," he drawled, "and if you don't, you'll wish you had. There's a man for every rifle just now, but I wouldn't be surprised if there'd be a right smart more rifles than men before a great while. Help yourself to the gun o' the first man that goes down; in the meantime, hop into that there truck and keep the cartridge belt for the machine guns full up. You're just in time."

Without further ado Don Juan climbed into the truck. A little citadel of sheet steel had been built around the driver's seat, with a narrow slit in front through which the latter peered out. The body of the truck had been boxed in with the same material and housed two machine guns, emplaced, and a crew of half a dozen men crouched on the floor engaged in loading the belts. Four motor bicycles, with sturdy, specially-built side cars attached, and a machine gun in each side car, were waiting near by, together with a half-dozen country carts loaded with ammunition cases and drawn by horses.

"How soon do we start?" Don Juan demanded anxiously, as he crowded in beside one of his new-found comrades.

"I believe," this individual replied in the unmistakable accents of an Oxford man, "that the plan is to wait until five o'clock; by that time all the government troops that can be spared from the arsenal and palace will have been dispatched to the fighting now taking place west of the city. Naturally, the government forces aren't anticipating an attack from the rear, and so they will, in all probability, weaken their base. I believe that eases our task; certainly it will save us many men.

Don Juan nodded his entire approval to this shrewd plan of campaign and fell to stuffing cartridges in the web belting, the while he whistled softly, unmusically, and with puffing, hissing sounds between his snaggle teeth, until a Sobrantean gentleman (it was Doctor Pacheco) came out of the warehouse and gave the order to proceed.

They marched along the water front for four blocks and then turned up a side street, which happened to be the Calle de Concordia, thus enabling Mother Jenks, who was peering from the doorway of El Buen Amigo, to see them coming.

"Hah!" she muttered. "'Enery they're comin'. The worm is turnin', 'Enery; 15 years you've wyted for vengeance, my love, but tod'y you'll get it."

She waddled out into the street and held up her hand in a gesture as authoritative and imperious as that of a traffic officer. "Hutter-r-rys 'alt!" she croaked. She had heard the late 'Enery give that command often enough to have acquired the exact inflection necessary to make an impression upon men accustomed to obeying such a command whenever given. Instinctively the column slowed up; some of the Foreign Legion, old coast artillerists, no doubt, came to a halt with promptness and precision; all stared at Mother Jenks.

"'Ow about 'arf a dozen cases o' good brandy for the wounded?" Mother Jenks suggested. "An' 'ow about a hally old woman for a Red Cross nurse?"

"You're on, ma'am," the foreign leader replied promptly, and, translated the old lady's suggestion to Dr. Pacheco, who accepted gracefully and thanked Mother Jenks in purest Castilian. So a detail of six men was told off to carry the six cases of brandy out of El Buen Amigo and load them on the ammunition carts; then Mother Jenks crawled up into the armored truck with the machine gun crew, and the column once more took up its line of rapid march.

The objective of this unsuspected force within the city was, as Ricardo Ruey shrewdly suspected it might be, poorly garrisoned. Usually a force of fully 500 men was stationed at the national arsenal, but the sharp, savage attack from the west, so sudden and unexpected, had thrown Sarros into a panic and left him no time to plan his defense carefully. His first thought had been to send all his available forces to support the troops bearing the brunt of the rebel attack, and it was tremendously important that this should be done very promptly, in view of the lack of information concerning the numerical force of the enemy; consequently he had reduced the arsenal force to 100 men and retained only his favorite troops of the guards and one company of the Fifteenth Infantry to protect the palace.

Acting under hastily given telephonic orders, the commanding officer at the cantonment barracks had detailed a few hundred men to fight a rear-guard action while the main army fell back in good order behind a railway embankment which swept in a wide arc around the city and offered an excellent substitute for breastworks. This position had scarcely been attained before the furious advance of the rebels drove in the rear guard, and pending the capture of the arsenal, Ricardo realized his operations were at an impasse. Promptly he dug himself in, and the battle developed into a brisk affair of give and take, involving meager losses to both factions, but an appalling wastage of ammunition.

The arsenal, a large, modern concrete building with tremendously thick walls reinforced by steel, would have offered fairly good resistance to the average field battery. Surrounding it on all four sides was a reinforced concrete wall 30 feet high, with machine gun bastions at each corner and a platform along the wall, inside and 25 feet from the ground, which afforded foot room for infantry which could use the top five feet of the wall for protection while firing over it. There was but one entrance, a heavy, barred steel gate which was always kept locked when it was not necessary to have it opened for ingress or egress. Given warning of an attack and with sufficient time to prepare for it, 100 of the right sort of fighting men could withstand an indefinite siege by a force not provided with artillery heavier than an ordinary field gun. With a full realization of this, therefore, Ricardo and his confreres had designed to accomplish by strategy that which could not be done by the limited forces at their command.

As the column approached the neighborhood of the arsenal, three detachments broke away from the main body and disappeared down side streets, to turn at right angles later and march parallel with the main command. Each of these detachments was accompanied by one unit of the motorcycle mounted machine gun battery with its white crew; two blocks beyond the arsenal square each detachment leader so disposed his men as to offer spirited resistance to any sortie that might be made by the troops from the palace in the hope of driving off the attackers of the arsenal.

Having thus provided for protection during its operations, the main body nominally under Dr. Pacheco but in reality commanded by the chief of the machine gun company, proceeded to operate. With the utmost assurance in the world the armored truck rolled down the street to the arsenal entrance, swung in and pointed its impudent nose straight at the iron bars

ORGANIZE TO FIGHT FRAUD

Three organizations are working for the protection of American investors and for the elimination of fraud in financial business. The New York Stock Exchange has created a National Fraud Bureau in its offices and is co-operating with the public, authorities in the prevention and prosecution of bucketshop thieves and swindlers. The Investment Bankers' Association has just announced comprehensive plans for obtaining and placing before the public information relative to all existing delays, defaults, or repudiation of municipal bonds or coupons held by investors and also extending their work of protecting the public against those in the purchase and holding of securities. The Credit Men's Association of the United States is making an intensive campaign against credit swindlers. There should be a concerted drive against the crook in business, no matter what kind of a business it may be that he is engaged in. It is the duty of honest business to help public officials in cleaning out crookedness. It is a real patriotic work.

BIG TAX REDUCTION POSSIBLE

A reduction of $500,000,000 in federal taxes is now seen as a possibility. Heretofore the aim has been about $300,000,000, and if it be possible to get the larger reduction a great step towards promoting the prosperity of the country will have been taken.

Both Republican and Democrats should join in this great effort to cut taxes half a billion dollars. Business men must realize that if they are expecting a substantial reduction in taxes it is necessary for them to do something more than give silent approval to the idea. Surely they know who their congressmen und senators are and by writing and keeping in touch with the situation they will exercise tremendous power. There is no politics in tax reduction and there should be none. A man who tries to play politics with the revenue bill this year should be carefully marked as a menace to the puhlic good. Politics and scientific tax reduction are utterly inconsistent.

THE SUMMER TOURIST

With the arrival of the warm spring days the spirit of wanderlust begins to throb anew in the breasts of Michigan's great army of summer tourists, and already they nre grooming the family flivver against the day when they will take to the highways of the state in quest of rest and recreation amid the lakes and streams of the commonwealth.

It seems a peculiar thing, but with the beginning of the jaunt a Dr. Jeykell-Mr. Hyde spirit seems to take possession and away they go, scattering bread crusts, tin cans, paper plates and Sunday supplements In their wake. They have no hesitancy in hooking whatever of the farmer's vegetables and ripening fruits that come within the zone of their ltinernry, yet at home they are as full of cleanliness as a goldfish and as honest as the day is long. Just why this is, has never been explained by the philomath of the nation; remaining one of the unsolved mysteries of modern times.

THE PEDDLER NUISANCE

The way to stop any nuisance is to kill it when it's new. The season for peddlers is just starting. Make it a habit nt your house to show them they are unwelcome from the start, not only because they ordinarily handle inferior goods, not only because by admitting them you are laying yourself open to insults in case you do not buy, but because it is an established fact that in many cases petty robberies and house breaking follow visits of these peddlers. No possible good can come by allowing them to use up your time and much harm may follow.

WHAT CARELESSNESS COSTS

The value of the lumber industry in the United States at the present time represents investments totaling $12,000,000,000, employs 800,000 persons and indirectly about 1,000,000, and its annual output has a value of more than $3,000,000,000. Last year losses mounting into the millions was caused through fires started by careless campers and smokers. This almost appalling loss can be practically eliminated when every person entering the forest zone takes heed of the fire-prevention maxims they will find tacked up along the way.

THE WHEAT SITUATION

The farmer should plan his year's crop of wheat, having in mind the recent sharp decline in price. High prices stimulated producers to the point of over-planting, so it will undoubtedly mean a loss to any one holding high-priced wheat over the coming of the new and probably cheaper crop. Economic conditions brought about the price break, to the discomfiture of the armies of foolish speculators. Over-production is eminent, which is npt to mean lower prices than wheat is actually worth, erop experts are pointing out.

Oh boy, trout fishing season is here. Must have good tackle to land that big one. Get it at the Charlevoix Hdw. Co.—Adv. 17-t3.

FRESHENING BREEZES

If the woman legislator, who introduced a bill to compel the lnndlords to provide 99-inch sheets for their guests had come out in favor of two oysters to every bowl of soup, maybe she'd have got a whole lot farther than she did.

A downstate legislator, when informed his wife had presented him with triplets, immediately announced he was in fnvor of reapportionment.

Two junk peddlers got in a fight the other day over which one of them should buy an abandoned railroad up in the Thumb country. The first thing Michigan knows the Grand Trunk will be along after that offer of $25,000.

R. C. KORTH HAS A NEW ICE MAKER

Refrigerating Machine Will Effect Great Saving

R. C. Korth has recently purchased a new Brunswick refrigerating machine which will be installed and working by next Monday.

This machine, manufuctured by the Brunswick-Kroeschell Co. of Chicago, operates by electricity, nmmonin gas being the refrigerating principle. It is of 2 ton cnpacity, which means that in one day it will develop as much refrigeration as two tons of melting ice in the same length of time. As the average amount of ice required and used by Mr. Korth during the past year has totnled about two tons per week, it will readily be seen that the machine will effect a remarknble saving in the cost of refrigeration. It is automatic and will hold evenly any tempernture for which it is set without attention. Any temperature desired may be produced—below the freezing point if necessary.

Mr. Korth plans to ndd an additionnl cooler in the back of his store to take care of the summer business and the refrigerating machine will keep all the coolers, as well as the counter cases, at the pruper temperature.

Automobile owners today are demanding tires that give mileage and serviee. The cost of all tires of standard makes are about the same, but the length of service varies. We Recommend Goodyear and Sieberling Tires

You may ask why? Our answer is that they give better satisfaction than any tire we have ever sold, and we have sold nearly every make of tire. Further, we can safely guarantee these tires to any autoist. And we prefer to sell these kind of tires.

while the hidden chauffeur called loudly and profanely in Spanish upon the sentry to open the gate and let him in—that there was necessity for great hurry, since he had been sent down from the palace by the presidente himself, for machine guns to equip this armored motorcar. The sentry immediately called the officer of the guard, who peered out, observed nothing but the motortruck, which seemed far from dangerous, and without further ado inserted a huge key in the lock and turned the bolt. The sentry swung the double gates ajar, and with a prolonged and raucous toot of its horn the big car lonfed in. The sentry closed the gate again, while the officer stepped up to turn the key in the lock. Instead, he died with half a dozen pistol bullets through his body, and the sentry sprawled beside him.

The prolonged toot of the motorhorn had been the signal agreed upon to apprise the detachment waiting in a secluded back street that the truck was inside the arsenal wall. With a yell they swept out of the side street and down on the gate, through which they poured into the arsenal grounds. At sound of the first shot at the gate, the commandante of the garrison, which had been drawn up in a double rank for reveille roll call, realized he was attacked, and that swift measures were necessary. Fortunately for him, his men were standing at attention at the time, preparatory to receiving from him one of those ante-battle exhortations so dear to the Latin soul.

A sharp command, and the little garrison had fixed bayonets; another command, and they were in line of squads; before the autotruck could be swung sideways to permit a machine gun to play on the Sobranteans in close formation, the latter had thrown out a skirmish line and were charging; while from the guardhouse window, just inside the gate, a volley, poured into the unprotected rear of the truck following its passage through the gate, did deadly execution. The driver, a bullet through his back, sagged forward into his steel-clad citadel; both machine gun operators were wounded, and the truck was stalled. The situation was desperate.

"I'm a gone goose," mourned Don Juan Cafetero, and he leaped from the shambles to the ground, with some hazy notion of making his escape through the gate. He was too late.

Two men, riding tandem on a motorcycle with a machine gun in the specially constructed side-car, appeared in the entrance and leaped off; almost before Don Juan had time to dodge behind the motortruck to escape possible wild bullets, the machine gun was sweeping the oncoming skirmish line. Don Juan cheered as man after man of the garrison pitched on his face, for the odds were rapidly being evened now, greatly to the pleasure of the men charging through the gate to support the machine gun. Out into the arsenal yard they swept, forcing the machine gun crew to cease firing because of the danger of killing their own men; with a shock bayonet met bayonet in the center of the yard, and the issue was up for prompt and final decision.

Don Juan's Hibernian blood thrilled; he cast about for a weapon in this emergency, and his glance rested on the body of the dead officer beside the gate. To possess himself of the latter's heavy "cut-and-thrust" sword was the work of seconds, and with a royal good will Don Juan launched himself into the heart of the scrimmage. He had a hazy impression that he was striking and stabbing, that others were striking and stabbing at him, that men shouted and breathed and pressed and swore and grunted around him, that the fighting-room was no better than it might have been, but was rapidly improving. Then the gory fog lifted, and Doctor Pacheco had Don Juan by the hand; they stood together in the arsenal entrance, and the little Doctor was explaining to the war-mad Don Juan that all was over in so far as the arsenal was concerned—the survivors of the garrison having surrendered—that now, having the opportunity, he, Doctor Pacheco, desired to thank Don Juan Cafetero for his life. Don Juan looked at him amazedly, for he didn't the slightest idea what the Doctor was talking about. He spat, gazed around at the litter of corpses on the arsenal lawn, and nodded his red head approvingly.

In an incredibly short space of time the news that the arsenal had been captured and that Sarros was besieged in the palace spread through the city. The sight of the red banner of revolution floating over the arsenal for the first time in fifteen years brought hundreds of willing recruits to the rebel ranks, as Ricardo Buey had anticipated; these were quickly supplied with arms and ammunition; by ten o'clock a battalion had been formed and sent off, together with the machine gun company, to connect with the San Bruno contingent advancing from the south to turn the flank of the government troops, while the equipping of an additional battalion proceeded within the arsenal. As fast as the new levies were armed, they were hurled off to re-enforce the handful of white men who had, after clearing the arsenal, advanced on the palace and now, with machine guns from the arsenal commanding all avenues of escape from the trap wherein Sarros found himself, were calmly awaiting developments, merely keeping an eye open for snipers.

Thus the forenoon passed away. By one o'clock Don Juan Cafetero—who in the absence of close-range fighting had elected himself ordnance sergeant—passed out the last rifle and ammunition. He was red with slaughter, slippery with gun-grease, dripping with perspiration, and filthy with dust and dirt. "Begorra," he declared, "a cowld bottle av beer would go fine now." Then, recalling his instructions, he sighed and put the thought from him. It revived in him, however, for the first time since he had left the steamer, a memory of John Stuart Webster, and his promise to the latter to report on the progress of the war. So Don Juan sought Doctor Pacheco in his headquarters and learned that a signal-man, heliographing from the roof of the arsenal, had been in communication with General Buey, who reported the situation well in hand, with no doubt of an overwhelming victory before the day should be over. This and sundry other bits of information Don Juan gleaned and then deserted the Sobranteun revolutionary army quite as casually as he had joined it, to make his precarious way down the Calle San Rosario to the bay.

UNDER THE DOME AT LANSING

(Special to the Courier)

Wayne county won its two-year fight for increased representation in the legislature when the house, by a vote of 68 to 29, passed Senator Howarth's bill allowing Wayne 21 representatives, an increase of 7 over their present number.

Passage of this bill ends one of the bitterest legislative battles which has raged in the Michigan legislature for many sessions. Bitterness engendered between the legislative and executive branches of the state government in the gas tax conflicts of 1923, was still in evidence. Veiled and open charges of intimidation, brow-beating, vote-swapping and log-rolling were made in the final debates on the floor of the house.

It was repeatedly declared that many house members were whipped into line by the threat that unless they voted for reapportionment their pet bills would be killed in the senate or vetoed. Representatives from thirty up-state counties that are desirous of securing a new state normal school for their part of the state, are said to have feared that the senate would not approve the Bryant bill providing for this school until the house passed the reapportionment bill. On the morning following passage of the reapportionment bill by the house, the senate unanimously passed the bill for the new normal.

Whatever may have gone on behind the scenes and under the surface, the reapportionment bill is now passed and sent to the governor for his approval, which will be promptly given.

The bill to give Wayne increased representation in the senate is still in the house committee on apportionment and very likely will remain there.

Session End Looms

With the reapportionment issue settled, the legislative atmosphere is considerably clarified and the tension which has characterized the legislative sessions during the last week has noticeably abated. There now seems to be no reason why the legislature cannot wind up the business of the session and adjourn in a few days. No definite date for final adjournment has been set as yet, but May 2 is being favored by many members.

As usual during the last days of the session, appropriation bills are coming in for a large amount of attention. Bills passed by the house with decided cuts below the budget requests, have in many cases been increased by the senate and many house members are loath to agree to the senate increases. However, thus far a majority of the representatives have in each instance voted to approve the more liberal action of the senate.

From a study of the appropriation bills already passed and still pending, it appears probable that the general property tax for the next two years will be about $5,000,000 per year more than it was during the past year. It is pointed out that the state administration has practically depleted the state's surplus and so whatever appropriations are granted will have to be met through taxes, fees, licenses, etc.

Farmer's Requests Granted

In view of the heavy tax burden which will face the farmers of the state during the next two years, it will no doubt be of some small satisfaction to them to know that among these requests which are being allowed by the tens of millions, the few rural appropriation bills have been passed at the desired levels. Among such measures that have received final approval during the past week are Representative Esple's bill providing an emergency appropriation of $100,000 to allow for the carrying on of bovine tuberculosis eradication campaigns for the balance of the fiscal year; Representative Brake's bill setting aside $50,000 of state funds for the state department of agriculture for inspection service and for enforcing grades and standards of Michigan fruit and other farm produce; and Representative Warner's bill allowing $25,000 for combatting and suppressing the European corn borer.

Final action has not yet been taken on the appropriation bills for new buildings, maintenance and agricultural extension work of the M. A. C., but there is every indication that the senate will pass these bills at somewhat higher levels than those allowed by the house.

Lieut.-Gov. Meets Rebuff

Economy and other reasons led the house to defeat by a vote of 35 yeas to 55 nays Representative Greene's bill which would have made the Lieutenant-Governor a member of the state administrative board at a salary of $4,000 per year. It is declared that Governor Groesbeck opposed this bill and it was indicated in the debate on the floor of the house that many members were unfriendly to it because Lieutenant-Governor Welsh, who two years ago was speaker of the house, had criticised the members most vigorously and even harshly because of their failure to pass the reapportionment bill at the 1923 session.

The house committee on agriculture has been besieged by a host of manufacturers of the dealers in live stock tonics who are strenuously protesting the passage of Senator Young's bill for the regulation and sale of such tonics, by a licensing system. Extended hearings have been held on this bill and there is every indication that it will be reported favorably, although perhaps with some-minor amendments. The bill is aimed to prevent the sale of cheap drugs and chemicals at exorbitant prices by mixing them with fillers, giving them some fancy trade name, and recommending the concoction for a long list of ailments.

From the standpoint of rural education, the house of representatives took an important step when they passed by a vote of 73 to 8 Representative Snow's bill providing for the election of a county board of education which would among other duties be charged with that of seleeting and hiring the county superintendent of schools. This official would replace the present county school commissioner who is an elective official.

In the debates for the Snow bill, it was pointed out that in counties having large cities the county commissioner of schools often retains his position through playing city politics rather than because of his particular fitness for the important position of supervising the rural education in the county. Representative Snow declared that his bill would take this office out of politics. A last-minute amendment adopted by a narrow vote provides that not more than one member of the county board of education could come from any one township or city. As the board would be composed of five members, it is evident that this provision insures a board which would be primarily rural in view-point.

Not even the courtesy which the house members naturally felt toward their lady colleague, Mrs. Cora Anderson of L'Anse, could influence them to pass her bill for the licensing and regulating of hair dressers and cosmeticians. This bill went down to defeat 42 to 43 and all subsequent efforts to reconsider this fatal vote and to revive the issue proved futile.

RESORTERS EXPRESS OPINIONS

THE WOMEN'S CLUBS' CANVASS BRINGS MANY LETTERS

All Favor Park Plan as Applied to Round Lake Frontage— But, Read Them

The proposition to eonvert the Round Lake frontage along Bridge street into a city park is still a live issue.

Some time ago, the Shakespeare and Dickens clubs of this city endeavored to seeure an expression of opinion from some of the best-known and most influential summer Presidents of Charlevuix as to their feelings in the matter. The general response to this "feeler," which took the form of a eircular letter sent out to a large list of resort patrons outlining the plans for park development, was instant and enthusiastic.

There are a good many of these letters and, without a single dissenting voice, their writers are in favor of the park plan. We are quoting one of them this week, with the above brief word of explanation, and will follow each week with one, possibly two nr three of the others, under the caption, "Park Plan," in order that our readers may learn what the people, whose service during three months of the summer constitutes Charlevoix's greatest and most lucrutive industry, really feel about the matter.

The letter which follows was written on Mareh 28th last by George R. Hemingway, prominent realtor of Oak Park, Ill., who is proprietor of the Charlevoix County Nurseries and veteran summer resident of Ironton:

"Shakespeare and Dickens Clubs,
Charlevoix, Michigan.

Dear Folks:—It is a great pleasure to see from your recent letter the inspiration that must be growing at Charlevoix for even more of the beautiful.

You know it is just as true there as it is in other places that unless we keep pushing forward we are apt to become self-satisfied and eventually slip hackward. This plan that is outlined or suggested is a wonderful step toward progress for making Charlevoix just about the best place that one can find on the map. Charlevoix is peculiarly situated in having its natural advantages of water, wonderful climate and soil of the finest kind for growing flowers and trees. You must get away from there, however, to appreciate it. A city beautiful plan regardless of what it is, is just like following a program in the carrying out of a meeting, or, the building of a building with plans and specifications. It is the building of the future of the city which has only been discovered during the last few years while people have been giving more thought and effort in the making of their homes and cities beautiful. No city which has formulated such a plan has had a tendeacy of slipping back, the tendency is altogether going forward and with such a plan, the city is often unified in its interests, which means that the best kind of feeling exists in the city and it has n spirit of cooperation among the inhnbitants, like one large family, families who make the best of their opportunities, ngree on the fundamentals at least, and just the way with cities. This sort of spirit attracts people, and makes the city popular. Personnlly, I am altogether for such n plan.

I can see that it is only the beginning of many wunderful things which the people of Charlevuix can become interested in, greatly to their profit. Charlevoix should be one of the finest garden spots of the world, and it can be, because there is everything there that makes flowers, shrubs, and trees bring forth tbe best that is in them.

Charlevoix should have a very active horticultural society which would be an active organization for the interest of its people, not only its summer people but its winter inhabitants, in the eulture of flowers and trees.

There should be put on in the summer time varioua flower shows, such as Dahlias, Gladiolus and Peonies, also Roses, ete., and these shows could be nationally advertised. Meetings could be heid during the year for educating those interested in the gruwing of the finer things, and during the summer, crowds would come there to see municipal gardens of various kinds and types.

There is oo,eod to what is ahead of Charlevoix but it takes united effort to bring such things about.

With all good wishes for your city's future gruwth and development, I am,

Very sincerely,
Geo. R. Hemingway."

JUNIOR CLASS PUT ON A PLAY

"The Charm School" is Coming on May Seventh

For several weeks the juniors of our high school have been very busy preparing for their play. Every effort possible has been put forth to make this play the success which they feel sure it will be.

The play is "The Charm School," by Miller and Milton. It is a comedy, full of fun and good situations. A yuung man inherits from his aunt a fashionable school for girls. He has original ideas about educational reform and one of the ideas applying to women is that they should be taught to be charming. It turns out to be like a good rule—it works both ways.

The play is to be presented at the Palace Theatre on the evening of May 7th. A matinee for the children will be given that afternoon at three o'clock.

This is one of the big occasions in the lives of these young people. Get behind them and show them that you are with them in their endeavor. Meet us at the Palace Theatre on Thursday evening of next week.

EXPLAINS LAKE LEVEL PROBLEM

works to be designed by the U. S. army engineers and to be built under their direction. (The above, as well as the paragraphs that follow, is quoted from the Recommendations of the Engineering Board of Review of the Sanitary District of Chicuso on the Lake Lowering Controversy, puhlished December 20, 1924).

The Great Lakes rise and fall 3 to 5 1-2 feet during long periods. The present low stages are due partly to natural vnriations in rainfall, evaporation and ice conditions; and partly to diversions through the Chicago drainage canal, the Welland canal, the Black Rock canal and the improved Erie canal; also for water power at Niagara; to storage of water in Lake Superior and to the enlargement of the channels in the St. Clair and Detroit rivers for navigation purposes.

The outflow from the Great Lakes can be controlled at moderate eost by works of simple character. By these works, the lakes ean be held at ns high stages as prevailed in the period from 1883 to 1887, regardless of the amount of water diverted from the lakes and connecting rivers.

Regulating works are neither experimental nor are their effects problematical. This is well illustrated by the works at the outlet of Lake Superior, which have suceessfully raised nnd controlled the level of that lake for the past eight years.

From the foregoing it will be seen that the matter of stopping the lowering of Lake Michigan wnters is a much more complicated problem than at first appears. It will bo our endeavor to give our readers further information on this interesting and to us supremely vital subject in sueceeding issues of the Courier.

Quite a number uf our summer visitors are taking advantage of the wonderful run of weather we are having to come up early this season and he on hand for the opening of the trout season. SOUTH LAKE HOST TO SISTER LODGES

Visiting Pythians Have Great Time at East Jordan

Some 15 or 18 Knights of Pythias from this city met with 25 Pythians from Central Lake, 10 or 12 from Bellaire and 8 from Traverse City with South Lake Lodge at East Jordan last Wednesday evening; in all, a gathering of ahout 100 K. of P's.

Work was put on in the first and third ranks followed by a fried liver supper which was hugely enjoyed by the participants.

A meeting of this kind, involving several organizations of a fraternal order, is a most excellent method of stimulating and perpetuating the fraternal spirit of brotherliness and goodwill. It affords an unexcelled meeting ground for citizens of different parts of the country and goes a long ways toward developing that common bond of interest and good fellowship so necessary to our social welfare.

Shortly after moving with his folks to Detroit, Nelson enrolled in one of the largest and best equipped plumbing schools in Detroit. NARROW ESCAPE FOR J. O'BRIEN

Local Farmer Nearly Killed in Runaway Last Week

James O'Brien, living on route 1, Charlevoix, had a very narrow escape from death or serious injury last Wednesday nfternoon when the team attuched to the roller with which he was leveling his field took fright and bolted, the tongue of the roller breaking loose and snubbing the heavy apparatus eight or ten feet into the air.

Mr. O'Brien, who pluckily retained his grip on the lines, thinking thnt he could stop the horses, became caught in the harness and was dragged several yards over the rough ground, bruising and shaking him up considerably. It was nothing short of a miracle that he was not killed outright. In their mad career, the runaways struck a pony grazing near by and broke both its legs, so that it had to be shot.

Will Be Sadly Missed

Lyda May Wnrner was born May 9, 1924, and departed this life April 20, 1925, at her home in Marion township, at the age of 11 months and 12 days. She was a dear, sweet babe and loved by everybody. She leaves to mourn their loss a father, mother, nine brothers and one sister, besides a multitude of relatives and friends.

Two little eyes in slumber closed,
Two little feet laid down to rest;
O, how our heart aches, none but God knows.

MRS. HENRY KAUFMAN DIES FROM A STROKE

Beloved by Family and Friends Whose Loss is Great

Mrs. Henry Kaufman died at her home on East Hurlbut avenue, this city, last Wednesday afternoon at 22 minutes past 2 o'clock. She had suffered a stroke of paralysis four weeks ago last Monday from which she rallied, apparently, but a second stroke on the Saturday preceding her death left little ground for hope that she would ever again leave her bed, which proved to be the case. She was 63 years of age.

Mrs. Kaufman and her husband hnve been residents of Charlevoix for many years. Their children grew up from infancy here and received their education in the local schools. She was a woman of fine character and kindly, generous disposition, much beloved by those who knew her. "A good friend and neighbor" is the general verdict.

The deceased is survived by her husband and three daughters; Mrs. Sarah Samuels of Brooklyn, N. Y.; Mrs. Annu Sunshine of Cincinnati, Ohio, and Mrs. Mildred Reinhart of Petoskey. Mrs. Sunshine and Mrs. Reinhart were with their mother ut the time of her death, but Mrs. Samuels was unable to be present.

The remains were taken to Petoskey Wednesday, services being performed by a rabbi of the Jewish faith and interment made in that city on Thursday of last week.

Mr. Kaufman, it is understood here, will make his home with his youngest daughter, Mildred, in Petoskey.

BRIDGE STREET'S OUR SHOW WINDOW

TOURISTS GET FIRST IMPRESSION FROM IT

This Makes Its Improvemant of Prime Importance to Town's Welfare

The letter whicb we are reproducing below is one of the answers received by the Shakespeare and Dickens Clubs to their circular letter, sent out by them to get a line on the sentiment among our summer people regarding the proposed park plan, and was written by Louis Ullman of 843 Lexington avenue, Avondale, Ciacinnati, Ohio, under date of March 10, 1925. Mr. Ullman says:

"Your letter of February 11th at hand. I believe the improvement that you contemplate would make your city one of the most beautiful places in the north.

The east side of Bridge street certainly does look dilapidated. and spoils the beautiful view of Round Lake."

We have emphasized by heavy type that part of the short note quoted because it contains in a nutshell, as it were, one of the strongest arguments in favor of the waterfront park scheme, which relates to the impression made by the town upon a person visiting it either by boat or automobile for the first time.

We may consider Bridge street and the adjacent property as the show window of Charlevoix, whetber one approaches from the land or water side; catches his first glimpse of the town from the Manitou as she swings up to her moorings in Round Lake, or is confronted with the delightful panorama of tumble down shacks and junk heaps that meets ones eastward glance as he turns onto Bridge street from Antrim, following M-11 through town.

There is an old saying, as true today as when first coined, to the effect that "first impressions are lasting." This is especially true in the case of our tourist who, if his first "sizing-up" is neither attractive nor reassuring, is not likely to take the trouble to go deeper into the matter by getting off the boat or running up the side streets in his car to see what we have that's worth while behind our cheap and seamy looking "show-window." No—he's apt to comment, "Huh! Another one of those run-down fishing villages," and keep right on a-going to some other place that looks better on the outside but perhaps hasn't half of the advantages that Charlevoix offers the summer visitor.

The remedying of this defect might not have been so important a few years ago, when the resort business of Charlevoix was of a more permanent character, depending mainly on cottage rentals and regular year by year all-season reservations at the hotels and boarding houses. For some years past, however, the automobile has been silently but steadily changing the habits of ths summer vacationists and now, instead of stopping in one place for an entire season, hs is on wheels and flitting about from place to place, aettling for one or two days at a time in whatever apot looks most inviting. If you want his business, you must literally catch him and hold him. According to last years figures, the average length of stay at the local auto camp was two daya, only 25 parties out of 778 taking full advantage of the two weeks time limit allowed them. It cannot be doubted that this average length of stay could have besn substantially increased had there been more and auperior advantages here to attract and hold tbem, and this means greater beauty of environment no less than facilities for amusement.

In ancient times, when the African city of Carthage was becoming the most powerful and dangerous rival of Rome, ths then mistress of the world, an aged senator arose in his seat at every session of the Roman legislative body and pronounced with solemn emphasis the words, "Carthage must bs dostrnyed" and then rosumsd his seat. This continued until the fears and patriotism of the Roman paople wsro awakened and their dangerous rival removed. Like ths aged sage and with equal emphasis, we are going to rise in our place and declaim at every opportunity, "Charlevoix must have a waterfront park." This is not as fanciful a comparison as it may seem at first glance. Think it over.

CAME FROM CANADA WHEN A YOUNG MAN

The Late J. R. Walker Was a Pioaear Citizen

John Riley Walker, uncle of Mrs. Henry Howe of 305 Antrim street, this city, died at the home of his neice last Sunday morning, at eigbt o'clock, at the age of 82 years, four months and three days, following an illness of several months duratlon.

Mr. Walker, whn was born in Ottawa, Canada, in December, 1842, came to this country at the age of 21 years and first settled on a bomestead near the village of South Arm. Since the death of his wife some years ago, he had made his home with his neiee, Mrs. Howe in this city. He is survived by two sons—John C. Walker of Saskatchewan, Canada, and A. R. Walker of Superior, Wisconsin, the latter with his wife attending the funeral in this city. There are also two living brothers and a sister—Richard Walker of this city, Thomas E. Walker of Lansing, Mich., and Mrs. A. R. Struthers of route 3, Charlevoix.

The funeral services were held at the Howe home today at 2 o'clock, Rev. Herman Burns officiating, witb interment at Brookside.

COLD FEET BUT VERY FEW FISH

EXPERIENCE OF MOST ANGLERS LAST FRIDAY

Some, However, Made Good Catches —Steel-head and Mackinaws Are Now Hitting

A number of Charlevoix trout fishermen, who spent many hours on the streams near this city last Friday—opening day of the 1925 trout season—reported having secured the day's limit. The Orr, Monroe, Intermediate, and Horton Creeks and the Cedar, Jordon and Boyne rivers and other streams of the region were visited. On some the fishermen found that on account of tbe cold spring weather the trout bad not yet come up to the upper reaches in any great number from the lakes. The fisherman with a good supply of "muddlers" was the fellow who made the good catch Friday, although the fish were loggy and made the fisherman work for those he got.

The day was cold and fishing was not the keen pleasure that bad been anticipated. One big point established, however, was that thers are still trout in northern streams, although not as many as in former seasons. The loss of the undergrowth along the banks of many streams is making itself felt in the rapid decrease in the number of brook trout found in these places. On the streams well protected with brush and trees, the number of trout appeared about the same as on the opening day of the season a year ago. Another factor that contributed to the scarcity of catches was the fact that in most of the streams the water, due to the long dry spell, was at a low mark. Pearl Johnson made a good catch in point of size, securing several up to eighteen inches in length from the pond at Boyne Falls. Ye Ed also went out with a party of friends and made a good catch. Most of those, however, who tried their luck on the opening day, returned with cold feet and few fish.

They have been making good catches of mackinaw in Pine Lake lately, Bert Beaudoin securing a good haol last Sunday. The steelhead are starting to run now. Harry Webster, tender of the P. M. R. R. bridge, caught a good sized one and a big whitefish last week.

BIG CONVENTION IS NOW SECURED

SHEET METAL CONTRACTORS COME IN JULY

Will Locate at Auto Camp aod City's Hotels and Hold Meetings at Boulder Park

Charlevoix is favored this year by being selected as the meeting place for the annual summer convention and outing of the Michigan Sheet Metal Contractors' Association.

The delegates with their families will number about five hundred persons, according to their secretary, F. E. Ederle of Grand Rapids, who was here a few days ago making his preliminary arrangements. They will distribute themselves throughout the town at the various hotels and boarding houses during the week of their visit—July 18th to 25th—and many will use the auto camp.

They will bring with them a huge marquee or chautauqua tent under which their business and social sessions will be held on the Boulder Park grounds. Their meetings will be held at night and during the day they will take part with other summer people in the town's recreational activities.

The association holds a winter convention each year in aome one of the larger cities which is devoted exclusively to business. Their summer session is always in the nature of an outing and general get-together and only such business is transacted as is of pressing importance or necessary to the conducting of the convention.

Charlevoix is very fortunate in having been chosen as the place of this yeor's meeting and the delegates may rest assured that everything possible will be done by the townspeople and those engaged more particularly in the service of summer resort patrons to make their stay a pleasant and profitable one.

Mr. Ederle and his companion, the president of the association, made a thorough inspection of the advantages of Muskegon, Ludington, Manistee, Frankfort nnd Traverse City on their way up the coast with the idea of finding a suitable place to locate. That they chose Charlevoix is both a compliment to our superior advantages and a credit to Earl A. Young of this city, who took considerable trouble and time to show the visitors our chief points of interest, the beaches, the golf course, tbe Loeb Farms, etc., and our other recreational facilities.

USED HIS CAR AS JUGGERNAUT

RAGE-CRAZED POLE ATTEMPTS WHOLESALE MURDER

Deliberately Runs Down Buggyload of People at High Spaed Following Quarrel

Joseph Silage, 33, a Polish farmer living just out of Boyne Falls, is in the county jail this week awaiting trial for a murderous attempt of more than usual ferocity and heartlessness.

Last Sunday afternoon, Silage and his wife and four weeks old baby stopped in their car on M-13, about half a mile north of Boyne Falls. The man got into some sort of an altercation with his wife and grew more violent every minute until the latter, unable to stand his abuse any longer, got out of the car witb her baby and, crossing the road to wbere Steve Germaine, a neighbor, and his wife and boy were sitting in their two-seated buggy, climbed in to return home with them

This move on the part of his wife infuriated Silage who jumped intu his car, went up the road a piece and came back at a high rate of speed, driving dellberately into the team and buggy, demolishing both vehicles and hurling the occupunts of the buggy out into the road. Silage jumped out and attempted to strike his wife in her injured condition but becoming alarmed for his own safety at the npproach of others along the road took flight, but was shortly afterwards caught by deputy sheriff Fyke and brought to this city Monday morning to be lodged in jail.

Mrs. Silage, in a desperate condition, was rushed to a Petoskey hospital. One of her legs was broken below tho knee, her hip was broken and she was hurt internally. The baby was thrown out against a telephone pole, but was (miraculously) uninjured. The Germaine boy was badly hurt and the rest of the party painfully bruised und shaken up by the collision.

Silage will be held at the jail here to await the outcome of his wife's injuries, which will determine tbo nature of the charge to be made against him and on which he will be tried. According to the statement of the prosecuting attorney, Silage's crime is the most brutal that has ever occurred in his jurisdiction.

STEPHEN HARTWELL WAS SEVENTY-EIGHT

Died at His Home Here Following Long Illness

Stephen Hartwell, widely known well-driving contractor of this city, died at his home here on last Friday, May 1st, following an illness of considerable duration.

Mr. Hartwell was born in the state of New York, on June 20, 1847. He was married to Emma Chaffee, on October 3, 1869, and to this union seven children were born, only three of whom survive. They are Mrs. Minnie Brady of St. Louis, Mich., who cared for her father in his last illness, William Hurtwell and Mrs. Mary Baker, of Remus, Mich.

The first wife of the deceased died January 22, 1890 and in 1922 he was married to Abbie Russell, who died April 1, 1924, at Charlevoix. There are eight grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

The funeral was held from the home on Monday, May 4th at 2:00 p. m., Rev. William Eldridge pastor of the Church of God at Charlevoix, officinting.

Interment was made in Brookside cemetery.

MAY HAVE BEEN FLEEING CROOK

HAMMETT'S VISITOR PROBABLY A SHADY BIRD

Caught Beside Campfire, He Skips Leaving His Equipment Behind Him

John Martin, the dairyman, living on the Petoskey road, called R. C. Hammett on the telephone last Thursday evening at about seven thirty o'clock, and told him that someone had started a fire near the edge of Mr. Hammett's 20 acre tract on Pine Point.

Mr. Hammett, accompanied by his son, Dick, and W. E. Parmelee, hurried to the spot and discovered smoke arising from an old pine stump on the property. As they approached, a man who had been sitting beside the fire arose and hurriedly took flight. In his extreme haste, he left his haversack and blanketroll behind him. Mr. Hammett, realizing that pursuit was useless at that late hour, called out to the intruder that he might return and get his belongings, as they were going as soon as they had put out the fire in the stump. But he received no answer.

Leaving Dick by the fire to see that the last embers were extinguished, Messrs. Hammett, Sr. and Parmelee walked over to the Hammett cottage to look things over there. It is more than likely that the stranger, whose collars found in the haversack bore the name of Gilroy, was a tramp or a fugitive from justice and in all prnbabllities a desperate character or he would not have made his getaway so quickly. Dick stood an excellent chance of having a pot shot taken at him, when left alone by the fire.

The captured haversack and blanket roll are now at the Courier office, where Mr. Hammett told his invisible visitor he would find them if he cared to claim them. Now, we'll wait and see if he comes back.

FARMER IS CAUGHT KEEPING A PLACE

Delos Ostrum of Out Burgess Way Is "In Durance Vile"

Delos Ostrum, a farmer living between Burgess and Bay Shore, was arrested late Tuesday afternoon of last week on the charge nf "keeping a place" and has been bound over to the circuit court at its next term for trial.

Two local men in a car were picked up shortly after noon of the 28th and liquor found in their possession. They were forced by the sheriff to tell where they got the stuff and a raid was quietly planned and executed a few hours later.

Ostrum was found at his house with a customer who was sampling his host's wares at the time the sheriff and his posse got there. A gallon of moonshine, a case of beer, a considerable amount of mash and one of the finest 25 gallon stills that the officers have ever picked up furnished the evidence and there will be little difficulty, the officers believe, in establishing an excellent case against their prisoner.

RECOMMEND REGULATING WORKS

WOULD PAY THEMSELVES IN INCREASED TONNAGE

Impracticable to Abandon Drainage Canal Entirely aod Go Back to Old Methods

Continuing from last week our discussion of the lake level and drainage problems arising from the government's action to restrain the Chicago sanitary district from diverting an excess of water from Lake Michigan for sewerage purposes—there is a distinction between "compensation works," such as submerged weirs, by which lake levels may be raised, and "regulating works" by which both the level and the discharge can be so controlled that the surplus of water in cycles or recurring periods of large yield can be conserved in storage for increase of outflow in years or seasons of scant water supply.

A reduction of the diversion at Chicago to 4,167 cu. ft. per second would raise the lake levels only 3 inches; whereas, proper regulating works would raise these levels ten or more times as much, even with an annual average diversion of 10,000 cu. ft. per second at Chicago.

No locks would be required for compensating works ample to restore all lowering of lake levels due to the Chicago diversion; but regulating works at the outlet of Lake Huron, by which both elevations and discharge can be controlled, would ultimately give better service for both navigation and power. Such regulating works would require a lock of not exceeding 5 foot lift, the passage through which would delay a boat by about one per cent of the total time required from Lake Superior to Lake Erie ports. This delay would be compensated by at least 10 per cent increase in cargo capacity, due to the greater depth of loading.

Many statements have been made of the money losses to navigation interests by reduced channel depths. Such reduction of depths can be eliminated by regulating works and, applying the same unit values as are used in such statements, the total money gains resulting from the large increase in depths which regulating works would create would give to the navigation interests such large benefits that there is no doubt as to the desirability of such works.

To abandon the main drainage canal and again discharge the sewage into Lake Michigan, even though the most effective means be provided for purification of the sewage and the water supply, would be a serious backward step in sanitation. Failure to take reasonable and proper advantage of natural and artificial conditions would not be justified.

The plan for sanitary improvemeot, authorized in 1889 and executed at a capital cost to date of approximately $100,000,000, was not only sound but the best that could have been devised. It has been a success. The typhoid fever death rate has been reduced from a maximum of 174 per 100,000 inhabitants in 1891 to less than 2 per 100,000 in 1917; since then it has remained consistently below 2, with an average of less than 1.2 per 100,000 inhabitants.

CHAPTER XV.

Throughout the forenoon Webster and Dolores, from the deck of the steamer, watched the city. By ten o'clock the squads of battle had swelled to a deeper, steadier roar, and refugees arriving brought various and fragmentary stories of the fighting. From this hodge-podge of misinformation, however, Webster decided that Ricardo's troops were forcing the issue with vim and determination, and since the most furious fighting was now well in toward the heart of the city, it seemed reasonable to presume the struggle was for possession of the arsenal and palace.

At noon the deep diapason of conflict began to slacken; by one o'clock it had dwindled considerably, and at two o'clock Webster, gazing anxiously cityward, observed Leber's launch coming rapidly out from shore. At the wheel stood Don Juan Cafetero; as the launch shot in under the vessel's side he looked up, searching for Webster's face among the curious throng that lined the rail.

"Who has won?" a voice called, and another, evidently a humorist and a shrewd judge of human nature, replied: "Why ask foolish questions? The rebels, of course. That fellow's Irish and the Irish are born rebels. Look at the scoundrel. He's black with gun grease and burned powder where he isn't red with blood. The butcher!"

"F'sugh-a-ballagh!" he shrieked. "We've got the divils cornered now. 'Twill be over two hours hince."

Don Juan tied up the launch at the gangway and leaped up the ladder, three steps at a time. "Glory be to God," he panted and hurled himself into Webster's arms. "I was in it! I was. I got back in time to catch up wit' the lads at the warehouse an' they were the fine, fightin' devils, I'll gamble you. Och, 'twas a grrand bit av a fight—whilst it lasted. They put me in the motor-thruck, loadin' the belts wit' ca'tridges as fast as the gunners emptied thim, but faith they couldn't keep me there. I got into the heart av the scrimmage in the yard av the arsenal an' faith 'twas well for that little Docthar Pacheco I did. 'Twas wurrk to me likin'. I'd a machete—"

"You bloodthirsty scoundrel!" Webster shook the war-mad son of Erin. "I told you not to mix in it, but to hang around on the fringe of the fight, and bring us early news. Suppose you'd been killed? Who would have come for us then? Didn't I tell you we had a dinner engagement in the palace?"

"Me on the fringes av a fight?" sputtered Don Juan, amazed and outraged. "Take shame for yerself, sor. There was niver the likes ev me hung around the fringes ev a fight, an' well ye know it."

"I'm amazed that you even remembered your instructions," Webster rasped at him.

"Sure, our division had cl'aned up nicely an' I had nothin' else to do, God bless ye. They were besiegin' the palace when I left, an' small chance av takin' it for a couple av hours; what fightin' there was on the outside was street shootin'—an' not to me likin'."

"Is it quite safe to bring Miss Huey ashore, John?"

"'Tis safe enough at the Hotel Meteo. We have the city for half a mile beyant, in the rear av them—an' they're not fightin' to get to the bay. The gunrds an' some av the Fifteenth Infanthry regimint are in the palace an' the cuartel close by, an' thim that we failed to get in the arsenal have j'ined thim. But the bulk av the Sarros army is thryin' to break through to the south an' west, to get to the hills. D'ye mind the spur threck that runs in a semi-circle around the city? Well, thin, the rebels are behint the embankmint, takin' it aisy. Have no worry, sor. Whin we've took the palace we'll move on an' dhrive the vagabones from behint up to that railroad embankmint, where Gineral Huey can bid them the time av day."

Webster turned to Dolores. "Do you wish to go ashore?"

She nodded, her flashing eyes bent in admiration upon the gory, grimy Don Juan Cafetero, for she was half Irish, and in that amazing meeting she knew the outcast for one of her blood. "I think my brother will sleep in his father's old room tonight," she murmured softly. "And I would sleep in mine."

They followed Don Juan down the gangway to the launch and sped back to the city. The door of Leber's warehouse stood wide open; within was a litter of greasy rags and broken packing cases, with Lebar, quite mystified, sitting on a keg of nails and staring curiously at it all.

Guided by Don Juan Cafetero, Webster and Dolores passed on up the Calle San Rosario. Occasionally a bullet, fired two or three miles to the west, droned lazily overhead or dropped with a sharp metallic sound on the corrugated-iron roofs of a building. At the hotel the proprietor alone was in evidence, seated behind the desk smoking in profound indifference.

In response to Webster's eager inquiries for the latest news from the front, the placid fellow shrugged and murmured: "Quien sabe?" Evidently for him such stirring scenes had long since lost their novelty; the bloom was off the peach, as it were.

Webster went upstairs and helped himself to another automatic and several spare clips of shells which he had left in his trunk. On his return to the lobby, Dolores saw what a very nearsighted person, indeed, would have seen—to wit: that he was not pleased to remain in the hotel and with the spirit of adventure strong within him was desirous of progressing still farther toward the firing, in the hope of eliciting some favorable news as to the progress of the fight. She realized, however, that he would do his duty and remain with her in the hotel; so she said gayly:

"Suppose we walk out a little farther, Caliph. Many of the side streets will be as safe and peaceful as one could desire, and if warfare should develop in our vicinity we can step into some house."

"I do not like to have you run the slightest risk—" he began, but she pooh-poohed him into silence, took him by the arm with a great air of camaraderie, and declared they should go forth to adventure—but cautiously.

Webster glanced at Don Juan. "We can go a half or three quarters of a mile out the Calle San Rosario, sor," the Irishman answered. "After that 'twill not be a pleasant sight for the young leddy—an' there may be some shootin'. Squads of the government troops took refuge in the houses an' took to sulpin'. 'Twill be shlow wurrk roundin' the last av thim up. Even afther the fight is over, there'll be scatterin' shootin', scrapes all av the night long, I'm thinkin'."

"At the slightest danger we'll turn back," Webster announced, and with Don Juan Cafetero scouting the way a block in advance they progressed slowly toward the center of the disturbance.

Soon they passed a horse dead in the middle of the street; a little farther on one of the machine-gun company, a lank Texan, sat on the curb rolling a cigarette with his left hand. He had a bullet through his right shoulder and another through the calf of his leg and had received no first aid attention; the flies were bothering him considerably and he was cursing softly and fluently, like the ex-mule-skinner he was.

Farther on another white invader lay face down in the gutter; for him the fight had ended almost ere it had begun. In the next block half a dozen sandal-footed Sobranteans, in the blue and red-trimmed uniform of the Guardia Civil, lay sprawled in uncouth attitudes, where the first burst of a machine gun had caught them as they rushed out of the police station to repel the advancing mercenaries.

Seeing that the main street of the city would assume even a more grisly aspect the longer they followed it, Don Juan led Webster and Dolores a couple of blocks down a cross street and turned out into the Calle de Hernandes, parallel to the Calle San Rosario. There had been no shooting in this street, apparently; as they proceeded not even a stray bullet whined down the silent calle.

Four blocks from the government palace they found the narrow sidewalks of this quiet street lined with wounded from both sides, with a doctor and half a dozen of Ricardo's hired fighters ministering to them; as they threaded their way between the recumbent figures they came upon Mother Jenks, brandy bottle and glass in hand, "doing her bit."

"Hah! So here you are, my lamb," she greeted Dolores. "Right-o. Just where yer ought to be, Gor' bless yer sweet face. Let these poor misfortunate lads see that the sister an' the new president ain't too proud to care for 'em. 'Ere, lass, 'Old up the 'ead an' this young cockerel with the 'ole in 'is neck. 'Ere, lad. Tyke a brace now! 'Ere's some o' your own people, not a lot o' bloomin' yeller bellies, come to put something else in yer neck—somethink that'll stimulate yer."

The "young cockerel," a blond youth of scarce 20 summers, twisted his head and grinned up at Dolores as she knelt beside him to lift him up. "Here, here, sister," he mumbled, "you'll get that white dress dirty. Never mind me. It's just a flesh wound, only my neck has got stiff and I'm weak from loss of blood."

Mother Jenks winked at Webster as she set a glass of brandy to the stricken adventurer's lips. "Give me a bit o' the white meat, as my sainted 'Enery used to s'y," she murmured comically.

Dolores looked up at Webster. "I'll stay here," she said simply. "I've found a job helping Mother Jenks. You and Don Juan may run along if you wish. I know you're as curious as children."

They were. It would have been impossible for any man with red corpuscles in his blood to harken to the shooting and shouts only three city blocks distant without yearning to see the fight itself.

"I'll return in 15 minutes, at the latest," he promised her, and with Don Juan Cafetero, who had helped himself to a rifle and bayonet from one of the wounded, he turned the corner into the next street which they followed west through a block plentifully sprinkled with the dead of both factions.

Don Juan led the way through an alley in the rear of the Cstedral de la Sante Cruz to the door of the sacristy; as he placed his hand on the latch three rifle bullets struck around them, showering them with fragments of falling adobe.

"There's a house party in the neighborhood," yelled Don Juan and darted into the church, with Webster at his heels, just in time to escape another fusillade. They walked through the sacristy and passed through a door into the great cathedral, with its high, carved, gothic-arched ceiling. Through the thick-closed doors of the main entrance, lost in the dimness of space out in front, the sounds of the battle half a block away seemed very distant, indeed.

They passed the altar and Don Juan genuflected and crossed himself reverently. "I'll be after makin' me confession," he whispered to Webster. "Wait for me, sor."

He leaned his rifle against the altar railing, crossed the church and touched lightly on the shoulder a monk kneeling in prayer before the altar of the Virgin; the latter bent his head while Don Juan whispered; then he rose and both went into the confessional, while Webster found a bench along the wall and waited.

Presently Don Juan came forth, knelt on the red-tiled floor and prayed—something, Webster suspected, he had not done for quite a while. And when he had finished his supplication and procured his rifle, Webster joined him, the monk unbolted the door and from the quiet of the house of God they passed out into the street and the tumult of hell.

"I've been clost to death this day," Don Juan explained, "an' the day is not done. Be the same token, 'tis long since I'd made me last confession; sure, until you picked me out av the mire, sor, 'tis little thought I had for the hereafter."

From their place they could see a dozen or more of Ricardo's hired fighters crouched under the shelter of the palace walls across the street. "I think we'll be safer there," Webster cried, as a couple of bullets struck the stone steps at their feet and ricocheted against the cathedral door. "That rifle of yours is making you a marked man, Don Juan."

They ran across the street and joined the men under the palace wall.

"What's this?" Don Juan demanded briskly. "Have ye not shmoked thim out yet?"

"Nodding doing," a young German answered. "Der chief has sent word dot we shall not artillery use on der palace. Men all aroundt it we haf, mit a machine gun commanding each gate; most of der poys have chust maved out west in der rear of der government troops."

"Then," Don Juan declared with conviction, "there'll be no fighting here to speak av, until later."

"Der is plenty of choy hunting snipers, mein freund. Der houses hereabouts vos filled mit dem."

"I'll have no cat fights in mine," Don Juan retorted. "Come wit' me, so, an' we'll be in at the death out beyant at the railroad embankment."

"Too late," Webster answered, for on the instant to the west the crackle of rifle and machine gun fire interluded with the staccato barks of a Maxim-Vickers broke out, swelling almost immediately to a steady outpouring of sound. "We'll stay here where we're safe for the finals. When General Huey has cleaned up out there he'll come here to take command."

For half an hour the sounds of a brisk engagement to the west did not slacken; then with disconcerting suddenness the uproar died away fully 50 per cent.

"They're going in with the bayonet and machetes," somebody who knew remarked laconically. "Wait and you'll hear the cheering."

They waited fully ten minutes, but presently, as the firing gradually died away, they heard it, faint and indistinguishable at first, but gradually coming nearer. And presently the trapped men in the palace heard it, too. "Viva Huey! Viva! Viva Huey!"

"All over but the shouting," Don Juan remarked disgustedly. "The lads in the palace will surrindher now. Sure Gineral Huey was right afther all. For why should be shoot holes in the house he's goin' to live in, an' where, be the same token, he gives a dinner party this night?"

"I'm glad the end is in sight," Webster replied. "We have no interest in this revolution, John, and it isn't up to us to horn in on the play; yet if it went against the Huey faction, I fear we'd be forced into active service in spite of ourselves. There is such a thing as fighting to save one's skin, you know."

Don Juan laughed pleasurably. "What a shame we missed the row out beyant at the railroad embankmint," he declared.

"I wish you'd kept out of it, Don Juan. What business had you in the fight at the cuartel? Suppose you'd been killed?"

"Small loss!" Don Juan retorted.

"I should have mourned you nevertheless, John."

"Would you thet same?" Don Juan's buttermilk eyes lighted with affection and pleasure. "Would it put a pang in the heart of you, sor, to see me stretched?"

BEGIN THE BATTLE EARLY

In the national election of 1924 over six million votes were east for a party having for its chief plank a plan to make the supreme court of the United States subservient to the whims of congress. It was a dangerous experiment to propose in a representative government, yet the movement carried the election in a number of large cities, showing there is a grave danger confronting this country unless positive steps are taken to curb its further spread before another election day rolls around.

It is all very well to be tolerant with those who would preach strange doctrines, for the constitution is based upon the privilege of free speech, but when any man or set of men counsel the overthrow of the supremacy of the judiciary it is high time they were summarily dealt with. In the rural districts of the country there is very little to be heard about sovietism, for homeowners are capitalists in the soviet sense, and capitalists are not supposed to be in sympathy with the teachings of the "committee of 48."

We nre missing a wonderful opportunity if we do not commence our campaign of education now, instead of waiting until the spring of 1928. A movement, that in less than six months of active campaigning can attract six million followers, should demand our closest attention. We will do well to teach continuously from every pulpit and platform the doctrines of Americanism, to literally shout it from the housetops, lest the people warm this reptile of communism to their bosom, only to awnken too late to prevent the serpent's deadly sting.

WHAT IS PROSPERITY?

Have you ever attempted to define prosperity—to analyze just exactly what is meant when we say this nation is in a prosperous condition? There are a good many false ideas of what prosperity is really like. Some judge the business condition of the country through stock movements, not having the acumen to rccognize real prosperity when they meet it face to face. The recent fluxations of the stock exchange, the sharp decline in the price of wheat, has brought out of hiding all sorts of pessimists who would have us believe this country is really in a bad financial condition.

To some prosperity means inflation, which is always dangerous. To others it means plenty of jobs at good wages, with very little work to do; to others it means false conditions brought about through legislation.

Sound prosperity comes only in a slow, steady growth.. It comes when workers realize there is nothing worth while to be obtained in this world unless we are willing to exchange worth while efforts for it. Sound prosperity to the manufacturer means marketable products at honest prices, so that the buying power of the people may be maintoined over a long period of time. Our present readjustment has been slow, just as it should be. One thing for us to remember is, the war days are over ond we should no longer expect to realize the maximum returns for a minimum of effort.

RUSSIA'S PLIGHT

Russian sovietism was to bring the millenium, through legislation, to a liberated people. Through the rule of state all the ills of a great nation were to be swept aside, and a golden age was supposed to take its place with the plain people sitting in judgment in the high places.

Russia's present plight hns struck horror to the entire world. Today she faces famine. Sovietism last fall sold the Russian wheat supply abroad in order to obtain gold to bolster up its own dangerous army and politicinns. Now, without either gold or credit, they are unable to buy grain back from other nations, and the people are starving. To add to their misery, another pay day approaches when the Soviet government will attempt to fill an improverished treasury from n helpless people.

It will be well for us to remember that part of the money received from the sale of wheat out of the mouths of the people of Russia, is being used today to spread their propaganda here in the United States. In spite of the disaster that has overtnken Sovietism in Europe, they are attempting to ensnare the entire world in their meshes and bring civilization into chaos.

FRESHENING BREEZES

What has become of the old-fashioned village council that were fearful the taxpayers might rebel if they raised the lamp-lighter's salary to six dollars a week?

A hick town is where the postmastership and the 4rd agency are still considered good jobs.

Let's lift the shoe over onto the other foot, and wonder what the legislators think of us when they witness nbout every city and village in their district voting a passel of new taxes.

It is claimed that invanting the mirror did more to cut down conceit than any other ageney known to mankind.

It took the world flyers just a little space of time to encircle the globe, but seventeen years will elapse before the booking ageneies will allow them to complete the story of their trip.

The most pitiful thing in the world is to see a sensible man linked up to a foolish woman.

Still, when we see those balloon-shoped trousers we know the time is coming when a lot of perfectly nice girls are going to come in for a share of our sympathy.

Speaking about college professors being absent-minded, we wonder if any of you folks ever watched a radio bug twirl the dial on the office safe after spending the night before trying to tune in on Chile?

Prosperity to some people means unlimited credit at the town grocery store.

Tell the next "blue sky" salesman that comes along you'll be glad to buy if he'll get the endorsement of the town banker. You won't see him again, and you will have saved yourself a lot of money.

A member of the legislature arose the other day and said he had been approached by a lobbyist who had offered him a bribe. Unless one is mighty cnreful and unusually honest they can nlways find what they are looking for.

Success is more apt to grasp the man with work-soiled fingers by the hand, while the kid-gloved lounge lizard is wondering where his next good time is coming from.

"Let's get supper down town tonight, and afterwards go to the movies," is not the best way in the world to start saving for the home of your honeymoon dreams.

Words of sympathy may be golden, but a few figures in a bank book are mighty reassuring when adversity comes.

A hick town is where the village banker has palpitation every time he sees a stranger peering through the window.

What has become of the old-fashioned gent who ust to peel off a red flannel chest protector along about this season of the year?

If the blue laws were made to include player-pianos they'd get a whole lot more support from the common run of mankind.

When the pioneers eame to Michigan they built a schoolhouse and a church in every neighborhood, and afterwards a little plot of ground was set nside in which to lay away their reverenced dead. Today the churches are falling into decay, the schools are being deserted, while weeds and brambles flourish where the forefathers of the hamlet sleep. What a fine thing it would be if the grandsons and granddaughters would return from the city to the country lanes and renew once more the old pioneer spirit of this state.

They Are Good Tires

GOODYEAR and SIEBERLING

Automobile owners today are demanding tires that give mileage and service. The cost of all tires of standard makes are about the same, but the length of service varies. Nothing is more exasperating to a motorist than to buy a new tire and have it blow out or rim cut before he has run it five hundred miles.

We Recommend Goodyear and Sieberling Tires

You may ask why? Our answer is that they give better satisfaction than any tire we have ever sold, and we have sold nearly every make of tire. Further, we can safely guarantee these tires to any autoist. And we prefer to sell these kind of tires.

Fabrics, Cords, Balloons, Truck Tires

NEW PAVILION AT PINE POINT

NEW YORKER ERECTING FINE DANCE HALL

Music by University Orchestra, Chicken and Fish Dinners and Everyth'n

W. E. Parmelee, local contractor, broke ground last Saturday for Charlevoix's new dance hall, which is located on the Petoskey road, about 300 yards east of the entrance to the Pine Point resort, on the north side of the Petoskey road in the clearing where Gene Fairchild has his blacksmith shop.

The man behind this venture is a New Yorker named Thorman, who has business interests in that city and in Seattle, Washington. His new enterprise is unique in this locality and bids fair to be a most popular feature. Perhaps the place that most nearly approximates it is the Oatka Beach resort out of Traverse City.

Thorman bought the property through R. C. Hammett of this city and will erect thereon a story and a half building, 46 feet long by 48 feet in width, facing the south, with a sun parlor on the west end of the main floor and a dance floor 25 feet square, surrounded on the south, east and west sides by a raised platform, ten feet wide and 8 inches high to be used for tables. On the north end of the room will be a raised platform for the orchestra, also 8 inches in height. On this floor will be located the kitchen, two rest rooms and two cloak rooms to the right and left of the front entrance, also a soda fountain. There are to be two large stone fire places at either end of the dancing floor.

Upstairs, the plans call for five bedrooms, a hall, a sitting room and a large bathroom for the help. There is also a large balcony over the front porch for the help.

It is the expressed intention of the proprietor to serve chicken and fish dinners and the sun room will be used for card parties in the afternoon.

Mr. Thorman expects to have his building ready for business in about six or seven weeks. As we understand, it is the intention to have dances every night in the week except Sundays and an effort is being made to secure the services of Billy Watkin's University of Michigan orchestra. Watkins was formerly a member of the famous Kennedy's Firsts.

"Yes, it would, John. You're a wild, impulsive, lunatic, worthless Irishman, but there's a broad vein of pay ore in you, and I want you to live until I can develop it. When Mr. Gentry returns to operate the mine, he'll need a foreman he can trust."

"And do you trust me, sor?"

"I do indeed, John. By the way, you never gave me your word of honor to cut out red liquor for keeps. Up till today I've had to watch you—and I don't want to do that. It isn't dignified for either of us, and from today on you must be a man or a mouse. If you prove yourself a man, I want you in my business; if you prove yourself a mouse, somebody else may have you. How about you, John? The cantinas will be open tonight, and fire water will be free to the soldiers of the new republic. Must I watch you tonight?"

Don Juan shook his reckless red head. "I'll never let a drop of liquor cross my lips without your permission, sor," he promised simply. "I am the man and you are the master."

"We'll shake hands on that!" After the western habit of validating all verbal agreements with a hand shake, Webster thrust his hard hand out to his man, who took it in both of his and held it for half a minute. He wanted to speak, but couldn't; he could only show his head as his eyes clouded with the tears of his appreciation. "Ah, sor," he blurted presently, "I'd die for ye an' welcome the chanst."

A wild yell of alarm broke out in the next block, at the north gate of the palace; there was a sudden flurry of rifle fire and cries of "Here they come! Stop them! Stop them! They're breaking out!"

Without awaiting orders the hired fighters along the wall—some 15 of them—leaped out into the street, forming a skirmish line, just as a troop of cavalry, with drawn sabers, swept around the corner and charged upon the devoted little line. "Sarros must be tryin' to make his get-away," Don Juan Cafetero remarked coolly, and emptied a saddle. "They threw open the big palace gate, an the guards are clearin' a way for him to the bay." He emptied another saddle.

In the meantime Ricardo's fire eaters had not been idle. The instant the guards turned into the street a deadly magazine fire had been opened on them. They had already suffered heavily winning through the gate and past the besiegers in front of it, but once they turned the corner into the next street they had the fire of but a handful of men to contend with. Nevertheless it was sufficiently deadly. Many of the horses in the front rank went down with their riders, forcing the maddened animals behind to clear their carcasses by leaping over them, which some did. Many, however, tripped and stumbled in their wild gallop, spilling their riders.

"Stay by the wall, you madman," Webster ordered. "There'll be enough left to ride down those men in the street and saber them!"

And there were! They died to a man, and the sadly depleted troop of guards galloped on, leaving Don Juan and Webster unscathed on the sidewalk, the only two living men unhurt in that shambles.

Not for long, however, did they have the street to themselves. Around the corner of the palace wall a limousine, with the curtains drawn, swung on two wheels, skidded, struck the carcass of a horse and turned over, catapulting the chauffeur into the middle of the street.

"Sarros!" shrieked Don Juan and ran to the overturned vehicle. It was quite empty.

"Bully boy, Senor Sarros," Webster laughed. "He's turned a pretty trick, hasn't he? Sent his guards out to hack a pathway for an empty limousine! That means he's hoping to draw the watchers from the other gate!"

But Don Juan Cafetero was not listening; he was running at top speed for the south gate of the palace grounds—and Webster followed.

As they swung into the street upon which this south gate opened, Webster saw that it was deserted of all save the dead, for Sarros' clever ruse had worked well and had had the effect of arousing the curiosity of his enemies as to the cause of the uproar at the north gate, in consequence of which they had all scurried around the block to see what they could see, thus according Sarros the thing he desired most—a fighting chance and a half minute to get through the gate and headed for the steamship landing without interference.

Webster and Don Juan came abreast the high, barred gate in the thick, 20-foot masonry wall as the barrier swung back and a man, in civilian clothes, thundered through on a magnificent bay thoroughbred.

"That's him. Shtop the divil!" screamed Don Juan. "They'll do the decent thing be him if I take him alive."

To Webster, who had acquired the art of snap shooting while killing time in many a lonely camp, the bay charger offered an easy mark. "I hate to down that beautiful animal," he remarked—and pulled away.

The horse leaped into the air and came down stiff-legged; Sarros spurred it cruelly, and the gallant beast strove to gather itself into its stride, staggered and sank to its knees, as with a wild Irish yell Don Juan Cafetero reached the dictator's side.

Sarros drew a revolver, but before he could use it Don Juan lapped him smartly over the head with his rifle barrel, and the man toppled inertly to the ground beside his dying horse.

"More power to ye sor," Don Juan called cheerily and turned to receive Webster's approval.

What he saw paralyzed him for an instant. Webster was standing beside the gate, firing into a dozen of Sarros' soldiery who were pouring out of a house just across the street, where for an hour they had crouched unseen and unheard by the Ruey men at the gate. They were practically out of ammunition and had merely been awaiting a favorable opportunity to escape before the rebels should enter the city in force and the house-to-house search for snipers should begin. They had been about to emerge and beat a hasty retreat, when Sarros rode out at the gate, and with a rush they followed, gaining the sidewalk in time to be witnesses to the dictator's downfall.

For a moment they had paused, huddled on the sidewalk behind their officer, who, turning to scout the street up and down, beheld John Stuart Webster standing by the gate with an automatic in his hand. At the same instant Webster's attention had been attracted to the little band on the sidewalk; in their leader he recognized no less a personage than his late acquaintance, the fire eating Capt. Jose Benavides. Coincidentally Benavides recognized Webster.

It was an awkward situation. Webster realized the issue was about to be decided, that if he would have it in his favor, he should waste not one split-second before killing the mercurial Benevides as the latter stood staring at him. It was not a question, now, of who should beat the other to the draw, for each had already filled his hand. It was a question, rather, as to who should recover first from his astonishment. If Benavides decided to let bygones be bygones and retreat without firing a shot, then Webster was quite willing to permit him to pass unmolested; indeed, such was his aversion to shooting any man, so earnestly did he hope the Sobrantean would consider that discretion was the better part of valor, that he resolved to inculcate that idea in the Hotspur.

"Captain Benavides," he said suavely, "your cause is lost. If you care to escape aboard the steamer, I will see to it that you are not removed from her before she sails; if you care to surrender to me now, I give you my word of honor you will not be executed."

Benavides might have had, and doubtless did have, his faults, but cowardice was not one of them. And he did have the ghost of a sense of humor. An evil smile flitted over his olive features.

"Without taking into consideration the bayonets at my back," he replied, "it strikes me the odds are even now. And yet you patronize me."

Webster was hurried. "I'd rather do that than kill you, Benavides," he retorted. "Don't be a fool. Run along and sell your papers, and take your pitiful little sandal-footed brigands with you. Scat!"

Benavides' hand, holding his pistol, had been hanging loosely at his side. With his furious glance meeting Webster's unfalteringly, with the merest movement of his wrist and scarcely without movement of his forearm, he threw up his weapon and fired. Scarcely a fifth of a second had elapsed between the movement of his wrist and the pressure of his finger on the trigger; Webster, gazing steadily into the somber eyes, had noted no hint of the man's intention, and was caught actually off his guard.

The bullet tore through his biceps, momentarily paralyzing him, and his automatic dropped clattering to the sidewalk; as he stooped and recovered it, Benavides fired again, creasing the top of his left shoulder. The Sobrantean took him for a third and finishing shot, but when he pulled the trigger the hammer fell on a defective cartridge, which gave to John Stuart Webster all the advantage he craved. He planted a bullet in Benavides' abdomen with his first shot, blew out the duelist's brains with his second, and whirled to meet the charge of the little sandal-footed soldados, who, seeing their leader fallen, had without an instant's hesitation and apparently by mutual consent decided to avenge him.

METHODIST CHURCH

This Sunday is Mothers' Day. How long since you wrote mother?

The Mothers' Day service ought to call out to church every mother's son and daughter. It is the challenge from a most noble life. This custom of a service designed chiefly in the interest of our mothers is becoming more and more accepted by the public. 10:30, the pastor will preach. Theme: "My Mother." Reservations for shut-ins and Ladies' Relief Corps. The full house is at your service in honor of your mother. Wear a white flower if mother is deceased, a colored one if she still lives. The choir has prepared special selections for this event.

12 o'clock, Sunday school. The lesson is "Phillip and the Ethiopian." This reading from Isaiah, the prophet which foretold the coming of Christ, gave inspiration to this man. We may now read that he has come and take courage. Be in Sunday school and take some active part.

The Juniors meet at 3:00 p. m. This coming together always warrants an interesting meeting. Try it.

6:30 Epworth League. If you should look in on the assembled young people you would be happy. This is a real live bunch—a bevy of bubbling youth, plus religious fervor. It was not "Old Hundred" that greeted Boyne City when they visited us last Friday night, but a young hundred. The largeness of our social rooms was taxed to its utmost. The splendid equipment of our newly furnished kitchen, the spacious capacity for the gathering together, tend to make our church better able for successful social attainments.

7:30, evening worship. The pastor will preach on the subject, "The Universal Call of the Gospel." Hear the sermon.

Monday, 7:15 p. m., young people's prayer meeting in Epworth League room. 8:00 p. m., official board meeting in the church study.

Thursday prayer meeting at 7:30. We are reading Romans, 11th chapter. Peruse it and be able to talk from some part.

The May meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society will meet with Mrs. Nordrum, 105 Park avenue, May 12th, at 2:30 p. m. Mrs. Simmon's division will have the program and serve. Kindly bring your blocks for quilt, also rags for rugs. Be prepared to sew.

Superintendent Blewfield will speak at Greensky Hill Indian church at 2:30 p. m. Sunday. All are invited.

CHURCH OF GOD

A welcome as warm as we know how to give will be given you to all our services, which we are pleased to announce as follows:

Preaching service Sunday, May 10, 10:30, from text Jude, 3, "Beloved then I gave all diligence to write unto you of the common salvation, it was needful for me to write unto, and exhort you that ye should earnestly contend for the faith once delivered unto the saints."

Sunday school at 11:45, Phillip and the Ethiopian Treasurer, Acts, 8:26-39. A. L. Cuild superintendent.

Young people's meeting at 6:30 Sunday evening.

Preaching service at 7:30 on evangelistic subject.

Prayer meeting each Wednesday evening at 7:30.

We are planning on our young people meeting with the Church of God young people's class in Petoskey on Friday evening at 7:45, their meeting place being the Church of God chapel, 700 Howard street. Any interested person is invited to attend with us. This service will consist of songs, prayer, talks and suggestions for the spirituel welfare and prosperity of God's cause in this section, especially among our young people.

UNDER THE DOME AT LANSING

(Special to the Courier)

Wayne county and Governor Groesbeek's administration were triumphant in one of the most interesting and bitterly contested conflicts which has been staged in the Michigan state legislature for many sessions, when the house passed, 57 to 33, the Wood bill which allows Wayne two additional senators and groups the rural counties into larger senatorial districts to make possible these additional Wayne county seats.

The relentless and uncompromising pressure brought to bear upon many up-state representatives caused them to change their original attitude and to support the bill. However, the battle was a merry one to the very last and when the final vote was cast, the friends of senatorial redistricting had but six votes to spare. The following shows the way in which the representatives lined up on this important issue: For the Wood bill: Mrs. Anderson, Armstrong, Bartlet, Beam, Binning, Bristow, Bryant, Callender, Wm. B. Campbell, Cowan, Crutchfield, Culver, Darin, Farrand, Farrier, Fitch, Green, Haight, Harris, Hartman, Hartzog, Holland, Howell, Hoyt, Hulett, Jewell, Johnson, Langsford, Lawson, MacKinnon, Madill, McKenzie, McKibbin, McNitt, Miller, Ming, David F. Morrison, Mnrphy, Netting, Ormsbee, Osborn, Palmer, Peters, Preston, Charles H. Reed, Archie M. Reid, Richardson, Sink, Skeels, Snow, Strauch, VanEvery, Walters, Warner, Watson, Hayes E. Wells, Speaker F. B. Wells; total—57.

Against the Wood bill: Black, Brainerd, Brake, Jos. L. Campbell, Clancy, Curtis, DeBoer, Dexter, Espie, Evans, Gnrdner, Gillett, Kirby, Kooyers, Lewis, Look, MacDonald, McEachron, Edward C. Morrison, Musson, O'Beirne, Oberdorffer, O'Connell, Odell, Rauchholz, J. Herbert Read, Rorick, Roxburgh, Walter J. Thomas, Wm. J. Thomas, Turner, Upjohn, Wade; total—33.

Methods Leave Bitterness

The increase in the number of Wayne county senators from 5 to 7 means that Wayne county will have six more members in the next constitutional convention. This was one of the reasons why the Detroit delegation moved heaven and earth to get the bill passed.

Passage of the Wood bill was hailed as a grent triumph for Governor Groesbeck because it was largely due to pressure from his office that the necessary votes were seeured. Resentment because of the methods employed to browbeat and induce many members into supporting the bill rankled in the hearts of many house members. When the final vote on the bill was announced, Representative David H. Brake of Fremont arose and moved that "we present to the administration this capitol and all that goes with it and that the legislature then adjourn for a period of twenty years."

The same sentiment prompted Senator Bernie L. Case of Ithaca, to introduce a resolution providing for a constitutional amendment to abolish the legislature entirely. Senator Case declared that "The legislature is an unnecessary expense as long as the administration board headed by the governor is virtually in control of the state."

In addition to the squabble over reapportionment there were many other interesting controversies to enliven the closing hours of the 1925 legislature. As usual, a large portion of the time was devoted to reaching final agreement between the senate and house regarding many of the more important appropriation bills. It will be several days before anyone knows exactly just how much money the legislatnre has appropriated and what the consequent state tax will be. It is predicted that it will amount to nearly $20,000,000 for each of the next two years.

One of the most dramatic and intense legislativa battles of the last week centered around Senator Karcher's bill to permit railways and interurbans to use busses for supplementing their steam service. It is common knowledge that practically every railway in Michigan is paralleled by privately owned bus lines which have been taking a large portion of the passenger traffic during the favorable seasons of the year.

Tha railroads which have to purchase and improve their own rights of way and furnish regular and continuous service have been at a serious disadvantage. In some instances they have desired to use busses for handling their passenger traffic at certain seasons but their petitions have been denied by the Michigan public utilities commission on the ground that they could not show sufficient "necessity" and convenience."

Most of the fights over the Karcher bill arose over various amendments which if adopted would have required the railroads to secure permission from the public utilities commission before they could operate any bus lines. However, all of these amendments were finally defeated and the bill passed 65 to 23. It seems probable that it will revolutionize the policies of Michigan railroads traversing the more sparsely settled districts of the state.

Representntives from northern Michigan staged a merry squabble among themselves over the Pearson bill which would have repealed the present law which places a limit of 15,000 acres on the amount of land which may be held as a private hunting or fishing preserve. This bill had passed the senate and found loud-spoken support among the representatives, but those who opposed the building up of large private holdings from which the public would be excluded finally won the day. The repealing bill mustered but 26 votes, while 59 members went on record against it. Thus the 15,000 acre limit still remains.

Though the house defeated the capital punishment bill several weeks ago, the senate took belated action to deter criminals by passing Senator Wood's bill to legalize the whipping post in Michigan. Under the terms of this measure as finally adopted it would have applied only to males and would have permitted the trial judge to impose ten lashes per year, but not to exceed a total of fifty lashes, as extra punishment for robbery committed while armed or for murder committed while attempting robbery. Monday evening the Wood bill was defeated by a 14 to 14 tie vote, but later in the week it was reconsidered and passed 17 to 12. However, it was sent to the house too late in the session to receive any attention by that body.

Farmers and all other citizens will be vitally interested in Senator Martin's bill which in its final form requires all vehicles on all public highways to display lights from one hour after sundown to one hour before sunrise. The old law applied only to trunk line highways and village streets, but the Martin bill as amended by the house applies to all highways. The penalty for violation was increased to a fine of $25 or thirty days in jail. Many members felt that it was going a step too far. The final vote was 55 to 22; 51 votes are required to pass a bill so this measure bad but 4 votes to spare.

After years of unsuccessful effort the legislature has finally passed a proposed constitutionnl amendment to be submitted to the voters, which if approved by them would increase the pay of the members of the legislature from $800 to $1200 per two year term. This resolution was defeated once or twice in the house but was finally passed and sent to the senate where it was approved 27 to 0.

A real curb on plunging into public debt through the anthorization of unwarranted bond issues was provided when the senate passed by a 23 to 3 vote Representative Evans' bill regulating mnnicipal bond issues. Under the terms of this bill, which had already passed the house, only serial bonds can be issued in tha future except in cases where a sufficient sinking fund is provided to liquidate the principal and interest charges. Supervision of such bond issues is placed under the authority of the state treasuror.

After receiving considerable opposition, Senator Brower's bill providing $75,000 a year for maintenance, operation and premiums for the Michigan State Fair at Detroit, was approved by the house. Objection was raised to this bill on tha gronnd that the fair should be self-supporting but the champions of tha bill declared that it was an educationnl institution and merited public support.

The High-Grade Gasoline

and You Buy More Miles per Gallon

Many think of motor performance in terms of "car"—as a matter of fact it is the gasoline in the tank that plays the leading part, for gasoline is the propelling force.

To appreciate this, recall that embarrassing incident of being "out of gas." As gasoline is the leading factor in performance, we are up to the point of quality.

Red Crown is the standard, high quality gasoline. It has stood the test of time; been proved and approved by millions of motorists.

It will produce more power—more speed—more mileage—per gallon, at a lower cost, than any other gasoline you can buy because the arrangement of the boiling point fractions is scientifically correct.

It vaporizes to the last drop—it delivers a bigger value per dollar spent than any other commodity we know.

The Paramount picture, "Argentine Love," coming to the Palace Theatre next Friday, was written especially for the screen by Vicente Blasco Ibanez, Spain's master of romance. It's an Allun Dwan production, featuring Bebe Daniels and Ricardo Cortez.

James Rennie and a cast of well known players appear in support of the principals.

Much of the action of Rafael Sabatini's famous novel "Captain Blood," which will be the attraction at the Palace Theatre next Saturday and Sunday, is laid on the Barbadoes, an island of the British West Indies. It is thought that the name is derived from the Indian fig tree which the Portuguese called las babadas (the bearded). The capital, Bridgetown, is reproduced in the film as it appeared in 1585 when Captain Blood was sent to the Barbadoes by the cruel King James. J. Warren Kerrigan has the title role and Jean Paige the leading feminine role. Templar Saxe is cast as Governor Stead and Wilfrid North as Col. Bishop.

"The Legend nf Hollywood" is the most human drama ever screened, and was directed by Renaud Hoffman, the young genius who was responsible for "Not One to Spare," called by many the wonder picture of the year.

MOTOR CLUB NOW WELL ORGANIZED

SERVICE POINTS ESTABLISHED ALONG ROUTE

Newest Feature is Telephone Call-Box System for Remote Districts

The Lake Shore Motor Club, the new M-11 booster organization, has now established a complete line of service stations and branches between the southern state line and Mackinac City and has issued the first of its regular bulletins for the information of its members.

This little two-sheet circular letter is addressed "To the Membership" and reads as follows:

"We are mighty anxious to keep every member of the Lake Shore Motor Club thoroughly informed as to just what is being done to install the various features of the service of our club along the entire five hundred and four miles of highway the club has as its territory, consequently you will receive from time to time this little bulletin. Read it. It will notify you of a lot of things you want to know about. You realize how impossible it is for us to keep in personal touch with each and every member, nevertheless, the more you know about the service you are entitled to the more you will use and appreciate your membership.

Attached to this bulletin you will find a card on which is listed the garages of Muskegon, Muskegon Heights and Grand Haven. These garages were installed as official service stations last week. This week service stations will be installed in Petoskey, Traverse City, Charlevoix, Frankfort, Manistee, Pentwater, Ludington, Hart and Shelby. You will immediately receive a revised garage directory. It will only be a matter of two weeks at the most until the entire garage service is arranged for.

As soon as our entire list of garages are signed up we will issue our permanent membership card which will also serve as our service station directory. In the meantime we either have sent, or are enclosing with this bulletin, a temporary membership card which you can use in conjunction with the temporary service station directory.

Emblems for your car have been on order for several days. The design selected by your club is very beautiful and requires considerable time to manufacture. It will probably be another two weeks before we receive them. However, we have ordered for each member a little plate which is attached to the license plate. This little plate shows you are a member of the Lake Shore Motor Club and also gives the name of the town you reside in.

Your club has recently become affiliated with the National Motorists' Association, headquarters Chicago, Ill. This means that your membership card in the Lake Shore Motor Club will be recognized by any automobile club in the country and will entitle you to all privileges of that club at no cost to you.

During the month of May our information bureau service will be inaugurated in each town in our territory. Road maps, logs, etc. have been ordered, and preparations have been made which will make it possible to furnish you with up-to-date information regarding road conditions.

General offices have been opened in the Occidental Hotel Building, Muskegon, corner Third Street and Clay Ave., first floor location. These quarters are only made possible at this time because of the splendid attitude of the management of the Occidental Hotel Co., who have waived the rental in order to assist the club to get started, and the Browne-Morse Co. of Muskegon, manufacturers of office furniture and equipment, are installing complete office equipment direct from their factory. Both Mr. Swett, proprietor of the Occidental Hotel, and Mr. Morse of the Browne-Morse Co. are directors of the Lake Shore Motor Club and are doing everything they possibly can to get the club under way rapidly.

We enclose a little card. It gives you a convenient opportunity of suggesting the names of any of your friends you would like to see enjoy the benefits of membership in the Lake Shore Motor Club with you. Fill it out and mail it to us, please. You will have the satisfaction of knowing you are helping to build the membership up.

Yours for service,
H. E. Galvin, Manager."

The Benjamin Brown Auto Sales has been appointed as official service station for Charlevoix and will from now on maintain a day and night service.

A new feature which the club management is endeavoring to effect is a telephone call-box service along the M-11 route, the boxes being located on the regular poles at points distant from towns, wherever the motorist is likely to get stalled or accidents to happen and quick telephone communication become a vital necessity. Each club member will be furnished with a key to fit these boxes.

COUNCIL BALKS AT TOY LIGHTS

DECIDES NOT TO SPEND OUR MONEY FOR TRINKETS

Festoon Idea Would Be the Lizard's Overcoat for a Task Town Though

The city council, at their last regular meeting on Monday night acted on the proposition to string electric light bulbs across Bridge street this summer, deciding to wait and work out a boulevard lighting system for 1926, the program to include, if possibla, the elimination of overhead telephone and electric light wiring on the main street, carrying the wires underground in conduits.

This is a wise decision and, though perhaps not a popular one at present, will be commended later on by all who will take a sober second thought. The idea of stringing electric bulbs at intervals across the street is a temporary expedient at best and in towns like Petoskey where it has been adopted, they are planning a boulevard lighting system that does credit to the town. In Traverse City, they were first put up on the occasion of a carnival or convention week as a decoration and, proving attractive, were not removed. If we put them up this season in Charlevoix, they will be used as an excuse to defer the installation of a permanent and dignified system of street lighting. The reactionary element in the town (meaning chiefly those of our citizens who are reluctant to spend a cent for anything in the line of an improvement unless they can see where they, personally, are going to get two cents back out of it) would be tickled to death to point at the Christmas tree decorations strung across the main street of the city and say in querulous accents, "What do yuh want a boulevard lighting system for. Ain't that good enough?"—and there we would be for another ten years. They might fit in very well however with the present general character of the Round Lake water-front—we hadn't thought of that.

OLDHAM CLUB OPENS WITH FISHING PARTY

Ten People Will Arrive on 21st Day of May

A fishing party will open the Oldham Glub this season on the 21st day of May, and the club will then continue to serve its patrons continuously throughout the summer.

The party will consist of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Block; Mr. and Mrs. Alvin D. Goldman, Mrs. Spiegel, Mr. and Mrs. Cahn, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rice and Joseph Oberfelder.

Some of tha guests will occupy the upper floor of the Oldham residence on Park avenue and suitable temporary quarters will be found for other members of the party.

Preparations preliminary to the opening of the club bouse are under way this week and it is a very busy place. The dance floor is being scraped and rewaxed, hangings put up and utenalls, table ware and linen stored for the winter are being brought out and checked over.

Better have your electric wiring looked over now by our expert. Better be safe than sorry. Charlevoix Hardware Co.—Adv. 19-tf.

NORTH FOX IS A BIG GRAVEL BED

THIRTY-FIVE YEARS SUPPLY IS AVAILABLE

Michigan and Indiana Interests are Seeking to Develop Valuable Deposit

A delegation of business men, headed by Lt. Governor Thomas E. Read of Michigan, arrived in this city Saturday night on their way to North Fox Island to determine its possibilities as a source of gravel and timber supply.

The party consisted of Gov. Read, Victor Russell, John Toner, Loyal Churchill and L. V. Ruckel, all of Shelby, Mich.; Charles Zapf of Traverse City; C. B. Thayer and William Fisher of Benton Harbor and several other business men from Saginaw and Detroit; the banking, insurance, lumber and gravel lines being well represented.

Capt. George W. Weaver of this city, who is personally acquainted with several members of the party and familiar with Fox Island and its surrounding waters, was selected as master of ceremonies and had previously chartered the steamer, James Sanford, for the use of the visitors. Accompanied by Captain Weaver, the party left Sunday morning for the island on their tour of inspection, which occupied about three hours.

By way of explanation, it should be stated that Governor Read and Mr. Ruckel made a trip to the island some five years ago and again, about 2 years ago, they went over with a party of 9 on the old Arbutus of the Booth Fisheries Co. It was on these early trips that the idea of utilizing the remarkable gravel deposit on the North Fox Island occurred to these gentlemen and accounts for their presence here last week.

Deposits of gravel in Michigan that can be used for road or construction work are being rapidly depleted and this makes the island's extensive, high quality gravel bed doubly valuable. It is estimated that there is enough gravel on the island to take out 2,500 tons per day for 35 years before the supply is exhausted and it runs more nearly to a uniform size than that of any other deposit in the state.

William Fisher, a member of the reconnoitering party, is the owner of an immense gravel bed in Indiana. As evidence that the demand for this material is not likely to decrease for road building and construction purposes, Mr. Fisher states that he ships his gravel into Michigan, Illinois and Ohio, but the orders bid fair to outstrip his ability to fill them and he believes that in the very near future the gravel industry in this region must seek new sources of supply.

The tentative plans of the bankers and other business men interested in the Fox Island deposit include the building of two 2,000 ton boats, somewhat on the order of a sand-sucker, equipped with loading ma-

WILSON APPROVES WATERFRONT PARK

CHICAGO CLUB'S VETERAN RESORTER SAYS O. K.

Believes Work Should Be Started at Once in Order to Reap an Earlier Benefit

The following letter, written by John P. Wilson of the Chicago law firm of Wilson, McIlvaine, Hale & Templeton, who has been a regular summer visitor to Charlevoix since 1883—a prominent member of the Chicago Club—strikes another keynote in the matter of a water-front park for Charlevoix:

"Shakespeare and Dickens Clubs,
Charlevoix, Michigan.

Gentlemen:—I have received and read with much interest your letter of February 11th concerning the proposed widening of Bridge street and the laying out of a park between Bridge street and Round Lake.

I have been spending my summers in Charlevoix ever since the year 1883 and am deeply interested in all that concerns its welfare, and it is my opinion that the proposed improvement, fully carried out, would do more for Charlevoix over a long period of years than any other step which could possibly be taken. The great difficulty in accomplishing matters of this kind is to find a community sufficiently courageous and far-sighted to undertake so important a program. I am delighted to know that it is receiving serious consideration and it is my great hope that it may be successful. If, however, this is to be done it cannot be undertaken too quickly. The longer the action is delayed the greater will be the cost and the shorter the time within which to reap the benefits. I thoroughly believe that the suggested improvement will not only add vastly to the beauty of the city, but will ultimately prove to be a financial gain to all the citizens.

You have my sincere interest and best wishes.

Yours very truly,

It will be noted that Mr. Wilson stresses the difficulty of finding "a community sufficiently courageous and far-sighted to undertake so important u program." We would dislike to think that this was the case with Charlevoix and—we don't believe it is. It is perfectly natural, however, for a community, or an individual, for that matter, accustomed only to dealing with affairs in a small way, to shrink from tackling a proposition that, at first inspection, seems to be away out of their reach. But there is actually little real difference between a big proposition and a small one because the principles by which results are accomplished are identically the same in both cases—they differ only in degree. As a rule, it takes more capital and more time to build a transcontinental railroad than it does a logging road, but you go about both jobs in the same way—one has to make the same preliminary survey, lay the track in a similar manner and so on.

If we can take the Legion corner and make an attractive little park out of it, it is simply a matter of a longer period of time and more money to make a splendid park out of the entire water front. There is no difficulty any more unsurmountable in the big job than in the little—it simply requires, first the vision to see the completed whole and to estimate wisely its great benefit to ourselves and to our children and children's children and next to provide for the funds to carry out the project, not fearing to incur an honest and sensible debt if the future returns warrant us in creating it, as they unquestionably will.

BAND TO PLAY BEFORE DANCE STARTS

Will Give Open-Air Concert on Thursday Evening

The Charlevoix band will give a street concert from 7:30 to 8:30 p. m., prior to their benefit dance to be held on Thursday evening, May 14th, at the Lakeside Pavilion.

The funds to be devoted to the purchase of new uniforms for the band are not as large as they should be and it is hoped that the dance, which is a benefit affair, will make up the deficiency. Everybody turn out, have a good time and help the boys. The music will be of the best.

The uniforms are ordered and it is expected that they will be here in time for use on Decoration Day.

DETROIT CONCERN PURCHASES 1,300 ACRE TRACT

Old Torch Lake Village Site of Latest and Largest Real Estate Development

The Page estate at Torch Lake has been sold to the Majestic Finance Corporation of Detroit, who will develop the property into a high class summer resort.

Among the many improvements will be tourist camps, a first class hotel with dance room and orchestra, boats, fishing equipment and guides, and bathing facilities with dressing rooms both on Torch Lake and Grand Traverse Bay. There will also be a scenic railway two miles in length through Torch Lake hills, as well as other attractions, including saddle horses, golf courses, tennis courts and many minor features. A first class gas station is now under process of construction and lunch and rest rooms, thoroughly up-to-date. A large force of men have been at work for some time on improvements and the work is in personal charge of Leslie Gibbons, vice president of the Finance Corporation, who will act as general superintendent.

The location is without a doubt one of the most ideal in the state of Michigan, if not including the eastern half of the United States. The land comprises a solid block between the famous Torch Lake and Grand Traverse Bay, and is better known, perhaps, as old Torch Lake village. It has a wide frontage on both lakes.

Torch Lake village has been famous to all northern Michigan tourists for a number of years because of the chicken dinners served at Hotel Torch by Mr. E. J. Johnson. Mr. Johnson is the man who is responsible for negotiating the sale of this property, which comprises about thirteen hundred acres and practically all of the old Torch Lake village. The deal is probably one of the largest real estate transactions for summer resort purposes that has been put across this season. The water frontage consists of about three and one half miles on Grand Traverse Bay and one and one half miles on Torch Lake. The property is located directly on the Michigan state trunk highway line, M-11, and is about thirty minutes drive north of Elk Rapids.

"GOOD WILLERS" HERE JUNE 11TH

MILWAUKEE TOURISTS MAKE A SHORT STOP-OFF

Bring Their Own Band and Hold Industrial Exhibit on Board Their Boat

The following local committee has been appointed to take charge of the reception of the Milwaukee Association of Commerce "Good Will" tourists, when they arrive here the week of June 7th: A. L. Livingston, chairman; Charles E. See, George W. Weaver, P. J. Moran, Ed. O'Neill, J. B. Redpath, R. G. Hammett, H. R. Fowler, H. B. Hooker, Dr. Simmons, S. O. Sorenson, Ernest G. Loeb.

In practically every port that the tourists visit on their trip arrangements have been perfected for a public demonstration in their honor; noon-day lunch clubs, commercial and civic organizations and other bodies have arranged to greet them. There will be band concerts by the "Good Will" band as well as by the home organizations.

The 1925 tour is expected to be a record breaker in the point of attendance as well as interest. The trip will be made on the Goodrich liner, Carolina, which has been chartered for the trip, leaving Milwaukee on June 7th and returning on June 14th. The route followed will be along the west shore of Lake Michigan, with stops at intermediate ports; into Sheboygan, Manitowoc, Kewaunee, Algoma and Sturgeon Bay and then to Marinette, Menominee, Escanaba and Manistique.

A visit to the Sault Ste. Marie and Mackinac Island will follow, after which the tourists will call at east shore ports on Lake Michigan, taking in Petoskey, Charlevoix, Traverse City, Manistee, Ludington and Muskegon. From the latter city there will be a trip to Grand Rapids and Grand Haven, via the interurban.

In most of the cities to be visited, the tourist committee has been assured by the respective mayors that their cities will be open to Milwaukeeans and, in many instances, it will be a holiday while the visitors are in the city. Following band concerts and visits to the trade, home folks will be invited on the boat for a real surprise in the shape of an exposition.

Room on the steamer has been set aside for displays from industries whose representatives are on the tour and, although this feature has only recently been announced, numerous requests for display space have been made.

At the present time, 125 reservations have been made for the "Good Will" tour and at least fifty more are expected. In addition to the regular tourists, there will be a band of 25 pieces. A musical program is being arranged while the boat is in motion and also a special program for each of the cities to be visited. Professor Otto Kessler, who, with his band, has made the trip for many years, will again be in charge of the arrangements for the music.

"The 1925 tour will probably eclipse any ever made, except the one to the Pacific coast," says G. C. Mueller, chairman of the trip committee of the jobbers and manufacturers' committee and under whose auspices the tour is being arranged, "The reservations up to the present time, with several in sight, indicate that at least 200 persons will make the tour. While there will be considerable time spent in each city, where trade acquaintances may be renewed, there will also be plenty of time for recreation and sight-seeing."

The tourists will arrive at Charlevoix at 11 o'clock Thursday morning, June 11th and leave at noon on the same day.

WEBSTER —MAN'S MAN

by Peter B. Kyne

Author of "Cappy Ricks," "The Valley of the Giants," Etc.

Webster backed dazedly toward the wall, firing as he did so, but he was too dizzy to shoot effectively, and the semicircle of bayonets closed in on his front. He had wounded three men without stopping them; a second more, and their long, eighteen-inch bayonets would have been in his vitals, when into the midst of the melee, from the rear, dashed Don Juan Cafetero, shrieking like a fiend and swinging his rifle, which he held grasped by the barrel.

Webster saw a bayonet lunging toward him. He lifted his leg and caught the point on his boot-heel while with his last cartridge he killed the man behind the bayonet, just as the latter's next-rank man thrust straight and true in under the American's left arm, while a third man jabbed at his stomach and got the bayonet home in his hip. These two thrusts, delivered almost simultaneously, by their impact carried their victim backward against the wall, against which his head collided with a smart thud. He fell forward on his face; before his assailants could draw back for a finishing thrust, in case the gringo needed it, which they doubted, Don Juan Cafetero had brained them both.

Standing above the man he loved, with the latter's body between his outspread legs, Don Juan Cafetero stood for the final accounting, his buttermilk eyes gleaming hatred and warmadness, his lips drawn back from his snaggle teeth, his breast rising and falling as they closed in around him. For a few seconds he was visible swinging his rifle like a flail, magnificent, unterrified—and then a bayonet slipped in under his guard. It was the end.

Webster Planted a Bullet in Banavides' Abdomen.

With a final great effort that used up the last strength in his drink-corroded muscles he hurled his rifle into the midst of his four remaining enemies, before he swayed and toppled full length on top of Webster, shielding with his poor body the man who had fanned to flame the dying ember of manhood in the wreck that drink and the devil had cast up on the Caribbean coast.

For Don Juan Cafetero it had been a long, joyous, thirsty day, but at last the day was done. And in order to make certain, a soldado jabbed him once more through the vitals before he fled with the other survivors.

For half an hour after Webster left her to assist the great-hearted Mother Jenks in the rough care of the wounded, Dolores, absorbed in her work of mercy, gave all of her thought to the grim task before her. The cries, followed by the sudden, savage outbreak of fire when the guards made their dash from the palace, brought Webster and Don Juan to mind instantly. In a quick access of terror and apprehension she clung, trembling, to stolid old Mother Jenks.

"Somebody's breakin' in or breakin' out," the veteran decided calmly. "Come to the corner, dearie, an' 'ava a look."

She half dragged Dolores to the corner, from which they had an unobstructed view down the cross-street to its intersection three blocks distant with the Calle San Rosario; consequently they saw the dozen or more survivors of that ill-fated dash from the north gate of the palace flash for a second across their line of vision. Mother Jenks croaked dismally, like a disreputable old raven; she was trying to cheer.

"The rats are leavin' the sinkin' ship," she wheezed. "Come an' see them tyke the devils as killed my sainted 'Enery." She broke eagerly from Dolores' detaining grasp and ran down the street. Dolores hesitated a moment; then, reasoning that her duty lay in pursuing Mother Jenks and preventing her from rushing headlong into the conflict, she followed.

Evidently the fleeing guards had scurried around a corner into a cross-street shortly after Dolores and Mother Jenks had seen them gallop past, for the firing down the Calle San Rosario had ceased entirely by the time they reached it. They stood a moment at the corner, gazing up the street at the dead—man and beast—with the wounded crawling out of the shambles to the sidewalk.

Mother Jenks nodded approvingly as triumphant shouts from the north gate told her the Ruey men were pouring into the palace; with their arms about each other the two women watched and waited—and presently the national flag on the palace came fluttering down from its staff, to be raised again with the red banner of revolution fluttering above it, the insignia of a nation reborn.

"My lamb," Mother Jenks said softly to Dolores, "the war is over. Wot's the matter with goin' in the south gate an' wytin' on the palace steps for the provisional president to make his grand ountray? If we 'esitate five minutes they'll have a bloomin' guard on both gates, arskin' us 'oo we are an' wot we want."

"But Mr. Webster will come back to that back street looking for me; I must go back and wait there for him."

"Wyte, nothink!" Mother Jenks overruled the girl's protest roughly. "'E'll 'ave gone into the palace with the crowd for a look-see; we'll meet 'im there an' ayve 'im tha trouble o' 'untin' for us. Come!" And she half dragged the shrinking girl toward the gate, a block distant, where only a few minutes before Webster and Don Juan Cafetero had made their ineffectual stand.

"Don't look at tha blighters, honay," Mother Jenks warned Dolores when, in approaching the gate, she caught sight of the bodies strewed in front of it. "My word! Regular bally mess—an' all spiggoties! Cawn't be. Must 'ave been some white meat on this bird, as my sainted 'Enery uster s'y. Hah! Thought so! There's a red-headed 'un! Gawd'a truth! An' 'e done all that—Gor' strika me pink! It'a Don Juan Cafetero."

Mother Jenks stepped over the gory corpses ringed around Don Juan and knelt beside him. "Don Juan!" she cried. "You bally, interferin' blighter, you've gone an' got it!"

She ran her strong old arms under his dripping body, lifted him and laid his red head on her knee, while with her free hand she drew a small flask of brandy from her dress pocket.

Don Juan opened his buttermilk eyes and gazed up at her with slowly dawning wonder, then closed them again, drowsily, like a tired child. Mother Jenks pressed the flask to his blue lips; as the brandy hit his tongue he rolled his fiery head in feeble protest and weakly set his teeth against the lip of the flask. Wondering, Mother Jenks withdrew it—and then Don Juan spoke.

"Have ye the master's permission, allanah? I give him me word av honor—not—to dhrink—till—he—give—permission. He—was good—to—me—troth he was—God—love—me—boss——"

His jaw dropped loosely; his head rolled sideways; but ere his spirit fled, Don Juan Cafetero had justified the faith of his master. He had kept his word of honor. He had made good on his brag to die for John Stuart Webster and welcome the chance! Mother Jenks held his body a little while, gazing into the face no longer ruby-round; then gently she eased it to the ground and for the first time was aware that Dolores knelt in the dirt opposite to her striving to lift the body upon which Don Juan had been lying.

The strength of Dolores was unequal to the task; so Mother Jenks, hardened, courageous, calm as her sainted 'Enery at his inglorious finish, rose and stepped around to her side to help her. She could see this other was a white man, too; coolly she stooped and wiped his gory face with the hem of her apron. And then she recognized him!

"Lift him up! Give him to me!" Dolores sobbed. "Oh, Caliph, my poor dear, big-hearted blundering boy!"

She got her arm under his head; Mother Jenkins aided her; and the limp body was lifted to a sitting position; then Dolores knelt on one knee, supporting him with the other, and drew his head over on her shoulder; with her white cheek cuddled against his, she spoke into his deaf ears the little, tender, foolish words that mothers have for their children, that women have for the stricken men of their love. She pleaded with him to open his eyes, to speak to her and tell her he still lived; so close was his face to hers that she saw an old but very faint white scar running diagonally across his left eyebrow—and kissed it.

Presently strong arms took him from her; clinging to somebody—she knew not whom—she followed, moaning brokenheartedly, while eight men, forming a rude litter with four rifles passed under his body, bore Webster to the shade of a tufted palm inside the palace gate.

As they laid Webster down for a moment there Dolores saw a tall, youthful man, of handsome features and noble bearing, approach and look at him. In his eyes there were tears, a sob escaped him as with a little impulsive, affectionate movement he patted John Stuart Webster's cheek.

"My friend!" the fainting Dolores heard him murmur. "My great-hearted, whimsical, lovable John Webster. You made it possible for me to meet you here tonight—and this is the meeting!"

What are the Protestant Churches Coming to!

ARE YOU A PROTESTANT CHURCH MEMBER? Are you aware of the fact that American Protestantism is fast slipping from the rocky heights of true Bible faith? Do you know that scores of theological seminaries, where your future ministers are being trained, have ruled out an infalible Bible; that thousands of ministers are preaching a man-made gospel; and that literally hundreds of thousands of church members are being swept along by this ever-rising tide of "modernism"?

Do you know that this country today is thickly dotted with churches that are mere shells of their former selves? Do you know that a general collapse of American Protestantism was actually threatening some time ago; that a mighty counter-movement has started; and that we are IN THE GREAT CRISIS right now?

We want to reach EVERYBODY that calls himself a church member — also those who do not read a church paper, and they are legion. Hence this general announcement in your secular paper. Men and women, are you in favor of retaining the Bible that your fathers believed in and that your mothers trusted in, that was their hope and stay in times of grief and sorrow, that gave them cheering visions of a heavenly rest—the rest that your liberals do not believe in because it belongs to the "supernatural" and, therefore, "unknowable"? Will you join us in saying "Whatever you do, or don't do, but HANDS OFF THE BIBLE?" Will you help save the Bible for America? Will you join in the fight for its integrity? Will you, too, deny modern scholarship the right to rob us of the only sure foundation upon which our feet can stand, in these shifting sands of time?

Then you are interested in the news that we are now able to convey to you—the greatest piece of news heralded for a long time. It is this, THAT A NEW REFORMATION IS COMING! There are rumblings everywhere of the approaching battle—the battle between faith and unbelief, between true religion and false science, between FUNDAMENTALISM and LIBERALISM. And there is yet more news. It is this—that A GREAT GENERAL MAGAZINE is now being published, for all the Protestant denominations, edited by the great leaders of conservative Protestantism, which is here to keep its readers promptly informed of every new development in the "new Reformation" movement, and which is blazing the way to a "new Protestantism" in America! The magazine is bigger than any denomination; it has nothing to do with this sect or that. It is interdenominational. It is here to fight, on a huge, nation-wide scale, for the sanctity of the Bible! It is here to place the Bible where our fathers placed it—far above all the thoughts, and philosophies, and imaginations of mere men! And it is here to adore a DIVINE CHRIST in that DIVINELY INSPIRED BIBLE! That is the only Christ men and women would want for their Saviour in the hour of death; that is the only Bible they would care to rely on when the chilly waves begin to strike their feet, weary of travel.

TO KNOW WHAT IS GOING ON IN THESE MOMENTOUS TIMES, READ

The New REFORMATION

A Monthly Magazine for All the Churches, Representing the Nation-Wide Movement Against Modernism and for the Positive Recognition of the Sanctity of the Scriptures

EDITORS: JOHN CLOVER MONSMA, editor-in-chief; WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN, former U. S. Secretary of State; HORACE M. DUBOSE, Bishop Methodist Episcopal Church, South; LEANDER S. KEYSER, Professor Lutheran Divinity School; CLARENCE EDWARD MACARTNEY, Moderator Presbyterian Church, U. S. A.; MARK A. MATTHEWS, Minister of largest Presbyterian church in the world, Seattle, Wash.; GEORGE M'CREADY PRICE, expert Geologist, of England; L. R. SCARBOROUGH, President Southwestern Baptist Seminary; JOHN ROACH STRATON, Minister Calvary Baptist Church, New York; GEORGE WHEATON TAFT, President Northern Baptist Seminary, Chicago; MARTIN LUTHER THOMAS, Minister First Presbyterian Church, San Pedro, Cal.—and numerous contributors of note.

This is not a church paper! It is unlike anything you have ever seen. It is bold, but not radical. It is fearless, but not rude. It is powerful in its true, deep, clear faith, but not bigoted. It is conservative, and yet sanely progressive.

One of the paper's greatest features is the Practical Comment on the Sunday School lessons, by the editor-in-chief, Dr. Monsma. It's unlike anything else ever published in the Sunday School line—not an exposition (you will still need your lesson helps) and yet something that will enable you to grasp the lessons and to apply them practically like never before. "Practical Comment" is written in a snappy style, reads like a story, and goes right to the heart of every lesson.

METHODIST CHURCH

Sunday, May 17th

10:30 a. m., pastor will preach, using for the text: "The People Had a Mind to Work."

12 o'clock, Sunday school: Lesson, "Paul's Conversion." This monarch of the Gentiles had the sterling worth of a great vision for the church. The foundation of Jewish instruction in the holy scriptures, the animation of christian experience, both wrought a service for Paul that made him the king of the agea.

6:30, Epworth League. Just fifty young people engaged in the service last Sunday night. This is our regular nttendance and regular hour, but this Sunday the League and the church go to Boyne City for the evening. This is the district regional convention. It is barely possible that the state president, Dr. Stanley Coors of Grand Rapids, will be the speaker. We go Sunday afternoon for the Vesper service at 5:00 p. m., and remain through the evening service. And take note: Boyne City time is one hour ahead of ours.

7:30, no evening service. We join in the convention at Boyne City. We have the cars—let us use them for this work.

The convention at Boyne City begins thia Friday at 2:00 p. m., our time. Banquet at 6 o'clock. Miss Sylvia Black, our local president, gives one of the toasts, subject: "The Amplyfier." All day session Saturday. In the morning Vera Belding, the local first vice-president, will give a short talk on "Spiritual Activities."

We want our people here for the morning service Sunday, as the convention means that all local morning work will run regular.

Prayer meeting this Thursday at 7:30 p. m. Read Romans, 12th. Commit to memory Romans 12. Come out for prayer.

Ladies' Literary and Sewing Club this Thursday with Mrs. Matt Saunders. Persons desiring to obtain transportation call Mrs. McMillan at 120 and meet at Brown's garage at 2:15 p. m.

Young people's prayer meeting next Monday at 7:15. Commit to memory the verse Romans 15.

SEVERENS BALCH LANDS A WHOPPER

Caught 14½ Pound Mackinac Off Ironton Bar

The largest Mackinac trout caught so far this season in the waters of Pine Lake was landed this afternoon by Severens Balch, son of J. B. Balch of Kalamazoo, prominent Belvedere resorter, who with his father and Ray Ashdon were trolling off the bar at Ironton. It weighed fourteen and a half pounds.

Young Balch made his catch with a light steel casting rod, equipped with a big Delavan spinner and a medium sized hook. It was an hour before he could get his fish near enough the boat to see what he looked like and a little over two hours in all was consumed in landing the big fellow. Besides the record breaker, the party caught three other trout averaging three pounds apiece.

Mr. Balch and his son have been spending the past eight days at Bellaire, where they made several excellent catches. They will stop here in town until Friday when they return to Kalamazoo, arriving later in the season to occupy their cottage on the Belvedere.

EXPERIENCE SUPPER WAS ENJOYED

Ladies' Aid Branches Join in Family Gathering

The members of the Pilgrim and South Side Circles of the Congregational Ladies' Aid invited their families to the church last Tuesday evening for an experience supper, which proved to be a very enjoyable affair.

After supper, each lady told of her experiences in "earning a dollar" or more for her circle. Some of the experiences lent themselves to expression in poetry while others disclosed many hours of hard labor. One member had solicited pennies from her friends and relatives and the returns were $10.50. Another earned her dollnr on the spot by advertising her husband's business.

The story of an angelfood cake and a chickenless Sunday dinner created much merriment and the relator had $6.50 to turn in.

There were over fifty in attendance and several who were detained by illness sent messages and contributions, so the affair was a financial success as well as a very happy social event.

How about your floors? Better look over our stock of linoleums and Congoleum rugs. Charlevoix Hardware Co.—Adv. 19-tf.

Dairy Meet

Put down the 22nd of May in your day book and reserve that date, for at that time you will be given the opportunity of hearing Prof. Reed at East Jordan, who is the head of our dairy department. But that is not all, the East Jordan business men are going to give a lunch after the meeting for all in attendance. Also there will be music, probably by the noted high school orchestra from East Jordan, and various other features which will not be made public at this time. Prof. Reed has spent considerable time in Europe, studying the dairy situation there, and at present has been chosen as one of five judges for Aryshire cattle in the United States. He will have a message that will interest the business men as well as the farmer.

Spraying

Some time ago announcements were made through the columns of this paper that a spraying demonstration would be given in Charlevoix county. The weather conditions nre such that the proper stage for the spraying can be ascertained and dates set. The first demonstration will be on the Douglas Tibbits farm, located 1 1-2 miles west and south of Advance, and the second one will be on Dr. Armstrong's farm, located about five milea south of Charlevoix on the Barnard road. The Tibbits demonstration will be held on the 19th of May and Armatrong's on the 20th. They will start at 10:00 o'clock slow time, and extend on into the afternoon, so plan on bringing your lunch with you and spend a very profitablo day. They Are Good Tires

GOODYEAR and SIEBERLING

Automobile owners today are demanding tires that give mileage and service. The cost of all tires of standard makes are about the same, but the length of service varies. Nothing is more exasperating to a motorist than to buy a new tire and have it blow out or rim cut before he has run it five hundred miles.

We Recommend Goodyear and Sieberling Tires

You may ask why? Our answer is that they give better satisfaction than any tire we have ever sold, and we have sold nearly every make of tire. Further, we can safely guarantee these tires to any autoist. And we prefer to sell these kind of tires.

Fabrics, Cords, Balloons, Truck Tires

We carry them in all sizes, in fabrics, cords, balloons and in truck sizes. If you should happen to call for an odd size, not in regular stock, we will get it for you. We like to sell tires—good ones. That's why we are headquarters in Charlevoix for auto tires.

An analysis of the laws passed at the recent session of the legisleture shows thet Michigan fermers and upstate counties received about a 50-50 break at the hands of their lawmakers. Meny of the meesures whicb they had desired and advocated so insistently were enacted, but at the same time, other proposale in which they were equelly interested were defeated, and some bills not particulerly fevorable to rural interests were written upon the statute books of the state.

Perhaps the two most important actions taken at tbe 1925 session were with reference to highwoy finance and representation ia future legislative sessions. Of outstanding populer interest was the passage of the two-cent gasoline tax as a meane of raising revenue for highway purposes. This bill was given immediate effect and is alreedy ln successful operation. Its enactment made possible a reduced and more equitable scale of auto license fees, while at the same time permitting the adoption of a "pay-as-you-go" policy in trunk line highway construction, and providing for the retirement of the state's $50,000,000 highway bond issua and the liquidation af the state'e indebtedness of more than $6,000,000 of accrued highway rewards due the counties.

Following the passage of these highway finance bills, three other important highway measures were enacted. Senator Atwood's bill authorized the state administrative board and state highway department to isy out and eonstruct 500 miles of additional trunk line highway along routes to be chosen by them. Representative Ming's bill provided that on January 1, 1926, the state would take over the entire cost of construction and maintenence of all trunk line highways. Representative Kirby's bill permanently repealed the law under which the state has provided aid in the construction of county roads.

Approve Redistricting Bills

If the supreme eourt upholds the Wood and Howarth reepportionment bills passed during the reeent seesion, the rural districts will have considerably decreased representation in both tbe senate and the house in future legislatures. Senator Howarth's bill increased Wayne county's delegation ln the house from 14 to 21 and made consequent deereases in the representation from the up-state districts. Perhaps even more important was Senator Wood's bill which granted Wayne 7 iastead of 5 senate seats and grouped the more sparsely settled counties into considerably iarger senatorial districts than had previously existed.

The majority of rural people seem well satisfied with the ection of the legislature in refusing to ratify the proposed amendment to the federal constitution which, if ratified by 36 states, would have authorized eongress to regulate, control and prohibit the employment of all persons up to 18 years of age. The debate on this measure was almost as spectaculnr as that on Representative McEachron's eapital punishment bill which was defeated by a close vote.

With the exception of the gas and weight tax bills, very littie tax reform legislation was enacted. One of the few measures which might be mentioned in this eonnection was Senator Pearson'a bill allowing for the establishment of commercial forest reserves which when approved and eonducted according to proper rules and regulations, would be allowed a very nominal annual tax, but would be required to pay a harvest tax on the stumpage value of the timber when cut.

In an effort to curb the extravagant tendencies of municipalities which are sometimes inclined to run recklessly into debt through the granting of unnecessnry and too generous bond issues, the legislature approved the Evans-Baxter bill which provides that only serial bonds can be issued except in cases where adequate sinking funds are provided. The control of municipal bond issues is placed under the supervision of the state treasurer who is empowered to call a halt to municipalities which eeem inclined to iacur needless bond indebtedness. One of the important principles which will no doubt be carried out is that no bonds should be allowed to run for longer than the life of the improvement financed thereby.

The legislature took no action to relleve real estate of its present disproportionate share of the tax burden. Bills were considered to remove the tax exemption now enjoyed by certain securities and to place a moderate annual specific tax on this form of personal wealth, but these measures were finally sent to a committee and permanently pigeon-holed.

As has been true in many previous sessions, tbe problem of appropriation bills was one of the most perplexing questions eoming before the 1925 legislature. With the state's much-heralded surplus practicaliy exhausted and with many of the state institutions putting up pitiful pleas for sadly needed improvements, the lawmakers were puzzled as to how to grant the seemingly meritorious requests and still keep the appropriation totals down within the desired limits. Under these circumetances it appears that the state's general property tax for the next two years will run somewhat higher than that for the past biennial period. Since farmers will pay such a large share of this tax they may take what little satisfaction tbey ean from the fact that the most of the so-called rural appropriation bills were passed at somewhere near the amounts requested.

However, some of these modest rural budget bills have been decapitated or maimed by the executive axe. The $50,000 granted by the legislature to the state department of agriculture for the supervision and enforeement of grades and standards of farm products was vetoed in its entirety and the emergency appropriation of $100,000 for bovine T-B eradication was cut to $40,000. This action is entirely without precedent and there is a grave doubt as to whether or not it would hold up if appeal is taken to the supremo court.

The legislature showed great interest in the matter of standardization of agricultural products. Bills were passed amending the Michigan apple and grape grades and the federal potato grades were made compulsory ln Michigan. However, now that the appropriation for the enforeement af thesa grades has been vetoed it hardly seeme probable that they will command much respect aither on the home or tha out state market.

Tha more needy sebool districts of the state will receive increased aid from the primery school fund from the passage of the Bohn bili providing modificationa in the manner of the distribution of this fund to the several districts.

From tha standpoint of public health some important legislation wes enacted. Counties were authorized to employ public health nurses and to construct county tuberculosis sanitoriums. Patients in such hospitals would receive $1.00 per day state aid. A biil was passed authorizing an appropriation of $500,000 for the construction of a new state tuberculosis sanitorium.

Much comment, both favorable and unfavorable, was aroused by tbe passage of the Horton bill changing the name of the Michigan Agricultural College to the Michigen State College of Agriculture and Applied Science.

While the 1925 session is claimed by some to have been eharaeterized by a spirit of barmony, it must bo confessed that it was somewhat artificial harmony engendered by steam roller methods. Resentment over the methods used to force reapportionmont legislation rankled in the breasts of many of the members. However, when the governor has finished aigning and vetoing bills, it is safe to say that on tbe whole the laws enacted at the 1925 session will be found to be progressive and yet conservative in eheracter.

Mrs. Ona VandenBerg and three daughters of Central Lake, were guests at the Klooster home for 4 or 5 days during last week. Ona is an Atwood product. No wonder she likes to enjoy memories of yore.

The special meetings at the M. E. church, under the leadership of Evangelist Myers, are of the very best, strong sermons. Very fine music by an orchestra composed of two saxaphones, guitar, violin and piano. The following ministers are helping: Rev. Manker of Ellsworth, Rev. A. L. Wagley of Central Lake, M. E. pastors from Mesick and Alden, and Rev. C. E. Zyke of Cadillac. We would not forget to mention the name of Elder G. W. Zike of Fairmount, Ind. He is 78 years of age. He makes the statement he is young and always happy—pleasing God all the time. It does us all good to hear him. The meetings close next Sunday evening. Invitation is extended to all to come.

AT THE MOVIES

Gloria Swanson and Allan Dwan have added another picture to their production belt in "Manhandled," due at the Palace Theatre on Saturday and Sunday. The story by Arthur Stringer, which ran in the Saturday Evening Post, gives Miss Swanson a wide range of possibilties and those who have seen parts of the new picture say that she has put another crowning performance on top of "Zaza," "The Humming Bird," and "A Society Scandal."

One of many highlights in "The Side Show of Life," Herbert Brenon's production of William J. Locke's gripping story, "The Mountebank," coming to the Palace Theatre next Wednesday, is Ernest Torrence's superb characterization of the chief character. The performance he gives in this pictures lives. Only Torrence could make such a man stand out as a worthy successor of Bill Jackson—the role he played in "The Covered Wagon."

"The Garden of Weeds," a new James Cruze-Paramount production starring Betty Compson, will be the feature at the Palace Theatre on Tuesday. The picture is an adaptation of the Broadway stage success by Leon Gordon and Doris Marquette.

Buck Jones, the William Fox western star, who gains in popularity with each succeeding picture, will ba the attraction at the Palace Theatre on Friday next in "The Desert Outlaw."

BETTER AND BETTER

Dependable ten years ago, and five years ago, and more dependable than ever today, Dodge Brothers Motor Car simply represents the latest phase in a process of continual betterment.

The first cars Dodge Brothers built established a world-wide reputation. The cars they are building today incorporate the accumulated refinements of those ten intervening years.

That important improvements in the comfort and appearance of the car are made from time to time, implies no basic departure from Dodge Brothers traditional policy of progressive rather than seasonal development.

PROGRAM FOR DRAINAGE DISTRICT EXTENSIVE

Includes Sewage Treatment, Water Waste Prevantion and Aid for Lakes-to-Gulf Plan

The recommendations of the Engineering Board of Review of the sanitary district of Chicago on the lake lowering controversy looking to the establishment of a program of remedial measures urge that the district take every reasonable measure to minimize controversy and to clear up the widespread misunderstanding of the fncts regarding the Chicago drainage canal. The board counsels fairmindedness and avoidance of exaggeration, that the whole truth may be made widely known and that the facts be dealt with in an unbiased way by all parties.

That the district proceed as rapidly as is consistent with sound finance to carry out a progressive program which substantially conforms to the district's plan and will involve an expenditure of about $125,000,000.

This program provides for complete treatment at the Des Plaines, Calumet, North Side and both industrial waste plants and for partial treatment at the West Side and Southwest Side plants. This program should be completed by 1945, or earlier, if practicable, and includes necessary extensions of these plants to that date.

That the district formally request the city of Chicago to put into effect without delay a practicable program of water waste prevention, including a water waste survey and the progressive installation of meters. This request should be predicated upon the needless expense to the sanitary district of providing and operating works for removing and treating an increased volume of sewage resulting from use of water in excess of reasonable requirements.

That the district continue to cooperate with all authorities interested in forwarding the Lakes-to-the-Gulf waterway and that the district make application for a permit to dredge a suitable connection between Lake Michigan and the Calumet-Sag channel to be used for navigation and in the interest of public health.

That the district now offer to contribute its proper share of the cost of lake regulating works, to be installed in such manner as approved by the war department.

W. C. T. U. NOTES

The W. C. T. U. held a very interesting meeting at the home of Mrs. Charles Arnold last Friday afternoon.

Mrs. Lelah Simmons presided. Mrs. H. S. Harsha led in the devotional. Following the business session, Mrs. A. J. Stolter and Mrs. Dimmick favored the company with two musical numbers which were much appreciated.

The paper on "Constructive Forces and Destructive Influences" dealt with the home, the church, the school, and individual interest in persons or project.

As a compliment to Mother's Day, tributes to the mother love of the land were reverently given, reminding us that the mother's faith in God, and the child's faith in the mother, lays the foundation for a religious experience for the child.

The supreme service to our country is christian culture by the fireside, in the Sunday school, and to some extent at least, in our public schools, where personal example, of father, mother and teacher are guiding the youth of our land. Most vital of these is the home training.

The destructive influences will be corrected or rendered endurable by a profoundly spiritual revival in the hearts of the American people. When the home and fireside—the bulwark nf good citizenship—is surrounded by the whole family, and not left in charge of the cat and canary. The Civics committee gave a fino report on the "doings in the last legislature."

The last of a series of teas was served at this meeting. The members present expressed themselves as having thoroughly enjoyed the afternoon.

NORTH FOX IS A BIG GRAVEL BED

chinery adapted to digging the gravel out of the water along the shores of the island. The operation of these boats will make necessary the construction of a channel into the interior of the island, a breakwater and other harbor improvements. It will also be necessary to employ screening machinery, possibly a crusher and steam shovel equipment. The gravel and sand will be marketed mostly in Detroit, Cleveland and Benton Harbor, where it will be used for all kinds of construction work, but principally for roads.

The party that was here over the week end expect to return in about four or five weeks, at which time it will be decided whether or not operation will be started on the new project this year or next.

What the effect of creating an industry of such large proportions so near to this port will have on Charlevoix, no one can fortell with accuracy, but anything that builds up adjacent territory and calls for the importation of men, money and materials, is going to be, in some measure, a benefit to us. If any at all, the location of Charlevoix with respect to the island (as you can see from the map) is entirely in our favor.

This is not by any means the first time that North Fox Island has been the subject of commercial speculation. In the early part of the last quarter century, it was the cherished hobby of John O. Plank, founder and builder of the Grand Hotel at Mackinac Island to create a resort colony on North Fox that should rival her sister of the Straits. He was quick to perceive the adaptability of the spot for such a purpose, but was forced to abandon his designs in 1907, owing to failing health. Plank went quite a way with his idea, however, stocking the island with deer, foxes and other species of game to start a preserve, though little trace of his work was discovered by the party that visited the island Sunday.

WHAT MY NEIGHBOR SAYS

Is of Interest to Charlevoix Folks.

When one has had the misfortune to suffer from backache, headaches, dizziness, urinary disorders and other kidney ills—and has found relief from all this sickness and suffering, that person's advica is of untold valua to friends and neighbors. The following case is only one of many thousands, but it is that of a Charlevoix resident. Who could ask for a better example?

Hubert Ackert, mason, 107 W. Garfield Ave., says: "I bad a constant ache in my back and when I stooped, I had to put my hands on my back in order to straighten. I was nervous and often dizzy spells came over mo. My kidneys were sluggish and the secretions were scanty. After using a few boxes of Doan's Pills, from Metcalf's Drug Store, I was fixed up in good shape." (Statement given May 4, 1920.)

On October 9, 1924, Mr. Ackart said: "Every time I have had occasion to use Doan's Pills they have always given the same good results."

CHARM SCHOOL IS A GREAT SUCCESS

Junior Play Much Enjoyad by a Large Audience

Many a heart yearned for n real Charm School, after seeing the presentation at the Palace Theatre on May 7th, given by the Junior class of C. H. S. The fun, joy and pep in the dramatization won the audience completely, especially when it was shown them by such talented as well as such attractive young actresses and actors.

To mention individuals, their various charms and graces would lead us into such an enthusiastically detailed discussion that we dare not start. Each one in his own part was splendid and, working together as they did, with the able coaching of Miss Reid, they gave the people of Charlevoix two and a half hours of the sparkling vivacity, fun and love of youth.

The frocks and suits which so added to the charm of the play were generously furnisbed by the Reinhartz Style Shop of Petoskey and F. E. Cartier of this city, while Mr. Charles See of Charlevoix proved the size of his heart by offering furnishings for the stage settings.

The Junior class is infinitely grateful to the donors and such generosity should be appreciated not only by the class but by every citizen of Charlevoix who takes the proper interest in our school.

TOURIST ASSOCIATION WAS SHORT-SIGHTED

Cannot Expect to Hold Up Individual Communities with a Blackjack

Jay P. Smith, city editor of the Traverse City Record-Eagle, in a recent issue of his paper, has discussed a subject on which our position as a Charlevoix newspsper bas forced us to remain silent, although we have long been well awere of the situation which Mr. Smith has brought up in his article, which follows:

"The time has come when Western Michigan must definitely lay aside all jealousies, prejudices, and boy's play in deciding what its future policy will be in promotlng its resort business. It can no longer afford to stumble along on a hit and miss policy merred by intersectional strife, selfishness, and lack of faith.

Several yeers ego the Michigan Tourist and Resort Association was founded and hailed as the organization which would fuse all the Western Michigan resort ectivities under a single head and under its guidance the communities which it would serve would merch forward towerd a common goal, hand in hand. The association got away to a good start but before long jealousy, suspicion, charges and countercharges crept in until now the work of the association has been almost nullified by the breaches between communities which are constantly widening.

Western Michigan, competing with other regions similarly equipped as resort and tourist centers, can ill afford this child's play and bickering. The tourist and resort business is too highly competitive to succeed under adverse conditions. While Western Michigan communities are fighting among themselves, some other state will run away with the prize.

Every community should be given an equal opportunity. All we want is to get the tourist and resorter into Western Michigan and while Ludington is getting a full meal, Traverse City will be getting a bite. Every resorter or tourist who visits Elk Rapids helps Suttons Bay indirectly and, by the same token, Manistee cannot prosper in the resort business without Petoskey getting some of the reflected prosperity. The big task is to get them to visit this part of the state.

This is Western Michigan—not Petoskey, Traverse City, Charlevoix, Manistee or Ludington. Every resort city or town in western Michigan is a Michigan resort asset. If Michigan is ever to succeed in a resort way as it should, Michigan must herald: "Michigan—the resort state," and not any one of the specific localities.

It is high time that the Michigan Tourist and Resort Association was checked up. As we understand it, the motive behind the organization was TO SERVE THE TOURISTS AND RESORTERS AND NOT THE CITIES which contribute most liberally. But the association is very apparently playing favorites. For instance, in a road guide which the association just issued such places as Acme and Bates are named and located on the map, but the name Charlevoix does not appear. The booklet contains three maps on which the city of Charlevoix could be shown, but on none of them can the city be found. This is apparently spite work, because Charlevoix did not contribute to the association. Whatever the cause, it's mighty small business, and one of the things which will eventually wreck the organization.

Today Western Michigan produces the ludierous picture of a bevy of small boys fighting over a single apple in an orchard, when the trees are loaded and the ground is covered with other apples just as desirable. Until this picture can be erased and until the various communities which go to make up Western Michigan can get together and work in dignified harmony toward a common end, eliminating the petty things commonly believed beneath the big business man, tourists and resorters will come to our section in spite of us, rather than because of a worthwhile effort on our pert to get them."

We predicted last June, after it was discovered that someone in

NEW AUTO LAW NOW IN EFFECT

DIMMING IS NOW DEMANDED OF ALL DRIVERS

Changes in the Automblle Laws That Should Make Drivlng More Safe for Autoists

A number of very important changes in the Michigun laws governing the operation of automobiles, trucks, tractors, etc., have now become effective and the state department announces that immediate steps to enforce them will be taken.

For the first time a positive dimming law is on the statute books. It stipulates that drivers shall dim not more than 600 feet away from an approaching car, unless their lights are of a non-glaring variety.

Cut-outs and exhaust whistles hereafter are banned. The law specifically states that cut-outs are not permitted.

The general passenger car law relative to lights—two headlights in front and one tail light—is unchanged, but a new clause was added making it mandatory for drivers to have the required number of lights functioning. Failure to heve a vehicle properly lighted now can be termed reckless driving and a driver's license may be suspended for violation.

A radical change in the lighting system for busses and trucks is prescribed. Trucks weighing more than two tons and passenger busses must have in addition to the regular lighting equipment, three green lights in front, at the top of the windshield, and three green lights at the point of greatest visibility in the rear. The idea of this section is to give passenger car drivers warning when approeching a large commercial vehicle. Owners, as well as operators, of commercial vehicles, are held liable.

The new law provides distinctive license plates for commercial vehicles. Inasmuch as plates already have been issued for 1925, this section will not be enforced until 1926.

Commercial vehicles, including passenger carriers, must be equipped with speedometers, so that state inspectors can more readily check their speed.

Dealers are no longer required to transfer license plates when a used car is taken in. The transfer now will be direct to the purchaser of the car.

Severe penalties for violations of any section of the act are prescribed. First offenders are subject to a $25 fine and 10 days imprisonment, second offense, $50 and 30 days, third offense, $100 and 60 days.

According to the secretary of state immediete steps to enforce the new statute are to be taken.

MEMORIAL DAY PROCLAMATION BY THE GOVERNOR

Tho march of the Grand Army of the Republic is nearly over. The vast and sturdy ranks of a generation ago have dwindled to a hazy line of aged but exalted veterans. Time was when men from their own ranks decorated the graves of their fallen comrades and glorified the deeds of living warriors. This duty has now fallen upon the citizens of a grateful republic. Once each year as long as this, the happiest, mightiest and most righteous of all nations endures, we will be called upon to honor not only the valor of veterans of the Civil War, but to pay homage to soldiers of all other conflicts of the nation. In peace with all the world, our tribute to the honored dead and the surviving veterans who made our happiness possible should this year be more impressive than ever before.

Therefore, I, Alex. J. Groesbeck, as Governor of Michigan, proclaim and urge a proper observance of Saturday, May 30, 1925, as Memorial Day.

SALUTE AS THE FLAG GOES BY

EVERYBODY SHOULD PAY ATTENTION AND SALUTE

Memorial Day Will Soon Be Here and Will Be Observed in a Proper Manner

Memorial Dny will soon be here, and Charlevoix will of course observe the day with proper spirit and due ceremony. There is no question as to the patriotism of our people and no doubt as to their sincerity in the proper observance of the day that is given over to honoring our fallen heroes of many wars.

However, there is one thing in which we are sadly lacking, in common with many other communities, and that is in paying proper respect and reverence to the Flag. The Flag signifies everything that goes with love of country; it symbolizes those heroes, living and dead, who in times of stress freely gave themselves and their heroic efforts that this country might always and forever be "The lend of the free."

Let us then remember that when the Flag is passing in parade everybody should pay it the proper attention and salute. Not to do so is to insult the Flag and all that the Flag represents.

In this connection, we desire to repeat Henry Holcomb Bennett's beautiful tribute and recommend it to your thoughtful reading:

Hats off!
Along the street there comes
A blare of bugles a ruffle of drums,
A flash of color beneath the sky:
Hats off!
The flag is passing by!
Blue and crimson and white it shines,
Over the steel tipped, ordered lines,
Hats off!
The Colors before us fly;
But more than the flag is passing by,
Sea-fights and land-fights, grim and great,
Fought to make and to save the State;
Weary marches and sinking ships,
Cheers of victory on dying lips;
Days of plenty and years of peace;
March of a strong land's swift increase;
Equal justice, right and law,
Stately honor and reverend awe;
Sign of a nation, great and strong,
Toward her people from foreign wrong;
Pride and glory and honor, all
Live in the colors to stand or fall.
Hats off!
Along the street there comes
A blare of bugles, a ruffle of drums;
And loyal hearts are beating high:
Hats off!
The flag is passing by!

Mancelona made three hits to Charlevoix's one and also two errors to our none. We had seven men die on bases and Mancelona five.

The team goes to Cheboygan next Friday and the return game will be played here on June 5th. On Decoration Day the high school team will play a picked team from Leslie Shapton Post, American Legion, for the benefit of the band.

PEARSON BILL TO AID LAND

BUILD UP TOP-SOIL WHEN REFORESTRATION BEGINS

State Will Assist Private Owners Secure Trees for Forests on Land Now Worthless

In addition to alding in reforestration, its primary purpose, the Pearson "Commercial preserve" bill will aid materially in solving department of agriculture problems relative to cut-over lands, according to the department survey division.

The department is called upon to inspect thousands of acres of land which was once covered with timber and to recommend the most profitable means of development. Much of this land, which comprises a large per cent of many northern counties, is valueless except for timber growing.

A recent survey by the department showed seventy-five per cent of wild land in sixteen counties didn't pay enough taxes to provide for the necessary bookkeeping.

Owners of the light, sandy lands have in some instances insisted on trying to cultivate the soil, although advised by the department that crops could not be grown. The Pearson bill offers a means of developing these tracts for profit with assurance of success.

Stock for reforestration is provided both by the state and federal governments at slight cost. Ordinary soft wood stock is sold at as low as $2.00 per thousand trees. Hardwood stock runs as high as $7.00 per thousand.

When an owner sets aside a tract for use as a commercial forest preserve, he pays an annual tax of 5 cents to 12 1-2 cents an acre, according to the initial value of the land. The state pays the county 5 cents an acre in addition.

The Pearson bill provides the department of conservation shall establish a fire protection plan for commercial forest preserves, insuring against loss to the owner after the trees have been planted.

Timber will grow in almost any sort of soil, according to agricultural department surveys. A tract planted at Michigan State college 29 years ago has developed to a point which would permit cutting under the Pearson bill. The land was originally a gravel knoll. The gravel was removed and the trees planted in the sand and clay 15 feet below the top-soil surface.

The agricultural department estimates practically all now worthless land in Michigan can be made into good farming soil through reforestration in 50 years or less. If the forests are allowed to develop, are cut and cleared without use of fire, sufficient top-soil will be made through decay of leaves and other vegetation to permit farming.

BAND TO GIVE ANOTHER DANCE ON 28TH

This Time at the Belvedere Casino with Own Orchestra

The Charlevoix band will give another benefit dance at the Belvedere Casino on the evening of May 28th (Thursday). An effort will be made between now and then to pick a seven or eight piece orchestra from the players of the band that will be a cracker-jack.

The boys took in $172 at their last dence, held at Hellett Inn on last Thursday evening. They need about $600 for uniforms, however, and are going to try and raise the money themselves, without coming on to the city for assistance, feeling that the council has done its full share in the purchase of instruments and in other ways, for which they are truly grateful.

Any private contributions to this end, however, will be thankfully accepted, so if any of our readers want to help things along, the fellows won't object in the least.

RAILROAD FOLDER PLAYS UP CHARLEVOIX

Pere Marquette's New Booklet Features Our Winter Sports on Its Back Cover

The new "Michigan Summer Resort" folder—41 pages and cover, put out for the season of 1925 by the Pere Marquette railroad, is a gem of its kind.

Besides attractive descriptions of (seemingly) every nook and cranny of the western Michigan resort region served by the Pere Merquette, the new booklet includes several novel features—a list of the principal hotels and boarding houses of the region, with rates per day and week; a resume of Michigan fishing and hunting laws; summer tourist rates between resort points on the P. M. R. R. and Chicago, Detroit and Toledo; time tables; a list of golf links, sleeping car berth rates; car ferry rates for automobiles; a map of the Pere Marquette system and a very complete road map of the western Michigan region, showing all railroad and boat lines, wagon roads, highways, school houses, lighthouses, etc.

The Charlevoix summer section follows a brief introductinn on the history of Michigan as a resort country on the first page and occupies pages 2, 3, 4 and 5 of the booklet, with attractive half page cuts of the Inn, the Beach Hotel, the Inn Cottages, the Belvedere and the Inn grounds.

On the last page (in addition to the above) is an article headed "Charlevoix to Be America's St. Moritz," setting forth the superior claims of this city es a rendezvous for winter sports of all kinds. This article is supplemented by cuts of local winter scenes, including photographs taken while the St. Louis visitors were here last February. There are eight of these cuts and they take up the entire back cover of the booklet, grouped around a little ad which reads, "Winter sports are growing in popularity at Charlevoix, which promises to become the St. Moritz of America."

This is the best of advertising. It's a good sign too for the future prosperity of the town—a sign that the Pere Merquette officials have faith in the ability of the town to grow and progress. If they didn't, they wouldn't waste valuable advertising space on us.

ELECTRIC LIGHT FRANCHISE WON

A. F. Wallbrecht Will Install New Oil Engine and Equipment

The special election held on Saturday of last week, to grant A. F. Wallbrecht a ten-year franchise to furnish the village with twenty-four hour electric service, carried 127 to 59. Three-fifths majority was necessary to carry the election.

Mr. Wallbrecht has informed us that he expects to be ready to begin his twenty-four hour service sometime in July. New oil engines will be installed and the plant newly equipped.

It will take from six to eight weeks to install the engines and get in readiness for operation.—Central Lake Torch.

PARK PLAN MUST COVER WIDENING

TRAFFIC PROBLEM ADMITS OF ONLY ONE SOLUTION

Nothing But a Broader Bridge Street Can Relieve Present Dangerous Congestion

The following letter relative to the water-front park plan was written by Emerson W. Price of Ironton from Daytona, Fla., on March 18th last, in answer to the circular letter sent out by the Shakespeare and Dickens Clubs of this city requesting a statement from a number of our summer visitors and non-resident property owners as to their beliefs regarding the proposed plan:

"Shakespeare and Dickens Clubs,
Charlevoix, Michigan.

Dear Ladies:—It is a source of great comfort to me to realize thet the women's clubs of Charlevoix have interested themselves in the very important civic improvement outlined in your recent letter. I am always hopeful of results where the feminine spirit of any locality is moved to insist upon progress so nearly touching all the interests of our community. Now, I believe, we'll get somewhere.

Your plan, some plan, any plan that will give to Charlevoix in or near the business section a place of beauty, comfort and rest and at the same time admit of widening the street with its constantly increasing summer traffic congestion should have the earnest and hearty support of every citizen of our town and will, I am quite sure, meet with cordial and substantial cooperation from every summer resident.

I think I can assure you that with a sincere and active combination of local spirit, animeted by the encouragement that will come from our summer guests and all backed by the energy and sincerity of the women's clubs, something has been started that will be mighty hard to stop.

I'm with you till Hades congeals!

Sincerely yours,
Emerson W. Price."

In accordance with our practice of taking from each of these letters some thought on which to comment and develop the argument for a water-front park, let us this week consider the point of street widening and traffic congestion, mentioned by Mr. Price in the above letter.

Everyone who has passed a summer here in Charlevoix during the past four or five years realizes that traffic conditions on Bridge street are none the best. During certain periods of the summer season and at certain hours of the day, it may be asserted, without making ourselves liable to ridicule for overstatement, that, for the size of the street, the length of the congested district and the lack of traffic control, Bridge street present fully as great a menace to the pedestrian and the driver as a section of equal length on the main thoroughfares of any of our great cities. When a street is full of moving cars it's full of cars, whether it be in Charlevoix or Chicago, and while perhaps there are fewer people to get killed and meimed in Charlevoix than in Chicago, those who are here stand just as good a chance of loss of life or limb as their fellows in the big towns, and more so because regulations about jay walking, parking, speed limits, stop-street etc., cannot be a rigidly enforced.

A great part of the danger and discomfort connected with traffic on Bridge street is due to the dense parking of cars and this is accentuated by the narrowness of the street. So close together are the rear ends of automobiles on opposite sides of the street that it is a task requiring much skill and a clear head to guide a vehicle down the narrow lane between them without taking off a fender or ramming the fellow who is trying to pass you. Add to this the necessity of watching for jay walking men, women and children who are liable to dart out anywhere along the line without looking to see if a car is coming from either direction and you have a driving test that calls for all you've got. The great wonder is that we have so few accidents.

Now, it's no use saying, "let them

"Go Plant a Tree"

Geo. R. Hemingway of Oak Park, Illinois, owner of the Charlevoix County Nurseries located at Ironton, and one of Michigan's most enthusiastic boosters, sent the following poem entitled "Go Plant A Tree," by the late Ella Wheeler Wilcox, with the suggestion that it should appeal to every citizen of Northern Michigan. It is presented here with the hope that it will instill into the minds of many people of this section at least one of the numerous reasons why they should take some interest in planting trees:

Oh, what a joy it is to plant a tree!
And from the shallow earth to watch it rise,
Lifting its emerald branches to the skies
In silent adoration; and to see
Its strength and glory waxing with each spring.
Yes. 'Tis a goodly and a gladsome thing
To plant a tree.

Nature has many marvels; but a tree
Seems more than marvelous; it is divine.
So generous, so tender, so benign.
Not garrulous like the rivers, and yet free,
In pleasant converse with the wind and birds.
Oh, privilege beyond explaining words,
To plant a tree!

Rocks are majestic; but, unlike a tree,
They stand aloof and silent. In the roar
Of ocean billows breaking on the shore
There sounds the voice of turmoil. But a tree
Speaks ever of companionship and rest.
Yea, of all righteous acts, this, this is best—
To Plant a tree!

There is an oak—oh, how I love that tree!—
Which has been thriving for a hundred years.
Each day I send my blessings through the spheres
For one who gave this triple boon to me
Of growing beauty, singing birds, and shade.
Wouldst thou win laurels which shall never fade?
Go plant a tree!

The Ladies' Literary and Sewing Club have their closing meeting for the season on Thursday, at 2:30 p. m., with Mrs. Walter Taylor, on Bridge street.

The final report on the repairs at the Methodist church was made last Sunday. It was found that we had expended in all $1,372.70. The pastor made a public appeal and the entire amount was raised except about $150.00. This work comprises the most sweeping renovation this church has had for several years and to meet the expense the response by its people has been most magnanamous. The small balance will be assumed by some who were not at the meeting. Our church now has a seating capacity as large or possibly larger than any other in the city and has a much more acceptable appearance for any gathering which may be scheduled here.

The Epworth League regional convention held at Boyne City last Friday, Saturday and Sunday was pronounced by all as a huge success. Several delegates from the local league were in attendance. AT THE MOVIES

Griffith Supports Negri

Raymond Griffith, the dramatic comedian of the Paramount picture, "Changing Husbands," shown at the Palace Theatre but a short time ago, returns in one of the principal roles, with Ben Lyon and Noah Beery, in support of Pola Negri in her latest Paramount production, "Lily of the Dust," a Dimitri Buchowestzki production of the novel "The Song of Songs," and will be shown at the Palace Theatre next Tuesday and Wednesday.

"Sea Hawk" is Spectacular and Thrilling

Frank Lloyd's First National picture, "The Sea Hawk," adapted from Rafael Sabatini's stirring novel of Barbary corsairs, is coming to the Palace Theatre for three days on Saturday, Sunday and Monday, May 23, 24 and 25.

"The Sea Hawk" is the crowning achievement of a season of brilliant screen dramas, a play that registers its magnitude in every scene and with such force that it is not likely that local screen followers will cease to talk about it very soon.

The most satisfying thought is that there would be no foolishness in the world if everybody had sense enough to think exactly as we do.

ALL OUT OF SORTS?

So Was This Charlevoix Woman Who Tells Her Experience

All too often women accept their pains and aches as natural to their sex. They fail to realize that weak kidneys are often to blame for that backache, those headaches, dizzy spells and that tired, depressed feeling. Thousands have found new health and strength by helping the weakened kidneys with Doan's Pills—a stimulant diuretic. This Charlevoix case is one of many:

Mrs. Thos. Taylor, 101 Wood St., says: "I suffered with a dull, nagging ache through the small of my back, which hurt me so I could hardly stoop or straighten. I began to feel nervous and had a worn out feeling. I had beadaches and dizzy spells and my kidneys acted too often. After using Doan's Pills, from Metcalf's Drug Store, I was rid of the trouble."

CHAPTER XVI.

While Ricardo watched beside the unconscious Webster one of his aides galloped up the street, to return presently with a detachment with stretchers, into which Webster and Don Juan Cafetero were laid and carried up the palace driveway into the huge golden reception hall where only the night before Sarros had greeted the belles and beaux of his capital. In the meantime Mother Jenks had succeeded in restoring Dolores to consciousness; supported by the indomitable old woman the girl slowly followed the grim procession until, at the door of the reception room, they found their further progress barred by a sentry.

"The red-haired man is dead," he informed them in response to their eager queries. "If you want his body," he continued, hazarding a guess as to their mission, "I guess you can have it. There he is." And the sentry pointed to the stretcher which had been set down along the wall of the reception hall.

"'Ow about the other?" Mother Jenks demanded. Don Juan Cafetero had, unfortunately, been so much of a nuisance to her in life that she was not minded to be troubled greatly over him in death, although the Spartanlike manner of his exit had thrilled the British bulldog blood in her.

"The big fellow isn't quite dead yet, but I'm afraid he's a goner. The surgeons have him in this room now. Friend of yours, Miss?" he inquired in tones freighted with neighborly sympathy.

Dolores nodded.

"Sorry I can't let you in, Miss," he continued, "but the General ordered me to keep everybody out until the doctors have finished looking him over. If I was you, I'd wait in that room across the hall; then you can get the first news when the doctors come out."

Mother Jenks accepted his advice and steered her charge into the room indicated. As they waited, Ricardo Ruey stood anxiously beside the table on which John Stuart Webster's big, limp body reposed, while Doctor Pacheco, assisted by a Sobrantean confrere, went deftly over him with surgical scissors and cut the blood-soaked clothing from his body.

"He breathes very gently," the rebel leader said, presently. "Is there any hope?"

The little doctor shrugged. "I fear not. That bayonet-thrust in the left side missed his heart but not his lung."

"But apparently he hasn't bled much from that wound."

"The hemorrhage is probably internal. Even if that congestion of blood in the lungs does not prove fatal very shortly, he cannot, in his weakened state, survive the traumatic fever from all these wounds. It is bound—hello, how our poor friend still lives with the bayonet broken off in his body—for here is steel—hah! Not a bayonet, but a pistol."

He unbuttoned the wounded man's coat and found a strap running diagonally up across his breast and over the right shoulder, connecting with a holster under the left arm. The doctor unbuckled this strap and removed the holster, which contained Webster's spare gun; Ricardo, glancing disinterestedly at the sheathed weapon, noted a small, new, triangular hole in the leather holster. He picked it up, withdrew the pistol, and found a deep scratch, recently made, along the blued steel close to the vulcanite butt.

When Ricardo glanced at Pacheco after his scrutiny of the pistol and holster, the doctor's dark eyes were regarding him mirthfully.

"I have been unnecessarily alarmed, my general," said Pacheco. "Our dear friend has been most fortunate in his choice of wounds——"

"He's a lucky Yankee; that's what he is, my dear Pacheco. A lucky Yankee!" Ricardo leaned over and examined the bayonet-wound in Webster's left side. "He took the point of the steel as his pistol he happened to be wearing under his left arm," he went on to explain. "That turned the bayonet and it slid along his ribs, making a superficial flesh-wound."

Pacheco nodded. "And this bullet merely burned the top of his right shoulder, while another passed through his biceps without touching the bone. His most severe wound is this jab in the hip."

They stripped every stitch of clothing from Webster and went over his carefully. At the back of his head they found a little clotted blood from a small split in the scalp; also they found a lump of generous proportions. Pacheco laughed briefly but contentedly.

"Then he is not even seriously injured?" Ricardo interrupted that laugh.

"I would die of fright if I had to fight this fine fellow a month from today," the little doctor chirped. "That man is in superb physical condition; it is the bump on the head that renders him unconscious—not loss of blood."

As if to confirm this expert testimony Webster at that moment breathed long and deeply, screwed up his face and shook his head very slightly. Thereafter for several minutes he gave no further evidence of an active interest in life—seeing which Pacheco decided to take prompt advantage of his unconsciousness, and probe the wounds in his arm and shoulder for the fragments of clothing which the bullets must have carried into them. After ten minutes of probing Pacheco announced that he was through and ready to bandage; whereupon John Stuart Webster said faintly but very distinctly, in English:

"I'm awfully glad you are, Doc'. It hurt like h——ll. Did you manage to get a bite on that fishing trip?"

"Jack Webster, you scoundrel!" Ricardo yelled joyously, and he shook the patient with entire disregard of the latter's wounds. "Oh, man, I'm glad you're not dead."

"Your sentiments appeal to me strongly, my friend. I'm—too—tired to look—at you. Who the devil—are you?"

Fell a silence, while Webster prepared for another speech. "Where am I?"

"In the palace. We won pulled-up, and that forty-thousand dollar bet of yours is safe. I'll cash the ticket for you tomorrow morning."

"D——n the forty thousand. Where's my Croppy Boy?"

"Your what?"

"My wild Irish blackthorn, Don Juan Cafetero."

"I hope, old man, he has ere now that which all brave Irishmen and true deserve—a harp with a crown. In life the Irish have the harp without the crown, you know."

"How did he die?" Webster whispered.

"He died hard, with the holes in front—and he died for you."

Two big tears trickled slowly through Webster's closed lids and rolled across his pale cheek. "Poor, lost, lonesome, misunderstood wreck," he murmured presently, "he was an extremist in all things. He used to sing those wonderfully poetic ballads of his people—I remember one that began: 'Green were the fields where my forefathers dwelt.' I think his heart was in Kerry—so we'll send him there. He's my dead, Ricardo; care for his body, because I'm—going to plant Don Juan with the—shamrocks. They didn't understand him here. He was an exile—so I'm going to send him—home."

"He shall have a military funeral," Ricardo promised.

"From the cathedral," Webster added. "And take a picture of it for his people. He told me about them. I want them to think he amounted to something, after all. And when you get this two-by-four republic of yours going again, Rick, you might have your congress award Don Juan a thousand dollars ore for capturing Sarros. Then we can send the money to his old folks."

"But he didn't capture Sarros," Ricardo protested. "The man escaped when the guards cut their way through."

"He didn't. That was a ruse while he beat it out the gate where you found me. I saw Don Juan knock him cold with the butt of his rifle after I'd brought down his horse."

"Do you think he's there yet?"

"He may be—provided all this didn't happen the day before yesterday. If I wanted him, I'd go down and look for him, Rick."

"I'll go right away, Jack."

"One minute, then. Send a man around to that little back street where they have the wounded—it's a couple of blocks away from here—to tell Mother Jenks and the young lady with her I'll not be back."

"They're both outside now. They must have gone looking for you, because they found you and Don Juan first and then told me about it."

"Who told you?"

"Mother Jenks."

"Oh! Well, run along and get your man."

Ricardo departed on the run, taking the sentry at the door with him and in his haste giving no thought to Mother Jenks and her companion waiting for the doctor's verdict. In the palace grounds he gathered two more men and bade them follow him; leading by twenty yards, he emerged at the gate and paused to look around him.

Some hundred feet down the street from the palace gate Sarros' bay charger lay dead. When Webster's bullet brought the poor beast down, his rider had fallen clear of him, only to fall a victim to the ferocity of Don Juan Cafetero. Later, as Sarros lay stunned and bleeding beside his mount, the stricken animal in its death-struggle had half risen, only to fall again, this time on the extended left leg of his late master; consequently when Sarros recovered consciousness following the thoughtful attentions of his assailant, it was to discover himself a hopeless prisoner. The heavy carcass of his horse pinned his foot and part of his leg to the ground, rendering him as helpless and desperate as a trapped animal.

For several minutes now he had been striving frantically to release himself; with his sound right leg pressed against the animal's backbone he tried to gain sufficient purchase to withdraw his left leg from the carcass.

As Ricardo caught sight of Sarros he instinctively realized that this was his mortal enemy; motioning his men to stand back, he approached the struggling man on tiptoe and thoughtfully possessed himself of the dictator's pistol, which lay in back of him, but not out of reach. Just as he did so, Sarros, apparently convinced of the futility of his efforts to free himself, surrendered to fate and commenced rather pitifully to weep with rage and despair.

Ricardo watched him for a few seconds, for there was just sufficient of the blood of his Castilian ancestors still in his veins to render this sorry spectacle rather an enjoyable one to him. Besides, he was 50 per cent Iberian, a race which can hate quite as thoroughly as it can love, and for a time Ricardo even nourished the thought of still further indulging his thirst for revenge by pretending to aid Sarros in his escape! Presently, however, he put the ungenerous thought from him; seizing the dead horse by the tail, he dragged the carcass off his enemy's leg, and while Sarros sat up, tailor-fashion, and commenced to rub the circulation back into the bruised member, Ricardo seated himself on the rump of the dead horse and appraised his prisoner critically.

Sarros glanced up, remembered his manners and very heartily and gracefully thanked his deliverer.

"It is not a matter for which thanks are due me, Sarros," Ricardo replied coldly. "I am Ricardo Luiz Ruey, and I have come back to Sobrante to pay my father's debt to you. You will remember having forced the obligation upon me in the cemetery some fifteen years ago."

For perhaps ten horrified seconds Sarros stared at Ricardo; then the dark blood in him came to his defense; his tense pose relaxed; the fright and despair left his swarthy countenance as if erased with a moist sponge, leaving him as calmly stoical and indifferent as a cigarstore Indian. He fumbled in his coat pocket for a gold cigarette case, selected a cigarette, lighted it and blew smoke at Ricardo. The jig was up; he knew it; and with admirable nonchalance he declined to lower his presidential dignity by discussing or considering it. He realized it would delight his captor to know he dreaded to face the issue, and it was not a Sarros practice to give aid and comfort to the enemy.

"Spunky devil!" Ricardo reflected, forced to admiration despite himself. Aloud he said: "You know the code of our people, Sarros. An eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth."

Sarros bowed. "I am at your service," he replied carelessly.

"Then at daylight tomorrow morning I shall make settlement." Ricardo beckoned his men to approach. "Take this man and confine him under a double guard in the arsenal," he ordered. "Present my compliments to the officer in charge there and tell him it is my wish that a priest be provided for the prisoner tonight, and that tomorrow morning, at six o'clock, a detail of six men and a sergeant escort this man to the cemetery in the rear of the Catedral de la Cruz. I will meet the detail there and take command of it."

Two of Ricardo's imported fighting men stepped to the prisoner's side, seized him, one by each arm, and lifted him to his feet; supported between them, he limped away to his doom, while his youthful conqueror remained seated on the dead horse, his gaze bent upon the ground, his mind dwelling, not upon his triumph over Sarros but upon the prodigious proportions of the task before him; the rehabilitation of a nation. After a while he rose and strolled over toward the gate, where he paused to note the grim evidences of the final stand of Webster and Don Juan Cafetero before passing through the portal.

COERCIVE MEASURES WON'T WORK

Grand Rapids evidently inimical to Charlevoix, was persistently routing tourists up M-13, when M-11 would have been the better route, that such tactics would eventually react on the perpetrator, whoever he or they might be, and this now seems to have been the case if the above severe arraignment is any indication.

In 1922 and 1923, this city liberally supported the Michigan Tourist and Resort Association and, feeling that it would be well to know just how the money was being spent, asked the association for its financial statement. This was never submitted and, as a consequence, when a representative of the Resort Association appeared in Charlevoix in the spring of 1924 and asked for an appropriation much larger than that of previous years and, incidentally, more than the city felt it could afford to put up, he was offered a considerably lower figure. He met this situation with an appalling lack of tact, refused the amount offered and left the business men of the city antagonized and disillusioned, thereby paving the way for last year's independent advertising campaign which proved so successful that this year there has been no thought of either aiding or calling upon the Tourist Association for assistance. In fact, more results were obtained in the first three weeks of the season last year than in the entire five years previous under the Tourist Association's regime.

As a retaliatory measure, the Michigan Tourist and Resort Association erased the name of Charlevoix from the map contained in their last season's advertising and reduced the reading matter regarding the town to a mere mention. We are again eliminated from their literature this year, which fact is the subject of Mr. Smith's comment in the article quoted above. It should also be noted that this act of spite on the part of the Tourist Association was performed in face of the fact that they had already received from the county board of supervisors their 1924 allotment of $500 and $125 additional in subscriptions of private individuals, residents of this city.

No blame can possibly attach to the Charlevoix board of commerce or the city officials in this matter. After doing their full share for the preceding years, they made a perfectly reasonable request for information regarding the work of the Tourist Association and the latter did not respond as we had a perfect right to expect that they should according to the best business etbics. Even after the attitude of the Tourist Association towards Charlevoix became known, through inspection of the map and the investigations in Grand Rapids relative to the routing of tourists, the Chamber of Commerce wrote to Mr. Gray, inviting him to come to Charlevoix and see if some acceptable basis of amicable cooperation between the city and the Resort Association could not be arrived at. Mr. Gray did visit Charlevoix during the 1924 season, but he stopped at the Inn without making his presence known to the city officials or the Chamber of Commerce and, after a stay of about a week or ten days, slipped quietly away without having interviewed a single soul connected with either organization.

The Courier's stand in this controversy is simply this. We do not desire to see the Michigan Tourist and Resort Association wiped out or ignored. We believe it serves a useful purpose in advertising the western Michigan resort region as a whole to the outside country and, surely, any benefit accruing to the region or any part of it will leave some share of profit with us, as Mr. Smith so ably points out in his article above quoted. But the association must not assume highwayman's tactics. It cannot expect to hold up individual communities for whatever amount it chooses to assess them, holding as a bludgeon over their heads the threat of boycott in the association's literature or other "underground" work to their disadvantage. This is "boomerang" stuff and can only ultimately result in the overthrow of the Resort Association in Michigan, which is something we don't any of us want to see. In this highly competitive resort game, no individual community can afford to rely solely on general regional advertising. It must go out after business itself. This the Michigan Tourist and Resort Association officials should realize and govern their demands accordingly.

The young people's meeting here last Friday night when the young people from Petoskey and East Jordan met with our young people, was a success in every way. So far we find these gatherings very profitable. Our house was well filled on the occasion. Another gathering of this description for Friday evening, May 29, at 7:45, at the Church of God chapel on S. Howard street, Petoskey. Everybody, old or young, are invited to attend this meeting.

Next Sunday's preaching service held as usual at 10:30.

Sunday school, 11:45, lesson taken from Acts, 9:20-31. "Saul Begins His Great Career."

Prayer meeting each Wednesday evening at 7:30.

There will be no evening services in the chapel next Sunday on account of the revival services at East Jordan, which the most of the members of this church are planning to attend. The evening services at East Jordan of this revival are to begin at 7:00 o'clock, standard time.

HUSBANDS ARE GUESTS OF FORTNIGHTLY CLUB

Men Entertained at Home of R. L. Lewis

Thursday evening, May 14th, the ladies of the Fortnightly Bridge Club entertained their husbands at a seven o'clock dinner and an evening of auction bridge.

The event was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Lewis on Park avenue. Tables were arranged in the dining room and large living room for twelve couples, and the guests were directed to their places by selecting hand-painted place cards, representing May baskets.

A delightful and tasty baked ham dinner was served and much enjoyed by all, especially the men.

After dinner, each person kept their respective places and played bridge the balance of the evening. The first prize of a half dozen Patrician plates, was won by Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Cooper.

MURDICK'S PLACE CLOSES ITS DOORS

Candy Kitchen's Proprietor Says Accommodations Inadequate

N. J. Murdick & Son have closed their candy kitchen here and left on Friday of last week for their old stand at Mackinac Island. Mr. Murdick stated that his reason for leaving Charlevoix was that he was unable to secure quarters large enough to accommodate both the manufacturing and selling ends of his business, as the rent required to cook his product makes it impossible to maintain the finished stock in proper condition where the display trays are in the same room with the cooker.

We regret to see this enterprising firm leave the city and still more deeply regret that Charlevoix is not in a better position to house small industries of this nature adequately when they come to us. Perhaps we will be some day. Here's hoping.

The Rebekahs will give a dance at the Belvedere Casino, Thursday evening, May 21. Music furnished by "Blind" Jim's Orchestra of Petoskey. Everybody welcome.—Adv. 20-t1.

MACCABEE ROUND-UP MET AT BOYNE CITY

Thirty-seven Members From Here Attended

The County Association of Maccabee Lodges held its annual get-together meeting in Boyne City, Tuesday of this week. This is the first time that Emmet county lodges have joined in this meet with those of Charlevoix and their union is to be a permanent affair.

About 154 members of the various hives were present at the meeting and some 37 persons journeyed from here to attend. Mrs. Baker of Boyne City presided over the meeting, until the lection of her successor as commander, Mrs. Rolf of Petoskey. One grand lodge officer, Mrs. Torrey, of Port Huron, great finance keeper, was the guest of honor.

There were morning and afternoon sessions, with a fine program in the afternoon. Next year's meeting will be held at Petoskey.

JUSTICE AND PROSECUTOR GO FISHING

It Snowed and They Saw Lots of Things Too

A. L. Fitch and J. R. Cooper returned last week Sunday from John King's farm, three miles west of McMillan in the Upper Peninsula where they had spent n couple of days fishing.

Mr. Cooper says that they caught 60 brook trout all told and brought home 41. Seven of the fish were over 16 inches long. (Now Joe!)

It was very cold and the first day it snowed. But they had a good time and saw lots of big fish that wouldn't bite. They also saw a deer, beavers working in the stream, muskrats and sand hill cranes.

Birthday Party

Isabel Parker entertained a party of little friends last Saturday afternoon at the Parker home on State street, it being the occasion of Isabel's fifth birthday. Those who came and had a good time were Marilyn Smith, Patty Lou Hyres, Margaret Chvatil and Edna Alice Richardson.

SHERIFF'S CAR TURNED TURTLE

Officer Upset While in Pursuit of Speed Demon

Sheriff Novak and his oldest son met with what might easily have proven a fatal accident for both of them, last Friday evening, though neither were seriously injured.

They were driving through Bay Shore on their way home from Petoskey, just before dark, when a car passed them traveling as near the sheriff could estimate at about 55 miles per hour. The sheriff commenced a stern chase which continued with almost unabated speed until out on the Norwood road, near the Neal McAulay place, where the speeding miscreant struck a stone pile along the edge of the road and careened wildly across in front of the sheriff, who had honked his horn to pass. Novak's car, which is a Dodge sedan, struck the other a glancing blow and turned turtle, smashing out all the glass in the windows and catching fire from the engine.

The culprit gave his name as Otis Hill and confessed to a speed of 45 miles per hour traveling through Charlevoix. He was arraigned in justice court before Justice J. R. Cooper Monday morning and fined a dollar for every mile of speed to which he had confessed—$45.00. This did not seem to have much effect, as after he left the courtroom he met Mont Withers driving north, several miles south of here, and went by him like a whirlwind, almost forcing him off the road.

The sheriff's car was a total wreck, but was fully insured. Novak and his son escaped with minor bruises.

HERE AND THERE

After having had an opportunity to look the legislature over, when they went down to visit Henry Ford the other day, we wonder if Wayne county is as anxious for that seven extra members as she thought she was?

We see where Henry Ford has gone into the manufacture of the flivver airplane. Instead of millions of humps one can now get one grand hump in case anything goes wrong with the steering gear.

Still, if he was to huild them collapsihle they'd he mighty handy to take along and fly back home with every time you wanted an extra part for the family 4d.

Most everyhody has had an ancestor who made ths mistaks at one time of trading the land where the city hall now stands for a yoke of oxen.

It is remarkahle how some people will fly into the face of Providence. Rocently the Tennessee legislaturo passed a law against Darwinism, yet we ask anyhody if they ever saw a Tennessee mountaineer?

We have just finished celebrating the 150th anniversary of the ride of Paul Revere. If ths celebrated Revolutionary hero could come hack today and witness the ride the average sheik gives his cutle in the old man's car, we wonder if he would be so sure he'd done such an awful lot for civilization after all?

"TEN YEARS IN "HOME TOWN" NEWSPAPER

U. S. Rubber Co. Celebrates 10th Anniversary

In 1915 there were 2,445,666 automobiles in this country.

It seemed a tremendous number.

Some people were already talking about "the saturation point" being not far ahead.

But if there were some men who couldn't see the woods for the trees, there were others whose faith never faltered.

It took a lot of vision for them to see that the true market for the automobile had hardly been touched.

It took a lot of courage for them to bank on the ultimate success of the automobile in that market.

They had both.

Back in 1915, the United States Rubber Company said, "The real future of the automobile is not in the big cities but away from them."

It is not in short runs on city streets, but in mile after mile on country roads.

So back in 1915 the United States Rubber Company began to prepare for this movement—and to help it.

In 1915—ten years ago—the first U. S. Tire advertising began to appear in the "home town" papers.

Few people saw these papers in their true dimension.

Few realized the influence they had on what the people thought and did and wore and bought. Because few people realized the place they filled in the minds and lives of the readers.

The United States Rubber Company saw.

As clearly as it saw that the development of the automobile would be in the smaller communities, it saw that the people in these communities would have to have tires to measure up to the service and tire merchants to sell them.

And it saw that in the "home town" newspapers it had, ready to hand, the medium to help it put tire merchandising where it would have to be in the new era of the automobile.

So ten years ago people began to read the first U. S. Tire advertising in their "home town" paper—over the name of their "home town" dealer.

They have been reading it ever since.

They have seen these home dealers develop their little "side line of tires" into real business—always with the support of "U. S." advertising in these local papers.

Co-incident with the tenth anniversary of "home town" advertising by the United States Rubber Company, this company announces another long step forward in the perfection of automobile tires—the greatest since the introduction of the cord itself—in its perfected Latex treated—Web Cord Royal Balloon tire with the flat low pressure tread.

Today there are 16,000,000 automobiles in this country.

80% of them are owned by men and women on the farms and in the smaller communities.

Where there was one U. S. tire dealer in the small towns then there are hundreds today—real merchants.

What was only a vision in 1915 has come true in 1925.

DAIRY NOTES

Dairy cows do especially well on sweet clover pasture.

Raising good calves properly is one way to build up a good dairy.

A well-developed heifer may be bred younger than one that has not done well. A few months in waiting to give the heifer time to grow is usually well paid for when she freshens.

The external condition of the cow is a most important factor in the production of clean milk, and dirt on the outside of the animal's body is one of the greatest sources of milk contamination.

CHICAGO'S DISPOSAL PLANTS NOW BUILDING

Great Public Benefit Has Accrued from Diverting Sewage from Lake Michigan

That part of the recommendations of the Engineering Board of Review of the sanitary district of Chicago on the lake-level controversy which has to do with the contingent problem of sewage disposal is of particular interest to Charlevoix readers, as sewage disposal is a matter which will shortly come up for our consideration here.

The population within the sanitary district is now 3,300,000, the sewage from which, together with that of the stockyards, packing houses and other large industrial plants, is equivalent to that from a population of 4,800,000. At the minimum rate of dilution prescribed by the Illinois state law the flow required through the main drainage canal at Lockport would be 11,000 cu. ft. per second for the actual population and 16,000 for the equivalent population. From the state of Indiana, the sewage and industrial wastes from a rapidly increasing population, numbering at present about 170,000 people, reach the drainage canal from the Calumet river drainage area.

Sewage disposal by dilution continues to be good practice within the limitations of available volume of water. In recent years practicable artificial methods of sewage treatment have been developed, which are capable of purifying, to a high degree, large volumes of sewage. At present a number of treatment plants have already been built or are under construction by the sanitary district of Chicago, which, when completed in the next two or three years, will treat the sewage of more than 1,000,000 people. No other city in the United States is treating the sewage of so large a population.

This sewage treatment program, in conjunction with works now built or under construction, supplements dilution, is sound, and should produce satisfactory conditions in the Des Plaines-Illinois river. Sewage treatment would be facilitated by a reduction of Chicago's present excessive water consumption.

Should the volume of lake water be limited to 4,167 cu. ft. per second, extensive deposits of sewage solids would be formed in the main drainage canal, there would be frequent reversals of flow of the Chicago river and consequent pollution of the lake water and lake front and intolerably offensive conditions would be created in the Chicago river and its branches and along the Des Plaines-Illinois river.

The extensive and growing use of the lake front of Chicago by bathers has directly resulted from the diversion of sewage from the lake, and is of great benefit to the public.

Monday, May 25, is the date when J. Leahy, the Optometrist, will be at the Hotel Charlevoix, one day only. Adv. 19-t2.

PARK PLAN MUST COVER WIDENING

park up the side streets." That doesn't help matters at all—merely changes the location of the nuisance. The side streets are narrow and, as a matter of fact, we haven't any side streets—at least not in the sense of a street devoid of traffic. One of our side streets (Antrim) is a main trunk state highway and the other three are heavily used throughout the summer months. Furthermore, how many owners of private residences are going to stand for a line of strange cars strung along in front of their homes; perhaps across their very driveways? No, you can't come to a solution of the problem this way.

All that is left, then is to widen the main street and let them park there or to provide a parking space apart from any street. One or both of these methods of handling the situation might be incorporated in a plan for a water-front park, but no park plan should be even considered that does not contemplate widening Bridge street. That must be done in any case. Even without the parked cars, the street is too narrow.

One more point before we close—Bridge street is now a part of M-11, a trunk line highway in charge of the state. This means that we can look to the state in time to give us a wider bridge over the channel on this highway, which won't do us much good unless the street is wide enough to match it. And, conversely—if we widen the street, we will probably get the wider bridge all the sooner.

WARNS SAILORS ON MILWAUKEE HARBOR

Construction Work Makes Entrance Dangerous

The U. S. navy branch hydrographic office at Chicago has issued the following warning to navigators:

Lake Michigan: Milwaukee harbor: The work of constructing the Milwaukee south breakwater will be commenced immediately by the contractor. Stone will be deposited upon which will be placed concrete caissons. A row of pile clusters and range piles will be placed alongside and at the southerly end of the proposed breakwater. The pile clusters will be approximately 85 feet apart—the range piles 450 feet apart. The northerly cluster will be marked by a fixed white lantern light—the southerly group of range piles by a fixed red lantern light at night. Light visible approximately 2 miles. The stone fill will be a dangerous menace with from 14 to 18 feet depth of water over same.

Caution: Mariners entering Milwaukee harbor are cautioned to use extreme care. They should keep south of and close to the Milwaukee breakwater construction gas buoy 2 until inside of same when the piers may be opened up or use Milwaukee Pierhead ranges until close to the piers.

Green Bay: Green Island southeast shoal buoy 2, and Monument shoal buoy 1, placed.

PROMINENT PETOSKEY FARMER DEAD

W. L. Preston Stricken by Heart Disease Sunday

William L. Preston, prominent farmer of Bear Creek township, Emmet county, died very suddenly last Sunday evening, between seven and eight o'clock, following an illness of long duration.

Mr. Preston, who was sixty-four years old, was well known in Masonic circles and, as the father-in-law of Mrs. Earl Preston, formerly Miss Lillian Emrey of this city, had quite a few friends in Charlevoix.

The funeral is to be held this afternoon at 2:00 o'clock in Petoskey. Charles Carey of this city will act as a pall bearer and his family, as well as those of Charles Emrey and Leo Carey will attend the funeral. Mrs. R. A. Emrey, who has been spending the past two weeks in Lowell, Mass., has been advised of Mr. Preston's death by wire and will be in Petoskey with her husband today to attend the last rites, which will be conducted by the Petoskey commondery of the Knights Templar, to which Mr. Preston belonged.

The wife of the deceased died some three or four years ago. Besides his son, Earl, who is a prosperous farmer of the Petoskey countryside, he is survived by three brothers and two sisters and a granddaughter.

Mr. Preston's death came as a severe shock to the members of his family who were with him at the time, as he was stricken without warning as he left the supper table Sunday evening and fell to the floor lifeless.

"INTENDED WIFE" LOSES INSURANCE

Charlevoix Man Indorsed Policy to Nurse Before He Died

A Grand Rapids news item says Ada B. Frost, a Detroit nurse, to whom Henry Wood, of Charlevoix, attempted to indorse over a $1,000 insurance policy as his "intended wife," cannot receive the insurance under an opinion just written by Circuit Judge M. L. Dunham of that city, who held that the money should be paid Mary Wood Clarke, Wood's sister and sole heir.

Although Miss Frost, whom he met in Charlevoix in the summer of 1923, nursed him during an illness in Detroit the following winter and accompanied him to Charlevoix, where she nursed him, Wood's indorsement is invalid, the court held. The insurance policy was obtained in 1901 before Wood and his wife were divorced. He made her the beneficiary at that time and had planned, it is said, to marry Miss Frost when he became well.

MEGGISONS ENTERTAINED WITH "500"

GIVE HIM STEEL-HEAD FOR SPORT

SO SAYS DONALD C. OSBORN OF KALAMAZOO

In Letter to Grand Rapids Herald He Extols Wooderful Fishing on Pine Lake

Donald C. Osborn, prominent Kalamazoo attorney and Charlevoix Belvedere resorter, has mailed us a page from the Grand Rapids Herald of Sunday, May 17, 1925, which contains an article on steel-head fishing in Pine Lake, with the request that the same be published in the Courier.

The article consists of a letter written to "Max Sandy," outdoor sports editor of the Herald and, as it gives Pine Lake fishing quite a "puff" and is written by an expert of long standing in the gentle art of the famous Isaak, we are glad to reproduce it. The letter reads as follows:

"Dear Max Saudy — Michigan probably has more fishing fanatics to the square inch than any other state in the union, and it has always been a source of surprise to me that so very few have appreciated or know anything about one of the best fishing bets that the waters of the state affords. I am speaking of the so-called steelhead fishing in the waters of Pine lake and Charlevoix harbor. I am thoroughly convinced that the so-called Pine lake steelhead which, by the way, occurs in some few other waters in northern Michigan, is in reality a salmon. His bright silver body, green back flecked with black spots, short head, and enormous tail-spread is unlike the rainbow, and unlike the Pacific coast or true steelhead.

I have taken these fish at Charlevoix for nearly 25 years; in fact, took the first one of any record, in trolling for Great Northern pike in Pine lake. At that time no one could identify the fish, and it was presumed to be a freak of some kind. This fish dressed over eight pounds and came out of the water seven times for me. Naturally, I was a bit excited. I have taken several hundred since then and have never struck but two out of that number that did not put up a magnificent, spectacular fight.

Came from Pacific

These fish were planted in the waters of the Great Lakes really by accident. After the World's Fair in Chicago, the fish in the fisheries' exhibit, which included a great many specimens of the fresh water salmon, from the fry to the adult fish, were turned into the waters of Chicago harbor. About the same time, a sportsmen's club which owned one of the Rangeley lakes in Maine, bought a great many thousand landlocked salmon fry and steelhead fry on the Pacific coast. Shortly before reaching the Soo, the man in charge of the tank cars containing these fish, notified his employers that the fry were dying in great numbers and he would not be able to get them through to their proposed destination. These men, being true aportsmen, wired him to release them in the first available waters that would be adapted to them. They were turned into the Soo river. It is from these two plantings that the millions of, so-called steelhead have developed.

There are many methods of fishing for them. During late May, June, and early July they are taken as a rule, with a small spinner, a Skinner No. 3, June Bug, or small Pearl Spinner to which is attached a single or tandem hook baited with a herring minnow. This is fished, as a rule, fairly close to the surface, from a motor boat checked down to very slow speed, or from a row boat. Almost any standard bass rig will do, but one should have 75 to 100 yards of line on the reel. My choice of line is the smaller sized black Invincible silk. There are other times when they may be taken by letting your boat drift, letting out 75 to 100 feet of line with double leader No. 4 Sproat hook, and floating your minnow on the surface. For this kind of fishing, a six-ounce fly rod or any steel bait rod is the best equipment; and if you are at all fortunate, you will get more action by this method of fishing than you thought possible. Ninety per cent of the fish will come out of water immediately they feel the hook. In these jumps they will clear three to six feet and shake like a bull dog. Last fall I took a particularly handsome fish about six and one-half pounds that gave me eleven jumps, and with light tackle kept me busy for nearly 20 minutes.

June Good Month

June, September and October are the months that yield the most fish.

IT IS NEARING GRADUATION DAY

SENIOR AND NORMAL CLASSES TOTAL FORTY-FIVE

Horace Z. Wilbur, Professor of Education at Ypsi Will Be the Principal Speaker

Another year has rolled around—C. H. S. is once more about to open her doors for the graduating classes of 1925, whose members will stand for the first time upon the threshold of that life for which they have been preparing so assiduously during four or five, long, happy and memorable years.

The first of the closing events in that chapter about to be finished for some forty-five of our young people, if we include the normal graduates, is the baccalaureate sermon, which will be delivered by the Rev. Herman Burns at the Baptist church in this city on Sunday evening, May 31st. Then come the class day exercises at the Methodist church on June 3rd and finally the commencement, to be held at the Palace Theatre at 8:00 p. m. on Thursday, June 4th. Horace Z. Wilbur, professor of education at Michigan State Normal, Ypsilanti, has been secured for the speaker of the evening. The valedictorian is Lawrence W. Straw and the valetudinarian, Miss Verna Block. The motto of the senior class is "Well Begun is Half Done;" the class colors, blue and gold and the class flower, the bachelor button (we trust the choice of this particular flower has no significance as regards the intentions of the class members of either sex).

The following is a roster of the two classes: Senior class: Lawrence W. Straw, Murray J. Glasgow, Harold S. Jones, Louis W. Bourissau, Scott B. Supinger, Charles P. Dagwell, Leon E. Solomon, Harold C. Ikens, Leonard W. Burns, Doan R. Ogden, Charles E. Bellinger, Milford A. Saunders and Harold T. Hallett; Verna C. Block, Vera Halverson, Ina D. Geneit, Ada Lois Yettaw, Wilma Eugenia Fairchild, Carmen Elizabeth Higman, Doris Mae Hammond, Anna R. Jones, Alice Simlnow, Cordelia M. Kelderhouse, Lottie O. Webster, Edith E. Chew, Dora R. Chew, Mildred Farmer and Ruth I. Stroud. Normal class: Airel Burr Cooper, Clive Poquette, Wayne B. Miles; Ruth L. Garber, Eileen L. Fairchild, Lora Adele Cole, Thelma A. Crandall, Erma Clare Carey, Vera J. Belding, Musa N. Richardson, Violet N. McCafferty, Verna C. Block, Margaret H. Krulik, Ina A. Hutton, Lucille Henning, Helen M. Germond, Meda M. Byers, Florence C. LAKE WATER IS NOT NOW WASTED

CANAL FLOW USED TO DEVELOP POWER IN ILLINOIS

No Economic Loss Suffered Through Use of Water Diverted from Lake Michigan

This week we take up the water power phase of the Chicago drainage canal-lake level problem.

The water diverted from Lake Michigan, formerly wasted through the control works at the outlet of the main drainage canal at Lockport, is now utilized to develop hydro-electric power and the surplus power not required for the works of the sanitary district is sold to the city of Chicago and cities in the district for municipal lighting and pumping and to industries. When the sewage treatment works now building and planned are completed, this entire power development will be insufficient to meet the operating requirements of the sanitary district.

Full utilization of the water in the main drainage canal and the Des Plaines-Illinois river for the development of power is desirable. With the completion of the Illinois Waterway, power can be produced at its navigation dams for low installation costs.

By reason of the demand for power and its higher market value, a cubic foot of lake water is now worth as much for power production in Illinois as at Niagara, even were the full available head between Lakes Erie and Ontario utilized. There is no present economic loss to the country at large by using lake water for power in Illinois instead of at Niagara.

Furthermore, under present treaty restrictions, the water diverted at Chicago does not now and will not prevent the development of all the water power which it is possible to develop at Niagara by diversions now allowed by treaty.

On the upper Illinois River the natural low water flow is approximately 500 cu. ft. per second. Any additional water diverted by the drainage canal from Lake Michigan would meet a future demand for condensing water in steam power plants located near the coal mines of the Illinois valley, and would thereby facilitate the production of power by such plants.

The water diverted from Lake Michigan reduces the flow of the Niagara and St. Lawrence rivers about five per cent and thereby the power that may ultimately be developed on these rivers; but at present at Niagara Falls, under treaty restrictions, only about one quarter of the flow of the river is available for power and not quite two thirds of the power possible from such permissable water is at present produced.

Works of simple character, proposed by the U. S. army engineers, can be built which would more evenly distribute the water passing over Niagara Falls. With this proposal the Engineering Board of Review of the sanitary district, from whose report on the lake lowering controversy the data used in this article and those preceding it has been

ALL SET FOR MEMORIAL DAY

PARADE WILL START AT NINE O'CLOCK SHARP

Following the Morning Exercises at the Cemetery, the Legion Team Will Play C. H. S.

Memorial Day falls this year on Saturday, which gives us two holidays in succession. This probably means that the roads leading out of town will be jammed with cars on Friday evening and then, again, maybe they won't be. It depends largely on the weather which has been acting kinda pernickety lately. Anyhow, we are all hoping that it will be at least fair on Saturday morning for the sake of those who will march to the cemetery.

Members of the American Legion, G. A. R., Spanish War veterans and the Woman's Relief Corps, headed by the Charlevoix band, will assemble on Bridge street at 9:00 a. m. The line of march will be down Bridge street to Antrim, up Antrim to State and up State to the cemetery. Floats will be provided for the G. A. R., Relief Corps and band. The parade will start not later than 9:30 p. m.

At the cemetery, the opening prayer will be made by the Rev. William Eldridge of the Church of God. The band will play and following the music the members of the Legion will conduct their usual ceremonies. Then will follow a song by Frank Poole and Charles Hamlin, immediately preceding the exercises of the Relief Corps. Then all will sing, "America" and Stanley Hammond will give a recitation. After the recitation, the Rev. Dr. Bernard G. Mattson of the Congregational church will deliver a fifteen minute speech. Another band selection will follow and Georgia Kelderhouse will recite. Singing of the "Star Spangled Banner" will precede the closing prayer to be made by the Rev. H. R. E. Quant of the Methodist church.

In the afternoon at 2:30 o'clock will occur the great baseball game between the Legionaires and the C. H. S. team. A charge for admission will be made, the proceeds going one half to the band and one half to the Orphans' Billet, a branch of the Legion's relief work.

It is hoped that as many as can possibly do so will be present at the ceremonies in the morning and at the game in the afternoon. A fine program has been arranged and the efforts that have been made along this line should receive the heartiest public support.

WILL A PARK ON ROUND LAKE PAY

PROMINENT CHICAGO RESORTER SAYS YES, IT WILL

His Assertion Seems to be Borne Out by Consideration of Its Obvious Effects

This week's letter on the Round Lake water-front park plan is written by Homer D. Jones, president of the Western Fuel Company of Chicago. Mr. Jones, who has been coming to Charlevoix with his family for several years, bought a cottage on the Belvedere resort last year and is now a permanent member of the colony. His letter follows:

"To the members of the Shakespeare and Dickens Clubs:—

Replying to your letter of February 11th.

The widening of Bridge street and removal of the buildings on the east side of the street, and making a city park extending from Bridge street to Round lake would be a decided improvement, and each year would no doubt prove to be a good investment for Charlevoix, in addition to adding much to the attractiveness, which of course would mean much toward increasing the summer activities at Charlevoix.

The improvements contemplated would also be beneficial to all who live there through the year. Both the laboring men and business men would benefit by the new buildings, and more summer homes that would naturally follow the added attractiveness of Charlevoix.

With the cooperation of all concerned, I think Charlevoix can be made the largest and best spot in northern Michigan as a high-class summer resort town.

The increasing popularity of M-11 by auto tourists—making the trip around Lake Michigan—should be capitalized by making Charlevoix a good place to linger in, instead of a good place to get out of. How's this for a slogan,

A good place to linger in,
A hard place to leave.

Wishing you success in your new undertaking, I am,

Yours truly,
Homer D. Jones.

P. S.—It would also be a great improvement to remove the old ramshackle buildings between Belvedere avenue and Round Lake."

It will be noted that in the second paragraph of his letter Mr. Jones says the park would be a "good investment for Charlevoix" and that in the third paragraph he states in substance that the permanent residents of the town might expect to benefit from the improvement that would go hand in hand with the creation of a park.

No one, we think, who will give these statements on honest, unprejudiced consideration will doubt their truth. This very point, however, is perhaps a stumbling block to a good many people who live here the year around and who, even more than our resort friends, would like to see Charlevoix progress, having invested their money here in homes or a business. They can't quite get the connection between civic improvements of the kind in question and the individual pay envelope. That such a connection exists, however, can very easily be demonstrated.

Let us suppose, now, that we have adopted a comprehensive plan for a park to take in the entire east side of Bridge street to the Round lake shore line and have started the work of developing each separate piece of property as fast as it is acquired by the city. First of all comes labor. Of course, only home labor would be employed, possibly under the personal direction of a landscape engineer, skilled in the handling of such matters as a city park improvement. A good deal of the work would be done in the spring and fall of the year, when the workers of the town were not engaged in the service of our summer visitors and this would shorten the period that it is necessary for them to spend in the large cities during the winter, as is the custom with so many of our people, paying high rentals and suffering the discomforts of a winter away from home in a strange community.

WHO AM I—THE TRAIL I LEAVE WILL IDENTIFY ME

I have scattered bread crusts, tin cans, Sunday supplements and paper plates from Sand Dunes at Michigan City to Porcupine Mountains on Lake Superior.

I have hacked forest and grove trees and left camp fires burning from the Indiana line to the Canadian border.

I have hooked grapes from a Benton Harbor vineyard, peaches from Shelby orchards, sweet cherries from Traverse City and apples from Charlevoix apple farms.

I have thrown rocks into the sapphire depths of Pine lake and thrown tin cans into Burt and Crooked lakes.

I have seen all, heard all, and in my weak way have managed to destroy much.

I am the careless and thoughtless American tourist.

AT THE MOVIES

Keith's Royal Theatre was turned over to Eastern Productions for shooting the back stage scenes in "Trouping with Ellen," Helene Chadwick's latest starring vehicle which comes to the Palace Theatre on Tuesday and Wednesday next. T. Hayes Hunter, the director, believes in real atmosphere when it comes to getting theatrical effects in the pictures and he obtained a theatre where just such chorus girls as the one played by Miss Chadwick appear. Added atmosphere was given by the employment of thirty chorus girls appearing in current New York revues. Half a dozen of them were from the Zeigfeld Follies.

"Feet of Clay," the latest production for Paramount by the man who made "The Ten Commandments," will be shown for the first time in Charlevoix at the Palace Theatre next Saturday and Sunday. The story is one of New York and California and features Rod La Rocque, Vern Reynolds, Victor Varconi, Ricardo Cortez, Julia Faye, Theodore Kosloff and Robert Edeson in the principal roles. It is an adaptation by Beulah Marie Dix and Bertram Millhauser of the sensationally successful magazine story of that name by Margaretta Tuttle.

WILL A PARK ON ROUND LAKE PAY

Then, hand in hand with this would go the building of new quarters for the business displaced by the taking over of portions of the park site. Once a demand is created for store space, the property now lying vacant in the business district or occupied by tumbledown frame "taxpayers" would be quickly developed and this would give employment to the various branches of skilled labor who are now forced to seek work out of town at the close of the resort season and remain away until it opens again in the summer.

Again, as to property values. It is a fact too well known to call for demonstration that a park within the limits of a city always enhances the value of residence and business property both in its immediate vicinity and for some considerable distance away from it. And this works two ways. There is the natural increase in value due to the presence of the park and then there is the incentive it gives the adjacent property holder to bring his land and buildings up to the mark to match the rest of the neighborhood., which in turn increases the value of his property.

The effect that the park will have on the resort and tourist business itself has already been touched upon. Some indications of the way our summer people look at the proposition can be gathered from the letters they have written and that have appeared in our columns for the past few weeks. And there are more to come. The writers may be taken as fairly representative of their class and if they feel the way they do about it, we need have no fear but that it will be appreciated by the majority of their fellows who have not as yet expressed themselves nor have as yet visited Charlevoix.

When our present stock of auto tires are sold out the price will be advanced. Buy all you need now. Benj. Brown.—Adv. 21-tf.

LAKE WATER IS NOT NOW WASTED

taken, concurs. Such works would save the falls from the self-destruction now in progress, would preserve and restore their scenic beauty and, at the same time, would render possible the use of more water for power production.

The regulating works for increasing and regulating lake levels can be used also for equalizing lake discharges, thereby increasing their present minimum outflows. This would largely increase the prime or continuous power which could ultimately be developed in the Niagara and St. Lawrence rivers, but such further power development at Niagara would necessitate a modification of the present treaty.

There are no treaty restrictions as to the use of the St. Lawrence water for power, but less than ten per cent of the available power is utilized. There will be no economic loss of power on either the St. Lawrence or Ningara river by reason of the diversions of water from Lake Michigan until 95 per cent of the available power at each location has been developed.

Ricardo had now, for the first time, an opportunity to look around him; so he halted to realize his home-coming, to thrill with this, the first real view of the home of his boyhood. The spacious lawn surrounding the palace had been plowed and scarred with bursting shrapnel from the field guns captured in the arsenal, although the building itself had been little damaged, not having sustained a direct hit because of Ricardo's stringent orders not to use artillery on the palace unless absolutely necessary to smoke Sarros out. Scattered over the grounds Ricardo counted some twenty-odd government soldiers, all wearing that pathetically flat, crumpled appearance which seems inseparable from the bodies of men killed in action. The first shrapnel had probably commenced to drop in the grounds just as a portion of the palace garrison had been marching out to join the troops fighting at the cantonment barracks. Evidently the men had scattered like quail, only to be killed as they ran.

From this grim scene Ricardo raised his eyes to the palace, the castellated towers of which, looming through the tufted palms, were reflecting the setting sun. Over the balustrade of one of the upper balconies the limp body of a Sarros sharpshooter, picked off from the street, drooped grotesquely, his arms hanging downward as if in ironical welcome to the son of Ruey the Beloved. The sight induced in Ricardo a sense of profound sadness; his Irish imagination awoke; to him that mute figure seemed to call upon him for pity, for kindness, for forbearance, for understanding and sympathy. Those outflung arms of the martyred peon symbolized to Ricardo Ruey the spirit of liberty, shackled and helpless, calling upon him for deliverance; they brought to his alert mind a clearer realization of the duty that was his than he had ever had before. He had a great task to perform, a task inaugurated by his father, and which Ricardo could not hope to finish in his lifetime. He must solve the agrarian problem; he must develop the rich natural resources of his country; he must provide free, compulsory education and evolve from the ignorance of the peon an intelligence that would build up that which Sobrante, in common with her sister republics, so wickedly lacked—the great middle class that stands always as a buffer between the aggression and selfishness of the upper class and the helplessness and childishness of the lower.

Ricardo bowed his head. "Help me, O Lord," he prayed. "Thou hast given me in Thy wisdom a man's task. Help me that I may not prove unworthy."

• • • • • • • • •

Mother Jenks, grown impatient at the lack of news concerning Webster, left Dolores to her grief in the room across the hall and sought the open air, for of late she had been experiencing with recurring frequency a slight feeling of suffocation. She sat down on the broad granite steps, helped herself to a much-needed "bracer" from her brandy flask and was gazing pensively at the scene around her when Ricardo came up the stairs.

"'Ello!" Mother Jenks saluted him. "We're 'ave you been, Mr. Bowers?"

"I have just returned from capturing Sarros, Mrs. Jenks. He is on his way to the arsenal under guard."

"Gor' strike me pink!" the old lady cried. "'Ave I lived to see this day!" Her face was wreathed in a happy smile. "I wonder 'ow the beggar feels to 'ave the shoe on the other foot, eh—the 'eartless 'ound; I'm 'opin' this General Ruey will 'ave the blighter shot."

"You need have no worry on that score, Mrs. Jenks. I'm General Ruey. Andrew Bowers was just my summer name, as it were."

"Angels guard me! Wot the blomin' 'ell surprise won't we 'ave next. Wot branch o' the Ruey tribe do you belong to? Are you a nephew o' him that was president before Sarros shot 'im? Antonio Ruey, who was 'arf brother to the president, 'ad a son 'e called Ricardo. Are you 'im, might I arsk?"

"I am the son of Ricardo the Beloved," he answered proudly.

"Not the lad as was away at school when 'is father was hexecuted?"

"I am that same lad, Mrs. Jenks. And who are you? You seem to know a deal of my family history."

"I," the old publican replied with equal pride, "am Mrs. Col. 'Enery Jenks, wha was your futher's chief of hartillery an' 'ad the hextreme honor a' dyin' in front of the same wall with 'im. By the w'y, 'ow's Mr. Webster?" she added, suddenly remembering the subject closest to her heart just then.

"His wounds are irifling. He'll live, Mrs. Jenks."

"Well, that's better than gettin' poked in the eye with a sharp stick," the old dame decided philosophically. "Do you remember my little sister, Mrs. Jenks?" Ricardo continued. "She was in the palace when Sarros attacked it; she perished there."

"I Am General Ruey."

"I believe I 'ave got a slight recollection o' the nipper, sir," Mother Jenks answered cautiously. To herself she said: "I s'y, 'Enriettn, 'ere'a a pretty go. 'E don't know the lumb is livin' an' in the next room! My word, wot a riot w'en 'e meets 'er!"

"I will see you again, Mrs. Jenks. I must have a long talk with you," Ricardo told her, and passed on into the palace; whereupon Mother Jenks once more fervently implored the Almighty to strike her pink, and the iron restraint of a long, hard, exciting day being relaxed at last, the good soul bowed her gray head in her arms and wept, moving her body from side to side the while and demanding, of no one in particular, a single legitimate reason why she, a blooming old baggage and not fit to live, should be the recipient of such manifold blessings as this day had brought forth.

In the meantime Ricardo, with his hand on the knob of the door leading to the room where Webster was having his wounds dressed, paused suddenly, his attention caught by the sound of a sob, long-drawn and inexpressibly pathetic. He listened and made up his mind that a woman in the room across the entrance hall was bewailing the death of a loved one who answered to the name of Caliph and John, darling. Further eavesdropping convinced him that Caliph, John, darling, and Mr. John Stuart Webster were one and the same person, and so he tilted his head on one side like a cock robin and considered:

"By jingo, that's most interesting," he decided. "The wounded hero has a sweetheart or a wife—and an American, too. She must be a recent acquisition, because all the time we were together on the steamer coming down here he never spoke of either, despite the fact that we got friendly enough for such confidences. Something funny about this. I'd better sound the old boy before I start passing out words of comfort to that unhappy female."

He passed on into the room. John Stuart Webster had, by this time, been washed and bandaged, and one of the Sarros servants (for the ex-dictator's retinue still occupied the palace) had, at Dr. Pacheco's command, prepared a guest chamber upstairs and furnished a night gown of ample proportions to cover Mr. Webster's bebandaged but otherwise naked person. A stretcher had just arrived, and the wounded man was about to be carried upstairs. The late financial backer of the revolution was looking very pale and dispirited; for once in his life his whimsical, bantering nature was subdued. His eyes were closed, and he did not open them when Ricardo entered.

"Well, I have Sarros," the latter declared.

Webster paid not the slightest attention to this announcement. Ricardo bent over him. "Jack, old boy," he queried, "do you know a person of feminine persuasion who calls you Caliph?"

John Stuart Webster's eyes and mouth flew wide open. "What the devil!" he tried to roar. "You haven't been speaking to her, have you? If you have, I'll never forgive you, because you've spoiled my little surprise party."

"No, I haven't been speaking to her, but she's in the next room crying fit to break her heart because she thinks you've been killed."

"You scoundrel! Aren't you human? Go tell her it's only a couple of punctures, not a blowout." He sighed. "Isn't it sweet of her to weep over an old hunks like me?" he added softly. "Bless her tender heart!"

"Who is she?" Ricardo was very curious.

"That's none of your business. You wait and I'll tell you. She's the guest ner, and that's enough for you to know for the present. Veye, you idiot, and bring her in here, so I can assure her my head is bloody but unbowed. Doctor, throw that rug over my shanks and make me look pretty. I'm going to receive company."

His glance, bent steadily on the door, had in it some of the alert, bright watchfulness frequently to be observed in the eyes of a terrier standing expectantly before a rat hole. The instant the door opened and Dolores' tear-stained face appeared, he called to her with the old-time camaraderie, for he had erased from his mind, for the nonce, the memory of the tragedy of poor Don Juan Cafetero and was concerned solely with the task of banishing the tears from those brown eyes and bringing the joy of life back to that sweet face.

"Hello, Seeress," he called weakly. "Little Johnny's been fighting again, and the bad boys gave him an all-fired walloping."

There was a swift rustle of skirts, and she was bending over him, her hot little palms clasping eagerly his pale, rough cheeks. "Oh, my dear, my dear!" she whispered, and then her voice choked with the happy tears and she was sobbing on his wounded shoulder. Ricardo stooped to draw her away, but John Stuart bent upon him a look of such frightfulness that he drew back abashed. After all, the past 24 hours had been quite exciting, and Ricardo reflected that John's inamorata was tired and frightened and probably hadn't eaten anything all day long, so there was ample excuse for her hysteria.

"Come, come, buck up," Webster soothed her, and helped himself to a long whiff of her fragrant hair. "Old man Webster had one leg in the grave, but they've pulled it out again."

Still she sobbed.

"Now, listen to me, lady," he commanded with mock severity. "You just stop that. You're wasting your sympathy; and while, of course, I enjoy your sympathy a heap, just pause to reflect on the result if those salt tears should happen to drop into one of my numerous wounds."

"I'm so sorry for you, Caliph," she murmured brokenly. "You poor, harmless boy! I don't see how any one could be so fiendish as to hurt you when you were so distinctly a non-combatant."

"Thank you. Let us forget The Hague conference for the present, however. Have you met your brother?" he whispered.

"No, Caliph."

"Ricardo."

"Yes, Jack."

"Come here, Rick, you scheming, unscrupulous, blood-thirsty adventurer, I have a tremendous surprise in store for you. The sweetest girl in the world—and she's right here——"

Ricardo laughingly held up his hand. "Jack, my friend," he interrupted, "you're too weak to make a speech. Don't do it. Besides, you do not have to." He turned and bowed gracefully to Dolores. "I can see for myself she's the sweetest girl in the world, and that she's right here." He held out his hand to her. "Jack thinks he's going to spring a surprise," he continued maliciously, "quite forgetting that a good soldier never permits himself to be taken by surprise. I know all about his little secret, because I heard you mourning for him when you thought he was dead." Ricardo favored her with a knowing wink. "I am delighted to meet the future Mrs. Webster. I quite understand why you fell in love with him, because, you see, I love him myself and so does everybody else."

With typical Castilian courtliness he took her hand, bowed low over it, and kissed it. "I am Ricardo Luis Ruey," he said, anxious to spare his friend the task of further exhausting conversation. "And you are——"

"You're a consummate jackass!" groaned Webster. "I'm only a dear old family friend, and Dolores is going to marry Billy Geery. You impetuous idiot! She's your own sister, Dolores Ruey. She, Mark Twain, and I have ample cause for common complaint against the world because the reports of our death have been grossly exaggerated. She didn't perish when your father's administration crumbled. Miss Ruey, this is your brother, Ricardo. Kiss her you damn' fool—forgive me, Miss Ruey—oh, Lord, nothing matters any more. He's gummed everything up and ruined my party. I wish I were dead."

MEMORIAL DAY

Another Memorial Day approaches and with it will be revived the sense of gratitude we owe the heroic defenders of this nation, who in every crisis have been willing to offer themselves upon the altar of liberty. Every surviving member of that titantic conflict between the states has now passed the allotted three score years and ten and it will be with feeble nnd tottering steps tbat they hear the bugle call and fall once more into marching line. It is a sight we will not witness many more times, so while they are still with us let us turn reverently aside and assist in paying them the honor, love and fidelity tbat is theirs. This year let us take the burden of observing Memorial Day from their shoulder and as true children of the Republic kneel to kiss the hem of their garments for the glory that they wrote eternal in the stars.

BUSINESS MEN IN POLITICS

As long as we continue to needlessly and unjustly criticise men in public office we cannot hope to attract to public service men of sufficient caliber and acumen to conduct the nation's business on a plane that will bring the greatest good to the greatest number. Unfnir criticism and heckling of public officials should be made just as taboo in this country as muckraking has become. Every good business man hestitates to enter public life, knowing that his personal and private affairs will be held up to merciless ridicule and scorn, nor cnn we blame him. Public service means personal sacrifice. There are many men today who are giving their best efforts to the government, who are sacrificing their income, their leisure and drawing heavily on themselves both physically and mentally. We have often advised business men to go into political life. We urge again the desirability of such action. They should become leaders not only in business but in the political life of the country. But they should realize first of all that in entering politics they will be met with criticism and ingratitude from n few, but gradually this will pass away and they will be given the praise nnd gratitude they are deserving. We must, ourselves, first learn the lesson that we cannot hope to have business men in office unless we are willing to treat them as we do in our business relations with them.

BUSINESS PROSPECTS

Following a survey made of ten thousand of the leading industrial institutions of the country, the statement is made that business prospects for the summer are healthier and on a more stable basis than they have been since the close of the war. The survey, which covered practically every industry, revealed that production is at a healthy glow, wages are on the gain, with gradually reducing prices. Price variations are less severe than a year ago and the country is entering a period of purchasing, not of boom proportions, but of that steady persistence that gives basis for unusual confidence.

FRESHENING BREEZES

Have we the assurance of Mr. Ford that if he gets those 400 ships he won't start off to Europe on another peace mission?

Wonder if in a hundred and fifty years from now they will be celebrating the ride of Mr. Dawes?

Our idea of a hick town is where the dominie still persists in wearing a frock coat.

In Memoriam

In loving memory of our dear little Gladys, who passed away five years ago, May 27, 1921, age 16:

A precious one from us has gone,
A voice we loved is stilled;
A place is vacant in our home,
Which never can be filled.

Dearest Gladys, how we loved you,
No one but we can tell;
But God who loved you better,
Has taken you home to dwell.

MEMORIAL SERVICE AN IMPRESSIVE ONE

Patriotic Organizations Join In Divine Worship

Members of the G. A. R., Spanish War Veterans, American Legion and Woman's Relief Corps attended divine service in a body nt the Baptist church lnst Sunday morning and listened to a strong sermon by the Rev. Herman Burns, pastor, who took as his theme what we might best remember of the incidents and lessons of past wars and closed with an earnest plea for preparedness, citing the sage counsels of the late President Theodore Roosevelt, along these lines.

Though the Rev. Dr. Mattson of the Congregational church had a special service of his own that prevented his taking part in the memorial service at the Baptist church, he nevertheless found time to run over for a few minutes, leaving a part of his service in charge of one of his deacons, and brought a fine, inspiring and beautifully expressed message to the veterans and their auxiliary body of faithful women.

The musical part of the program was conducted by an excellent choir of mixed voices and included two delightfully rendered solos by Mrs. Ula Wakeman and Miss Erma Carey.
